This is the first time the women of Peterborough have been asked as a whole to make a united war effort, and now is the time to show what the women of Peterborough can do.

Since everyone shall be called upon time after time for similar appeals, a silver donation is being asked so that all "Marys" may feel they can do their share. Women by the name of other than Mary will be asked for their contribution as a tribute to Dowager Queen Mary.

It is indeed worthwhile if, in this way, we can help to protect the lives of those women in England who are doing so much for "victory" for themslyes, and for us.

FASHIONS

It isn't spring without a suit and this year its tailored jackets and slightly flaring skirts. Nothing could be smarter than this well cut style with its trim lapels and gored skirt. Make it with a contrasting jacket or all of one material and you'll wear it for many months. An extra skirt is also a wise investment for mixing and matching with sweaters, jackets and blouses. The jacket of your new suit is also handy to slip on over your daytime frocks on cool days. Make your suit now and be ready for the first spring days.

Style No. 3004 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 1¾ yards of 54-inch fabric for jacket; 1⅞ yards for skirt.

Chinese Art Address Is Accompanied By Exhibit

Tracing Chinese design from its very beginning, Mr. R. C. Allison of Toronto, sinologist, and consultant along this line for the British and other museums, gave an address full of interest and enlightening facts at Friday's meeting of the Women's Art Association. Standing before a background of priceless Chinese exhibits which dated back hundreds of years, and rich in the color and design created by a people who know how to convey a story of a thousand words in a single illustration, Mr. Allison wove a history of the romance of Chinese art that was as fascinating as the Far East itself.

"The subject of the romance of Chinese design takes in, not only the origin of design, but its reason for being, and encompasses in doing so practically all the known branches of Chinese art," Mr. Allison said. "It requires a knowledge of the people themselves, as well as of their history, their religion and their philosophy. Chinese art is as old, or older, than any others reaching the commercial fields today, and the Western world, especially in the past 100 years, has become extremely conscious of its wonders."

Chinese writing is actually an adaptation of the pictographs that are the earliest signs of the written language. Because so many people were unable to read, the Chinese artist took these ancient designs and incorporated them into his repertoire, giving them a much more significant meaning. Thus, when he weaves his designs, he is weaving a language that is much easier understood by the country as a whole.

Classifying some of the designs, which are as great in number as the words of the English language, Mr. Allison used as one example the bat, predominant in Chinese symbolism, which means "Flying Mouse," and has lost its identity in the animal kingdom, becoming a symbol of happiness. The peach is a symbol of long life, and the two are used together as an illustration of happiness and long life.

"One salient point to remember in the study of Chinese art is that practically everything used as a decorative article has a meaning," explained Mr. Allison. "The Chinese pick out a word that means a story and build the stories together to make a whole volume."

The display of illustrative designs included a coronation robe, worked with gold and floss silk, worn by the Emperor Yung Ching at the "Temple of Heaven" ceremony in 1723, and valued at $5,000. Only the "5 sacred colors" were used in the dragon head design and guardian lions; a Tibetan lama painting, A.D. 979, an excellent specimen of hand-painting over 900 years of age; a group of carved jade plaques, bracelets and friendship rings; an eggshell procelain vase made in 1736 and an example of the highest perfection reached in porcelain; a black vase with the plum motif of beauty, virtue and friendship as well as many other precious museum pieces.

Mrs. C. S. Thompson, president of the club, introduced the speaker, and announced the evening studio program of April , featuring an address on "Making Literature Live" by Mrs. F. Adrian Brook, whose visit last year was one of the season's highlights. Through the generous offer of Mrs. Brook, a meeting is to be held by the Art Association on the following Saturday afternoon in the Y.W.C.A. Green Room, and proceeds from the twenty-five cent admission fee will be turned over to the British War Victims' Fund. At this meeting Mrs. Brooks will present the well-known reading, "White Cliffs." The annual meeting of the Association is to be held on April 25, at which suggestions and helpful criticism from Art Club members will be welcomed.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 22 — (EN.S.).—A triumph of the first order was scored by the I.O.D.E. sponsored fashion show held in the High School when a capacity audience from this and neighboring towns enthusiastically greeted a preview of spring styles from the Edith Denike Dress Shoppe. It was the first time in the history of this town that an undertaking of this magnitude has ever been attempted and the Regent Mrs. G. A. Ironside and members of the Bemmersyde and Trent Valley Chapters which collaborated in the affair had every reason to be satisfied with its success.

There was plenty of color and several new fabrics were shown in the collection which included coats, suits, companion suits, afternoon and evening dresses and lingerie. Predominant was the military trend in dress and coat trimming while slimness was emphasized in the dress-with-jacket. Of particular interest to the fur-minded were several luxuriant dyed fox capes showing the skilful use of satin on the inside sleeve.

Members of both the Senior and Junior Chapters were models of the evening and they did their part, showing most effectively and advantageously the various numbers to a soft musical accompaniment by Miss Dorothy Henson. Mrs. A. J. Armour was the very efficient commentator.

Each model entered the appropriately decorated stage and walked down a ramp which ran a quarter the length of the auditorium and was flooded with light. As a prelude Miss Monica DeCarrol sang the "Easter Parade," which was the theme carried throughout. Public School pupils also assisted in the program by repeating their pageant "Canada On Parade," which was presented at the High School so successfully two weeks ago. Climax of the fashion show was the white satin bridal gown cut on princess lines modelled by Mrs. Jack Cowell. She was preceded by eight little flower girls in pink and yellow who spread a path of rose petals, while Mrs. E. A. Stuart modelled a beautiful horizon blue sheer chiffon with full skirt which fell from an exquisitely embroidered girdle. The flower girls were Misses Marilyn Hopping, Barbara Loucks, June Ames, Lois Ferrill, Patsy Redden, Rozane Ingram, Carol McArthur, Joan McInroy.

Models were Mrs. E. A. Stuart, Miss Kae Bygott, Miss Margaret Robertson, Miss Helen Partridge, Mrs. W. A. Hogle, Miss Clara Lucy, Miss Grace Irwin, Mrs. W. A. Kingston, Miss Jean Free, Mrs. F. S. Linton, Miss Jean Hendy, Miss Marie Crosson, Mrs. H. J. Taylor, Miss Marion Rowe, Miss Helen Wood, Miss Marjorie Mills, Mrs. F. N. Brown, Mrs. Jack Cowell, Miss Patricia Ironside, Mrs. S. A. Anderson, Miss Winnifred Hay.

At the conclusion Mrs. G. A. Ironside extended her thanks to all who had contributed to the success of the affair from which it was revealed proceeds would amount to over forty dollars. She also announced Mrs. Neil Loucks as winner of the draw on a quilt raffled by the Chapter.

DOROTHY DIX

PERSONAL APPEARANCE MUST BE CONSIDERED BY WIVES
Husbands Do Not Want To Look at Frowsy Women When They Come Home From Hard Day's Work

Dear Miss Dix—I am happily married woman with two adorable babies. My only trouble is that my husband nags at me constantly about not systematizing my work and because I do not have time to dress up for him. When I try to tell him that I work hard all day he doesn't sympathize with me. He says that I would not have to work so hard if I displayed any efficiency. What more can a husband expect from a wife than a clean house, well-cooked meals, the children taken care of? Isn't that enough without expecting a wife to be dolled up?—JANICE.

ANSWER—No, I don't think it is, Janice. A man has a right to expect his wife to keep herself looking neat and attractive and to be easy on his eyes. If she isn't, all the balance of her good work goes for naught. For an untidy home is less repulsive than a slovenly woman, and a man has little relish for a good dinner if the lady across the table from him is a frowsy drudge. In your particular case, Janice, it is a condition and not a theory that confronts you. It is not a question of what your husband has a right to expect of you, but what he DOES expect of you, and of what will happen to you if you don't live up to his demands. Evidently he is a man who has an eye for a pretty, well-dressed woman. He notices what you have on, how you look and how you do your hair. He is giving you a chance to be the sort of woman he fancies. If you dress yourself up to him and keep on your complexion and a fluffy-ruffle frock, you will keep him. If you don't, if you permit yourself to degenerate into a messy, mussy slavey, you will lose him. He will seek the society of some woman who looks like a Daily Hint from Paris.

Guard Your Appearance

So my advice to you is to put in a little less time on your house and more on your personal appearance. Polish up your furniture less and your fingernails more. You will find that it will pay you better in the end.

Of course, a woman who does her own housework and has two small children to take care of has a full day's work, and then some. But even so, any ordinary, intelligent and healthy woman should be able to turn out her stint, and still have time to spare to powder her nose and slip into a dress that will make her husband sit up and take notice when he returns home of an evening.

If she doesn't, if she justifies the poet's assertion that woman's work is never done, it is because she is a bad manager. She doesn't use her brains to save her heels. She doesn't plan her work nor systematize it, and the thing for her to do is to get some efficiency expert to show her where her mistakes lie and teach her how to correct them.

Ask For Suggestions

I know women who are very scornful about taking any advice from their husbands, and always say that a man doesn't know anything about housekeeping or woman's work, and so they turn up their noses at a man's suggestions and refuse to follow them. That's where they make a mistake, because the same labor-saving and time-saving methods that will work in a store or a factory work equally well in a home.

Therefore, Janice, get your husband to make a survey of your home and show you where you are wasting your time and energy. Let him point out to you where you are duplicating effort and doing unnecessary labor. Get him to make you a schedule for your day's work.

And, my word for it, you will find that you will have plenty of time, not only to doll yourself up, but to read and go places, and do a thousand things you would like to do, but that you don't do now because you haven't the leisure.

Consider Children Before Divorce.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a woman 37 years old and have four lovely children, the oldest a girl of 13. My husband has been unfaithful to me for a great many years. He is also a steady drinker and is sometimes away on a spree for days at a time. He is a hard worker when he is not drinking, very generous and kind, and really, in spite of the way he does, devoted to his family.

Now the question is: Shall I leave my husband? I am not considering myself, but my children. What is best for them?? Should they be brought up in this atmosphere? If I take them away from their father, we will be very poor. I am not strong enough to do any kind of work, nor do I know any way by which I can earn a dollar. Would my children reproach me if I separated them from their father of whom they are fond and who can give them the things they want, while I could give them nothing?

Do you think it will be better for all concerned for me to stick it out until the children are grown up?—MRS. A.

ANSWER—I think that if you divorce your husband you will be

BACKACHE

You, it's a fact! It's a fact that poorly made shoes, incorrectly fitted, may throw the body off balance—may throw the internal organs out of alignment—causing backache! And remember, backache is only one of the many ailments that incorrect shoes can create. Don't invite flat feet, pronation, corns, bunions, hammer toes and other foot ills. . . . Huns Discover R.A.F. Raids Can't BeStopped

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 22—(AP).—The worst rain of fire and death from the skies London has endured this year synchronized with House of Representatives passage in Washington of the $7,000,000,000 bill to finance all-out United States aid for Britain.

That might be coincidence, but more likely it was not. It appeared to be a Berlin move to brace German morale against the news from Washington, or against recent British bombing raids on Berlin and other German cities.

The Germans hint that the raids on Britain are designed to "soften" the British people up for some sort of decisive militar yaction. These hints are in the same category as claims in Berlin and Rome that the first shipload of United States armaments to start for Britain since passage of the British aid bill has been sunk.

The persons circulating these claims undoubtedly hope that, whether or not they prove to have any foundation, they will serve the immediate purpose of bucking the Germans up.

Whatever the reason for the intensive Nazi bombardment of London, it was out of line with the air strategy the Nazis have pursued recently in the Battle of the Atlantic. They have been concentrating their attacks on Liverpool, Glasgow, Hull and other port cities which are more vital to Britain.

Claim Docks Target

Berlin claimed docks were the principal targets in the most recent London attack, and that great damage was inflicted. Even so, blasting the Port of London docks, already battered hundreds of times, could not add greatly to the prime British problem of keeping transoceanic shipping moving to and from Britain.

London's docks have not been used as a deep sea shipping terminal on any extensive scale since France fell. They are too perilously close to Nazi air bases across the Channel for that; the sea routes to the Thames are too vulnerable to Nazi U-boats based on the southwestern coast of France.

British coastal convoys still use even the Strait of Dover, within twenty miles of Nazi big guns and bases in France. Coastal shipping also must continue to ply the Thames to London. It is highly doubtful, however, that shipping in the narrow English Channel or on the Thames carries much British war gear traffic now.

Yet the Nazis must have some good reason for shifting to renewed hammering of London rather than keeping up the attacks on far more important shipping centres. Bolstering home morale might be the primary objective. If that is true, it tends to prove one thing encouraging to Britain even amid the ruins and death left by the attack on London.

Lie Given to Hitler

That is that British bombing in Germany is having some effect on the German public. For the first time in this war, German citizenry is feeling the weight of British air power in a sustained way. That must convince thoughtful Germans that months of Nazi bombardment of Great Britain has failed to prevent a huge expansion of British air power.

It cannot be a pleasant thought to German citizens. It must be all the more unpleasant backed by whatever knowledge the German public has of the American aid program. Successful execution of that program means ultimate British air superiority and German skies flooded with British bombers.

Hitler has pledged that American aid will not reach Britain time time. The evidence of British bombs falling increasingly about their ears must tend to convince many Germans that aid from somewhere is already getting to Britain in quantity.

Jack Thirnbeck Wins 200 Yards

The Peterborough junior swimming club under the direction of Coach Gord Minty held another in a series of handicap swims in the 'Y' pool last evening.

The event was a 200 yards free style swim and was won handily by Jack Thirnbeck. Thirnbeck also won last week's swim and is thus far the only swimmer to win two handicaps in a row. Second place was taken by Andrew Brown, who was closely followed by Bill Coones.

The handicap was followed by cross pool dives, practice twins, and several one length sprints.

Complete results of the event are as follows:

1st Heat—1 G. Pinch, 2 B. Coones, 3 (tie) Chapham and J. Shields.

2nd Heat— 1 J. Thirnbeck, 2 G. Wallace, 3 G Scriver.

jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, and you will be carrying your children with you. Heaven knows, having a husband addicted to wine, women and song is hard enough to stand, but it is not so bad as having to endure your children's reproaches for having dragged them down into poverty, and deprived them of all the advantages their their father would have given them.

Don't think that your children will sympathize with you if you leave your husband and pity you and look upon you as a martyr. They love their father and they love the good things he can give them, and they will blame you for not having put up with poor Papa's weaknesses.

I have seen that happen dozens of times in cases like yours. The children were bitterly critical of Mother not having been a good enough sport to laugh off Father's philandernig or drinking for their sakes; for, of course, Father always gets married when Mother leaves him and when there is a second family to support, the first family fares badly.

There are many places in life where we have to compromise with our ideals and choose the lesser of the two evils. Certainly the atmosphere of a home in which the parents have ceased to love each other and in which the husband is a rounder is not the best environment in which children are reared.

But it is fortunately true that a good mother can offset the influence of an indifferent father, and it is also true that the mother, not the father, strikes the keynote of the home. Nor need you be afraid that they will follow in his footsteps. Our parents are quite as often a warning as an example to us.

Quilty Is Named Foremost Rookie Of Year

TORONTO, March 22—The storybook rise to stardom of Johnny Quilty—one of those favored with the fabled luck of the Irish—took on a further fictional tinge today as the young centre star of Montreal Canadiens was named the outstanding rookie of the National Hockey League season.

Hockey writers around the N.H.L. circuit, balloting in the annual poll conducted by The Canadien Press, chose Quilty as top freshman by a narrow margin over Goalie Johnny Mowers of Detroit Red Wings. No other first-year man came close to these two in the voting.

Fifteen of the thirty writers who were asked to name their first, second and third choices, named Quilty as the No. 1 rookie while fourteen picked him for second place, leaving only one writer who failed to consider him at all. Mowers received fourteen first-place votes, eleven seconds and three thirds.

On the three-two-one basis on which points were allotted, Quilty polled 73 points while Mowers had 67. Next in line came Elmer Lach, another of the numerous rookies whom ade the grade this season with Canadiens, with 18 points.

High School to Big Time

The most amazing part of Quilty's success is that he stepped out of high school ranks in Ottawa into competition with the top-flight stars of the game, and held his own. Many a high-grade senior amateur or college star has stumbled in the past in making the jump into the N.H.L.

Fortune smiled on Quilty in that he started off slowly and hit his peak around the time that the men who do the voting begin to scan the field to make their choices. A modicum of attention was paid his work in the early season, mut later, when goal after goal began to roll off his stick, he attracted notice like an orange tie on St. Patrick Day.

Quilty, described by his coach—Dick Irvin—as a "real black Irishman," is the youngest player to take the Calder Trophy, presented annually by League President Frank Calder to the outstanding rookie. Son of Silver Quilty, famed old-time Ottawa football player, he celebrated his twentieth birthday last January.

He fired eighteen goals and gained sixteen assists during the regular schedule, brilliant record of a rookie.

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

By RUTH AYERS

YESTERDAY: Kent confesses that the girl he fell in love with was April, not Ann. But April cannot betray her sister. She tells Kent that she felt sorry for him, that the whole affair was a lark. He takes her home, leaves, hating her.

HAL GETS HIS ANSWER

CHAPTER XXIII

Ann was alone in the downstairs hall at the telephone when April returned.

"Oh, thank you very much," Ann was saying. "Your congratulations mean a great deal. Yes I, have the message. I'll promise to let you know."

April went on upstairs. Congratulations to the bride! Ann sounded thrilled, elated.

And suddenly April realized what she was more at peace with herself than she had been since the first night she had seen the blinded Kent.

Even when Kent had been ready to jeopardize Ann's future, she had been the one who had saved it. All that was important now was that no one should ever guess the secret, guess the sacrifice she had made.

The Burnetts had planned a small dance that night for Ann's friends in honor of the coming marriage. Dad, looking handsome in tuxedo, had a few minutes to talk with April before going downstairs to receive the guests.

"You made a fine witness today, Daffy girl," he said.

"And you're the best lawyer I ever had," she tossed back.

"It was Kent and that rookie who brought the hearing to a quick end. Winkie Appleman is a trouble-maker and trouble-makers can be pretty dangerous."

"You don't think he'd dare do any scandal-monging around town?"

Dad thought not. "At any rate, not for awhile. He's being held for vagrancy and will probably end up by spending a few weeks on the county farm."

April was before the mirror, smoothing in flame lipstick, spraying a mist of spicy perfume into her hair. She'd chosen her most dashing dress for tonight, coral colored velvet with a neck that came high against her throat in front to leave her back a gleaming expanse of opal skin.

"You look mighty sweet," Dad said.

But she knew she didn't. The dress belonged to another part of her life; it set oddly with her white face and frightened eyes.

"I'm celebrating my escape from jail," she said.

"All set for tomorrow?" Dad seemed to be worried about something, anxious to talk to his oldest girl.

"All set?" April answered. "I'm glad Ann dismissed the idea of having a bridesmaid. It would have struck me as funny to have been standing beside the bridegroom in court one day and beside the bride, the next."

Dad looked at her, a question way back in his eyes. But he walked out without saying anything.

Downstairs, a white-coated cousin of Octavia's was preparing the punch; clearing the floors; arranging the seats for guests. Three of the boys from the band at Casa Blanca were coming over to furnish the music.

The first person April saw when she went downstairs was Ann.

Ann was the beauty tonight, the shining one of the two sisters. Her dress was of creamy lace, so designed that the neck and shoulders gave a heart-shaped effect. Out of this she emerged ethereal, radiant.

"Ann, our first bride," Mother murmured and it was as if those words expressed Ann's triumph at last from the role of the "plain sister" to that of the glamorous one.

The pianist ran experimental fingers over the keyboard and the accordion player grinned and saluted with the wedding march.

April avoided Kent, danced with young friends and old ones of the family and then, at last, with Hal Parks who hadn't taken his eyes from her all evening.

It was Hal who managed to dance her away to a corner in the hallway. Here, an excellent idea of the florist's had resulted in a small corner, blocked with a fern screen which shut out sight of the guests dancing in the living room and sunporch.

"I think maybe you've danced long enough for your first night out," Hal said.

"Yes, I'm not up to my usual form."

"I was in court today. You came through with what they call flying colors."

"Well, the army saved the day."

"Yes," Hal said with a quick glance, "the army did."

April leaned back against Hal's arm. After awhile, he looked down at her. "Remember what I said about waiting for you?"

"Yes, Hal."

"Well, I'm still around."

April learned right then that just as two wrongs didn't make a right, nor could a second love take the place of a first.

She had told Kent she was going to marry Hal Parks some day. But she knew now she could never marry him. An empty heart wasn't enough for a person like Hal.

She faced him. "Hal, I never liked any person as sincerely as I do you. I've tried to learn to care for you but that's not love, I wish it were."

Words choked her. She couldn't say anything else. Hal patted her shoulder. He understood as he always did. "If it will make it any easier for you, I've guessed it all along," he said. "I stopped hoping—oh, a long time ago. I think it was the last time we danced together at Casa Blanca."

He tilted her face, brushed his lips lightly across her cheek. Then he stood up. "April, honey, love is slow blooming with some people, but not with you. Love with you is like lightning. It strikes once and

Closeups At The Capital

Doings In Ottawa By The Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Mar. 22— (CP).—Let's listen in on the House of Commons while Donald McNevin, young Liberal from Regina City, carries the torch for Saskatchewan sailor boys. Here's the story he tells of two of them:

Donald Snelgrove and Ronald Young of Regina—with 21 other Saskatchewan men — were aboard the Canadian destroyer Fraser when she sank in collision off Bordeaux last June....They swam for an hour and 10 minutes before being rescued.

Taken to England they were stationed on a boat which had to be moved because the jetty was bombed....A little later a bomb fell to the right of the ship, one to the left....On leave in London they were on the third floor of a seven-storey hotel....A bomb came through to the fourth floor.

They spent that day helping air raid wardens and rescue workers.. ..During the afternoon a thermite bomb fell on the street close enough to burn one of their coats.

They they boarded the Margaree ....A few months ago that destroyer sank in mid-Atlantic after a collision and they were the only Saskatchewan survivors....They went back to Regina on leave, a tire blew out, their car turned over three times, but again they escaped injury.

"Their only reaction to these experiences was that if there was anything in that old story about the cat they still had two lives coming," said Mr. McNiven.

At The Speaker's Luncheon

Democracy in high place: When the Earl of Athlone was invited to a luncheon by Speaker Glen he asked that it be held in the wide open spaces of the main parliamentary dining room instead of a private salon, and that only private members of the House and newspapermen—no cabinet ministers—be invited—that's how it was.

Odds and Ends

Defence Minister Ralston never used a monocle, but has heavy horn-rimmed glasses to use as a baton in emphasizing his important remarks ....That rather spoils a little yarn by Columnist Leonard Bright in a Johannesburg, South Africa, paper ....He said Col. Ralston discarded the monocle on his recent trip to Britain so he could "see things for himself" over there...."The habits of a lifetime have to go to the wall when Canada contibutes her utmost effective strength (to the war effort)," wrote Mr. Bright...."With them went Col. Ralston's monocle."

Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School senior cage team met the acid test last night in Bowmanville and came through triumphantly to win the right to enter the finals for the Cossa championship.

Held to a tie on their own floor a week ago the Peterborough team had to take the round the hard way by winning right in Bowmanville on the strength of a first half offensive that swept the Bowmanville students off their feet. Coach Bamforth's team emerged victorious by 35 to 24 and thus won the round by 59 to 48.

The win was a shock to the Bowmanville team. After obtaining a tie here they thought that the battle was about over. The P.C.V.S. five however opened at top speed last night, breaking fast handling ball smartly and shooting accurately and the result was that at the half they were in front 22 to 10.

Bill Hall looped in three field baskets and converted two foul throws in that first half onslaught and Jim Ferguson, from guard position, hit the hoop for three baskets from the field. Taylor, Gillespie and Moore all had a hand in that attack that saw the Peterborough kids run up 22 points before the half. Bowmanville rallied after the rest and outscored the Peterborough team, 14 to 13 in the last half but they never came close to threatening the big lead the P.C.V.S. team had set up early in the game. The winners lost the services of Bill Hall on four personal fouls and Richardson who went in scored five points for them in the second session.

Brown and Siemen, each with eight points were the outstanding players for the Bowmanville team. Gillespie, Hall and Ferguson each scored eight points for the Peterborough Collegiate.

Bowmanville High (24)—Tamblyn 2, Casborne 2, Brown 8, Siemen 8, Wheeler 2, Clark, Mitchell 2, E. McIlveen, G. McIlveen, Allin, Underhill.

Peterborough C.V.S. (35)—Taylor 2, Gillespie 8, Hall 8, Moore 4, Ferguson 8, Kay, Amys, Richardson 5, Saunders.

Referee—Harry McBrien, Bowmanville.

Placed Ladder Himself

A. O. Duncan, foreman electrician, gave identification evidence. He said Dent was installing conduit on a wall and was using an extension ladder 30 feet long. Dent had placed the ladder himself. There was snow and ice on the ground inside the building.

Mr. Duncan said that he thought the cause of the accident was the melting of ice underneath the bottom of the ladder, causing it to slip.

The ladder had spikes on the bottom Duncan said in answer to an inquiry from Foreman Campbell.

H. J. Cook, sprinkler foreman, eye witness of the accident, told of seeing Dent fall.

"I noticed the ladder starting to slip," said Cook. "Dent was coming down and was 9 or 10 feet from the ground. The ladder seemed to slip from the girder. He had been up and down the ladder a dozen times that afternoon."

"Dent stayed with the ladder, falling with it. I didn't see him hit the ground because of a pile of bricks that obstructed the view," said the witness.

Cook said the softened snow at the base of the ladder was likely the cause of the accident. Dent, he said, had fallen into a four-foot ditch and witness thought the man was dead when he got there.

Cook said that he himself had had a similar fall with a ladder on the C.G.E. job owing to the base slipping on the snow.

Dr. R. K. Magee said that the cause of Dent's death was laceration of the brain and fracture of the skull.

When he saw Dent at Nicholls Hospital soon after the accident he said there was evidence of very heavy pressure on the brain and the man was bleeding from the left ear. Dent died within a couple of hours after being admitted into the hospital.

Dave Devlin, employee of H. J. Cook on the sprinkler job and another eye witness, said he saw the ladder slip off the girder after sliding five or six feet.

He said that Dent was crouched down into the ditch when he got there and he thought that the man had struck his head on the side of the trench.

F. B. Abrey, clerk of work on the C.G.E. project, said that he had investigated the accident the following morning. He said the ladder had spikes at the bottom and was in good condition. The ground where the ladder had been standing was covered with snow and ice and he though that one leg of the ladder had sunk in deeper into the snow.

"Would you call it a safe place to put a ladder," asked Mr. McElderry.

Witness replied that the conditions were typical of the construction work in winter weather. That was why ladders were supplied with spikes.

When he'd gone, April still sat in the fern-shielded corner. Nip, bewildered and not a little unhappy at the whole uprooting of the house, nosed her out.

April leaned to pat him. "Ever hear those words—'bury the dead'?" Her head began to slump. "Well, that's me, Nip. I've buried it all today."

Kent had said, "You don't know what tears are."

"Maybe I don't," she thought, and felt her hand wet with them.

C.N. Would Shut Port Hope, Millbrook Line

PORT HOPE, Ont., March 22 — (CP)—The Canadian National Railway has applied to the board of transport commissioners for permission to abandon the Port Hope-Millbrook section of the Lakefield subdivision, a distance of 16.24 miles. An early date for the hearing has been requested.

The line was opened for operation in 1857.

Built under the charter of the Peterborough and Port Hope Railway Company which was incorporated under the statutory authority of the Province of Canada in 1846, the name was changed to the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company in 1854 and became the Midland Railway Company of Canada in 1882. In 1884 it was leased to the Grand Trunk Railway Company and in 1893 became amalgamated with that company. In 1923 Grand Trunk Railway Company amalgamated with the Canadian National Railways.

Application was made to the board in 1935 for permission to abandon the operation of the Lakefield subdivision between Port Hope and Peterborough but it was refused.

Only Freight Service

The present application proposed to discontinue the passenger train service including express and mail between Peterborough and Port Hope and freight service between Millbrook and Port Hope. Fraserville, and Millbrook would continue to be served by freight service.

Campbellcroft is the only station shipping or receiving carload freight which would be affected by the discontinuance of freight service.

At the present time passenger trains No. 92 and 95 between Toronto and Port Hope via Peterborough and freight switching service between Peterborough and Port Hope constitutes the traffic.

Under the proposed change, trains Nos. 92 and 95 would continue to run between Toronto and Peterborough, except Sundays. There would also be a freight service between Millbrook and Peterborough.

In 1940, revenue totalled $20,964 and expenses, out of pocket only were $35,750 entailing a loss of $14,786. In the previous three years the loss was $16,500 annually.

China plans to build more railways.

Longs To Fight As They Fought In 1914-18 War

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, March 22 (CP)—Alec Brown looks as though he can take care of himself. Stocky, tough and wiry, he admits he likes "this war business," and doesn't mind how soon the Germans try to invade Great Britain. "Maybe," he said, "I'll get a chance to do some fighting, and there's nothing I'd like better than to get a crack at a Hun."

Brown, who comes from Winnipeg, is a leading aircraftsman in a Royal Canadian Air Force Army Co-Operation squadron. He was an infantryman in the last war, thinks he made a mistake this time joining the air force and claims that being a rigger-mechanic is a "hell of a life for a man of action."

"Yes, I've been around," LAC. Brown said as he took an hour off from work to act as guide for a reporter visiting his squadron.

"I was a bit young for service when the last war started but came over to this side and talked my way into the Highland Lighty Infantry. I went to Palestine in February, 1915, and stayed there until 1919."

Down Middle East Way

Brown fought at the Dardanelles —"there was some real fighting there"—and was in Jerusalem when Allenby marched in at the head of the victorious British forces. Brown, transferred before the war ended to the Royal Engineers Signal Corps, likes to tell of his stay in Jerusalem.

"I used to get into a lot of trouble," he said. One form of trouble was 14 days "CB" for pushing over Moslems as they knelt at prayer. "I was young then," he said with a grin, "and tried it once too often."

He was in Jerusalem when the Armistice was signed—"it was pouring rain that day"—and remained in the Middle East until he got his release from the Army.

After the war he returned to Canada and did placer mining in northern British Columbia. There was a long succession of jobs after that and a brief period of service with the R.C.A.F. He was doing hard-rock mining several hundred miles north of Winnipeg when this war began and re-enlisted right away in the R.C.A.F.

YEARNS FOR ACTION

"I'm rather sorry now I did," he said, "because I like this war business and there's not much chance for fighting when you're a rigger. I guess I'm an infantryman at heart and I sure would like to be with the boys in Libya. They're really getting some fighting."

Brown expects there'll be action for everyone if the Germans try an invasion and he's looking forward to that day.

"Let them come," he said. "I like excitement, and if they try to land here there shouldl be plenty of that."

ed at nine months and should learn to use a spoon and cup early.

To conserve your baby's energy, long hours of sleep and rest are necessary. The very young baby should sleep from eighteen to twenty-two hours daily and should have the longest unbroken sleep at night. At six months he should sleep twelve hours without interruption. Our habits of sleep are learned during the first year. Bed should be a comfortable, satisfying place, a place to rest and enjoy, never a place of punishment.

It used to be taught that training in toilet habits should begin as early as the second or third month. The psychologists tell us that it is probably better to defer this until toward the end of the first year. Do not give laxatives unless ordered by the doctor, as they are often harmful and unnecessary.

Adult habits of bathing, cleanliness, care of the teeth, are learned in the very earliest years.

All the fresh air and sunshine possible should be had for good health and growth. In the summer the baby can be put out of doors when only a few days old. During the cold weather some infants may be put out of doors when a few weeks old. The general condition of the baby and your doctor's opinion will influence this. No child should be put out of doors when the weather is stormy, when it is dusty or very cold. Direct sunlight is the best preventive of rickets. Exposure of the hands and face for a short time to direct sunlight may be taken on pleasant days as early as March. Increase the time of exposure gradually until he is getting a sun bath one hour in the middle of the afternoon by the middle of summer. Be careful not to allow him to sunburn. In the summer a very few minutes is a sufficient length of time for the first exposure.

Exercise is the baby's play and work. This develops his body and his mind and he should exercise every day for health and growth. The baby who is not comfortable is likely to be cross. When he cries he does not always need to be fed or picked up. He may be wet, too warm or too cold; he may want to be turned—babies get tired of one position. It does not hurt him to cry as crying is one form of exercise, but picking him up and walking with him develops a bad habit.

The baby is born without habits and acquires only those his elders teach him or permit him to acquire. Habits make us the kind of people we are, whether we are acceptable or otherwise to our fellow-men. In the present state of our civilization we all must comply with certain accepted standards and the younger these are learned the easier it is for us to take our places in the large family group of the world as a whole and to become useful citizens.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, March 23.

Sunday's horoscope is a rather doubtful one for progress and prosperity, holding omens of delays, irritations, disappointments and not particularly enjoyable health conditions. It might be a time for working along lines of least resistance, guarding the health, the funds and domestic harmony.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of fluctuating fortunes, with more difficulties and doubts than definitely productive results. Routine activities, philosophic life, with care for the health and conservation of finances are also enjoined. Be wise also as to legal entanglements.

A child born on this day should be serious, philosophical and shrewd although easily imposed upon and subject to legal complications or doubtful intrigues.

For Monday, March 24.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather routine state of affairs, with little stirring out of the ordinary. Yet there may be surprising developments brewing which may have a disruptive influence on the life, particularly operating on love affairs. Romance, thrills, upheaval are possible, but not such as will be constructive and gratifying, because of deep-seated treacheries.

Those whose birthday it is may have a rather uneventful year as to business, but their emotional, romantic, social or domestic life may suffer disruption, peculiar or erratic conditions, with thrill and adventure attended by duplicity or betrayal.

A child born on this day should have original talents and faculties, with many unusual facets to its character.

Fear of Public Speaking Can Soon Be Conquered

Her Poise Won By Home Study

"My, isn't she brave!" thinks the timid soul when an experienced speaker shows no fear.

But the experienced public speakers smile at this "bravery" idea. In order to be sure of yourself, they say, you have only to learn to be sure of little details. And those you can practise at home.

One is your enunciation. It bolsters you up, somehow, to know you SOUND well. You could try saying clearly, "To-o-be-e . . . or . . . not to be-e. THAT is the ques-tion."

And see how expressive your voice can be within its normal range. Repeat naturally, conversationally, to your mirror: "I just washed my hair and I can't do a thing with it!" Emphasize a different word each time.

Then when you get up to speak, make believe you're a great speaker! If you mean what you say, if you've prepared thoroughly, how can you miss? Not by forgetting, surely, for you'll have notes to remind you.

Just stand up there, relaxed, nothing in your hands to distract you—and give! Our 32-page booklet tells how you can practise to develop an easy, charming speech technique. Tells how to prepare a speech, gives sample speeches, also rules of parliamentary procedure.

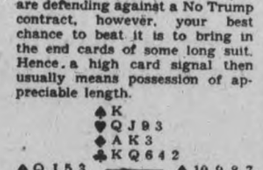
Send 10c in coins or stamps for your copy of PUBLIC SPEAKING SELF - TAUGHT to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHAT SIGNALS MEAN

HIGH CARD signals by your partner have one kind of meaning during the play of suit contracts and another during No Trumpers. Since you don't expect many rounds of any one suit against a declarer who has named the trump, the high signals usually betoken either possession of high cards or ability to ruff. When you are defending against a No Trump contract, however, your best chance to beat it is to bring in the end cards of some long suit. Hence, a high card signal then usually means possession of appreciable length.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
1 ♥	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

Upon West's lead of the spade 3, East played the 8 to betoken his length in the suit and a desire for its repeat. The singleton K, of course, won that, and the club 2 was then shot through to the J and A. West then returned his spade 5, whereupon East felt like glaring at him. He saved his wrath until he later had confirmation of his suspicions and then blew up.

South's A took the second spade lead, and he cashed two high diamonds and then led the heart 3 to the 10 and A. West then proudly laid down his spade Q and J, making four tricks for his side and preventing any overtricks. But whatever he led back, the declarer could win it and score the last five tricks to make his contract.

Having seen East's signal, West should have counted East as having more spades than himself, but practically no high cards. So his second spade lead, after winning with the club J, should have begun an unblocking process. It should have been one of his honors. When he later won a trick with the heart A, he could have cashed the other honor and led his 5 to his partner. East then would have run the rest of the suit, setting the contract two tricks.

Your Week-End Lesson

If you are sitting in the opening leader's position against a No Trump game contract, see a five-card suit headed by the A-J-10 in dummy, which has no other entries, and you hold the Q, either singly or doubly guarded, why should you nearly always play your honor on the first lead of a small card of the suit by declarer, instead of blindly following the out-of-date Whist rule of "second hand low"?

Fined And Jailed

CHICAGO, March 21 (AP)—William R. Skidmore, whom the government termed a seller of "protection" to gamblers, was sentenced today to 30 months imprisonment and fined $5,000 and costs for having evaded $347,409 in income taxes.

William Scott Stewart, defence attorney, immediately informed the court he intended to appeal to a higher bench. Skidmore was granted liberty under his $35,000 bond pending appeal.

A Real Welcome

SYDNEY, March 21.— (AP). — Hundreds of thousands of Australians stood on the shores of the flag-decked Sydney harbor here yesterday and cheered the arrival of seven American warships, headed by the flagship Chicago. There was a tumultous ovation for the 2,000 officers and men of the United States navy.

Members of Parliament arrived by special train from Canberra Wednesday to take part in the greeting yesterday, and thousands of visitors travelled to Sydney for the event.

Little Glamor In Adventures Of Joe Sailor

By DOUG. HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

HAIFAX, March 22. — (CP). — Paeans of praise have fallen of late on the hardy and deserving brows of the merchant marine. Newspapers and magazines alike have sprung to the tap of this previously undisturbed reservoir of human interest.

Thousands of words have told the world of these so-called guardians of the lifelines of an Empire fighting for her existence. And your average merchant seaman thinks it's all a lot of guff.

He likes to read these extolling epics, certainly; human beings are built that way. But the word "hero" is one he never takes into consideration in respect to himself.

To the public, he is pictured as a glamorous, devil-may-care mariner who ventures forth into seas of death that Britain may live.

Actually, in appearance, your average merchant seaman is no more of a magazine cover glamor boy than the hired hand down on your uncle's farm, the begrimed service station attendant on the next street or any other workaday personality.

Actually, he is a hero, but to Joe Sailor himself this seafaring life is, he will tell you, only a job and its monetary benefits are his first consideration. Essentially, he's an individual and an adventurer. He probably went to sea to find the freedom that he'd never find in a factory or an office.

Of Many Lands

In his own, unglittering way, Joe Sailor is a colorful man. He might come from any one of dozens of lands. In this port city, you can find at any time Britons, Norwegians, Africans, Arabs, Rumanians, Chinese or you name them.

He might have started going down to sea years ago or been lured to its bosom when the world went to war. He might be as young as 16 or as old as 65.

You'd never mistake him for a city slicker although, ashore, he is better dressed than he is aboard his freighter or cargo boat or tramp steamer. There he pulls on the most durable clothes he can find and keeps on wearing them until thread forbids.

He lives a hard life, and he's a leathery .tough man. His hair is ruffled, his hands gnarled, his language rich in the pungent phrases of his trade.

Your man might be Ernest May, 22, of Chatham, N.B., a veteran of one pre-war voyage who has shipped on four vessels of three nationalities since.

May, like others of his kind, is continually shopping around for better ships and better pay. He has found that foreign ships pay more than British and that's what put him aboard the Greek freighter Emmy when she put out from an East Coast port some months ago.

Four hundred miles off Newfoundland, the Emmy started to founder in a heavy storm and her skipper put her back into the port whence she sailed, leaving his deck cargo of pit-drops to the Atlantic.

Pay With Bonus Varies

A merchant seaman's pay would not entice a bank manager. For his peacetime voyage, May, a cook, drew about $33 a month. Aboard two Dutch ships, he made about $85 a month in their trips into war zone waters and while they were moored in Britain his employers gave him an extra pound a week.

British ships, by government order, give their men a five-pound war bonus each month but an average seaman on an average British freighter would make a little more than $70 a month in crossing an ocean where death is a constant menace. The pay goes up after the crewman has 18 months experience, when he is classified as an able bodied seaman.

Greek and Swedish ships, the sailors say, are the best pay—Lord Haw Haw is said to have upped the Greek wages when he threatened instant death to any British subject captured aboard a ship flying the flag of the little Balkan nation.

One Greek ship, sailors report, paid a Canadian $275 a month but such stipends, they admit, will keep coming only as long as Greece can resist Axis attacks.

Your average mariner gets far less than that for living aboard a dingy vessel, eating rationed food, facing all types of weather while always confronted by death.

Some Experiences

Empire seamen have it over their foreign compatriots because they can—and do—jump from one ship to another at the end of their round trip. The foreigners can't shift because immigration regulations won't let them, but many attempts are made.

His ship generally gives Joe a blanket, a sheet, a straw mattress and a pillow for his bed. If he wants more, he gets it himself. If he works for some companies, his pay stops automatically when his ship is torpedoed and he is given a month's extra pay when he is landed ashore. Different firms have different arrangements.

Edward Pitcher, a 22-year-old Montrealer, for instance, was given $112 to replace his clothes and $125 in war risk money because he was board a torpedoed Norwegian liner.

Pitcher and another Montrealer, Joe Burns, are typical of the hundreds of men who unassumingly are doing more than almost any other body of men to keep Britain on her feet.

Pitcher got tired of "pushing a pen" and went to sea, shortly after war broke out. Burns, at 22, has five years of sailing under his belt.

And, like hundreds of others, neither has any desire to go back to the land. From men such as these Britain draws her breath for the fight.

HOW TO COMBAT Rheumatic Pains

Rheumatic pains are often caused by uric acid in the blood. This blood impurity should be extracted by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it irritates the muscles and joints causing excruciating pains. Treat rheumatic pains by keeping your kidneys in good condition. Take regularly Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite kidney remedy. 109 refrained from bombing or shelling the oasis out of consideration for the Senussi Brotherhood whose founder, Sidi Ben Aly Es Senussi, lies buried in the Biarabub mosque, a minor Mohammedan Mecca.

A communique last night said an Italian counter-attack from Cheren, gateway to the Eritrean capital, was repulsed with heavy cost to the 35,000 defenders, and that British operations there "continue to develop slowly but satisfactorily."

"In Central and Southern Ethiopit," the communique added, "pressure in all areas is being maintained on the withdrawing Italian forces."

Italy's hold on Ethopia was reported further menaced by a new drive from the East, where the British are consolidating recaptured positions in British Somaliland, and by native revolts against Italian authority in territory north of Addis Ababa, the capital.

Admit Port Lost.

ROME, March 22.—(AP).—Surrender of the Italian garrison at the Libyan oasis of Giarabub was admitted to-day by the Italian High Command.

In Eritrea fighting continued, the High Command declared, with Italian forces counter-attacking to improve their defence positions around Cheren.

An attempt by the British forces to ford the Dabus river, which parallels the Sudanese frontier about 50 miles inside of Western Ethiopia, was repulsed, it was claimed.

It was feared that many of those in the shelter had been killed.

Hundreds of persons, left homeless by the assault, wandered through bomb-pitted streets this morning as rescue workers searched for victims trapped in the debris.

Fire watchers and rescue crews who worked through raids of the past two nights said the pounding last night was the worst of the two—and worse than any other this ancient port has undergone.

Lights were off in some sections, but fires and explosions lighted up the whole city through the night.

Numerous stories of acts of courage and coolness were told. One hospital nurse heard the scream of a falling bomb, caught up two children and dived beneath a table, saving them from falling timbers.

Another nurse, knocked down by a bomb explosion, scrambled to her feet and extinguished an incendiary.

Considerable damage was done to business houses.

Several spots made historic by pilgrims and early navigators were damaged.

Many exhausted citizens, without heat and water, nestled in the ruins of their homes after daybreak for their first hours of sleep in two nights.

Lady Astor Kept Busy

Lady Astor, wife of Plymouth's mayor, again escaped injury although she worked most of the night in shelters, without sleep.

She had little to say of her own experiences, telling instead of the conduct of her fellow citizens for whom she expressed the highest admiration.

The townspeople, however, called her "marvellous" in the way she went from shelter to shelter throughout the attack, giving her encouragement and help.

The Germans followed the same pattern last night as the night before: Bathing the city with fire, then following up with waves of bombers pouring down explosives.

Australian Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, who arrived in Plymouth last night shortly before the attack began, escaped injury. He is staying at Lord Astor's home near the city.

It was Menzies' first close-up of an air raid. Although he was in London during one sharp attack his hotel was not in the raided area.

Menzies, who is touring England indicated that now he can speak with authority about "keeping the chin up."

When he left London he had said: "I, like Wendell Willkie, hope to really experience a raid to know what it's like. I don't like telling people how to be courageous unless I can speak from experience and show a little courage myself."

An eye-witness of the two latest attacks on Plymouth described last night's raid as the "most fearful spectacle this town ever saw."

"Incendiaries lit up the area for miles around," he said. "A bomb hit a hotel and flames shot 100 feet into the air, and stores a short distance away were set ablaze by fiery splinters."

A bank was closed after discovery of a time bomb on the premises and employees and police carried out big boxes of coins and documents.

Australian fliers joined in fighting the many fires. The post office and the Methodist church were burned out, the wing of a hospital was set on fire and a lumberyard burned. A number of firemen and policemen were injured.

A witness said that fires "were so numerous" at one time that "it was impossible to tackle them all. You could read a newspaper by the glow."

Skipper Escapes Twice As Subs Bag 5 Of Convoy

HOBOKEN, N.J., March 22. — (AP)—Captain Ary Kooy, master of the Netherlands freighter Leerdam, said on arrival here yesterday that five British and Allied ships were sunk by two mass submarine attacks on a 38-ship convoy approximately 1,000 miles off the Irish coast March 6.

Capt. Kooy said that, attacking in groups of three, the submarines evaded four destroyers in the convoy and sank these vessels totalling 48,646 tons:

Terje Viken, British whaler, 20,638 tons; Mijdrecht, Dutch tanker, 7,493 tons; Empire attendant, British freighter, 7,524 tons; Delilian, British freighter, 6,423 tons and the British tanker Athelbeach, 6,568 tons.

The master of the 8,816 Leerdam, told the dramatic story of the attacks as his ice-coated vessel sailed up the bay.

"We left Glasgow March 3 in a 38-ship convoy with four destroyers," he said.

"I was on the bridge at 4:20 a.m. March 6 when I noticed my squadron leader, the Delilian, began slowing down. Apparently the crew was emptying ashes from one of the boilers. Instead of slowing down I continued my normal speed and decided to pass her on the port side.

Other Ship Saves Him

"At 4:30 I was parallel with her about 50 yards away when she was hit by a torpedo.

"She was hit amidships and the explosion sounded like hell breaking loose. We had strict orders and could not stop. While proceeding I heard another explosion and turned around to see the whaler Terje Viken, which was directly behind us, in a sinking condition, settling slowly.

"Two more ships on each side of us were hit. They were the Athelbeach and the Mijdrecht. Two of the escorting destroyers dropped behind to pick up the survviors.

"At 12:15 a.m. on the following night we were attacked again. This time I ordered full speed ahead and they got the freight Empire Attendant which was close to us.

"Fortunately there was a heavy fog and we soon lost the submarine. A short time later the convoy was ordered to disperse."

Obituary

EDWIN MOORE

CAVAN, March 22—(ENS).—The death of Edwin Moore occurred at his home, Eighth Line, Cavan, Saturday, March 15. Mr. Moore, who had been in failing health for some time, was 87 years of age.

He was born in the village of Thetford, Norfolk County, England, and was the son of the late Rev. John Moore and Eliza Ann Mitchell.

Three sisters and five brothers predeceased him.

He came to Canada in 1874, and is survived by three children: Mrs. T. Armstrong (Maud), also of Cavan, and Blanche and Cyril at home.

His wife, the former Maggie J. Bolster, predeceased him by over fifty years. He was a member of the Church of England, and keenly interested in the work of St. John's Church, Ida, of which he was a member, and had served as a warden.

In politics he was a Conservative. Fraternally, he was a life member of the Sons of England, also a member of the J. B. Hall Lodge A.F. and A.M., both of Millbrook. In the death of Mr. Moore, Cavan has lost one who resided in its midst for 67 years, and throughout that time occupied a high place in the esteem of his neighbors and a wide circle of friends.

The funeral was held on Monday, March 17.

The Rev. Archdeacon W. Simpson, rector of Cavan parish, conducted a short service at the home, followed by service in St. John's Church, Ida. Favorite hymns of the deceased, "Tell Me The Old, Old Story," and "Sun of My Soul," were sung. Interment was in St. John's Cemetery, Ida.

The service at the grave was conducted by the J. B. Hall Masonic Lodge. Pall-bearers at the house were R. Matchett, T. Douglas, N. Lamb, E. Lamb, L. Fallis and G. Bothwell. Bearers at the church were H. A. Kerr, H. Bigelow, C. Thorndyke, G. Berry, S. McGill and C. Hall, all brother Masons.

The beautiful floral tributes placed upon the casket bore mute testimony to the love and esteem in which he was held.

Marmora Legion Honors Canon Swayne

MARMORA, Mar. 22 — (ENS).—Marmora Branch No 237, Canadian Legion, met in the Legion Room on Thursday evening. The guest of the evening was Canon W. G. Swayne of Bonarlaw.

After the business session, President W. Mumby called upon Comrade W. J. Cottrell to make the presentation of a smoker's set to Canon Swayne as an appreciation of the latter's interest in the work of the Legion.

Taken by surprise, Canon Swayne made feeling reply and extended his best wishes to the Legion, hoping he might be of some service to returned men in his new parish, Maitland, to which he moves next month. The branch later decided to attend the evening service at St. Mark's, Bonarlaw, on Sunday evening.

The serving of refreshments and a social hour completed the evening's program.

Strike Hits Air Program

LOS ANGELES, March 22—(AP)—Executives of six large plants producing airplanes for the United States and British Governments reported today the strike at Harvill Die Casting Corp. threatens a coastwise shutdown of aviation factories unless ended quickly.

The statements—from Northrup, North American, Douglas, Vaultee, Lockheed and Boeing—were issued as the office of production management sped Tommy Burns here to negotiate. Burns is due today.

The workers demanded that their minimum pay be increased from 50 cents an hour to 75 cents.

Broadside or head-on, the 1941 Ford is a whopping big-looking car. But you can't begin to appreciate its bigness till you step inside and sit down. Actual measurements show that Ford has the greatest inside length, greatest total seating width, most knee-room and most passenger room of any car in its price class.

With its wonderful size and roominess goes new riding comfort—a great new Ford ride that's almost unbelievably soft, smooth and quiet! It's a ride that's made possible by Ford's newest engineering achievement—"slow-motion springs," plus improved shock absorbers, a new stabilizer and a more rigid frame.

Now take the wheel and feel that big-car stability as you float along the highway. See how this car hugs the road, how beautifully it handles.

Willkie Sees Liberty Safe If Democracies Do Part, As Canada Welcomes Him

Crowds Stop Traffic On Toronto Streets Pack Stations At Stops From Border To Cheer Great Booster Of Aid For Britain

TORONTO, March 24—(CP).—Wendell Willkie arrived today in Toronto, where he is to address a mass meeting tonight on behalf of the Canadian War Services Fund. Mrs. Willkie was with him.

After receiving ovations from crowds which gathered at stations between here and Fort Erie, Ont., where he crossed the international border, Mr. Willkie stepped down from a private car in Toronto's Union Station to review a guard of honor of red-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Outside in the street crowds gathered to welcome him and scores of people hung out of windows of a nearby hotel. Long before the beginning of the parade that was to bear him to City Hall where a civic reception awaited him, ticker tape began to stream from office windows along the route.

Sees Liberty Safe

Earlier in Fort Erie Willkie expressed his conviction that liberty in the world will be preserved if all the Democracies do their part.

The United States Republican candidate for President in the 1940 elections dispatched questions as to whether he would run again in 1944 with the statement: "That talk makes me sick. What I'm interested in is saving liberty so that we can have elections."

"My feeling is that the preservation of liberty in the world is just on the balance," he said.

"We're in a desperate struggle but it will be preserved if all do their part. They (the democracies) have just got to win."

"Liberty to me is the most precious thing in the world."

He said it was his object to "convert Americans to the international viewpoint to bring the United States into unity about their foreign policy and support for all aid to Britain."

Traffic Is Held Up

After a brief rest in the Toronto Hotel he entered a car for the drive to City Hall. All traffic on Yonge street was stopped and thousands lined the sidewalks.

With his head bare and his tousled hair waving, Mr. Willkie greeted the crowds from the back seat of an open car. At city hall he was

Navy Gives Raid Squadron Two-day Run Off Azores

LONDON, March 24—(CP).—The German radio heard here today said that heavy British naval forces, including a battleship of the "Malaya class" had followed a German battleship squadron operating in the Atlantic for two days.

It said the British ships attempted to make contact when the raiders were attacking shipping on "the Australia and India route in the waters of the Atlantic islands."

On another occasion a ship of the Nelson class was said to have been near the raiders.

(This German assertion apparently refers to Nazi raiders operating in the vicinity of the Azores, which British shipping passes en route from the South Atlantic. German battleships have also been reported operating in the western part of the North Atlantic).

Britain Gets Breather As Bad Weather Keeps Huns Grounded

LONDON, March 24 — (CP). — More than 10,000 incendiary bombs as well as many high explosives were dropped on Berlin by the Royal Air Force last night, it was announced officially today.

LONDON, March 24—(CP).—An aerial machine-gun attack on German soldiers parading before breakfast outside barracks near Cherbourg was reported today by British fliers returning from a daylight air raid on the German-held French coast.

The daylight blows followed upon raids overnight by British bombers on Berlin, while bad weather grounded all but a few German aircraft.

"After bombing the docks at Cherbourg this morning," the Air Ministry news service said, "A Coastal Command Blenheim dived and dealt effectively with light gun positions on the outer mole.

"Diving further to 100 feet, the aircraft found the main street of Barfleur, near Cherbourg, occupied by German troops on a pre-breakfast parade outside their barracks blocks. They were heavily machine-gunned."

The night attack on Berlin was described as "medium heavy," although not as intense as the big bombing of the German capital the night of March 12.

The targets in northwestern Germany were Kiel and Hanover.

(An admission from Berlin said some raiders penetrated to the centre of the city, bombing from great height. Civilian casualties were reported, but the Germans claimed only residential districts were hit.

Heavy explosions were heard across the English Channel and flashes seen through the haze across the Strait of Dover were taken as a sign the R.A.F. again were

Dagenham, England, March 24 (CP Cable)

WARNING that Hitler will not stop short of any frightfulness to bring Britain to her knees, Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio, asserted today that the task facing Britain, her sister nations, and Greece is "prodigious."

"But with the passage of the lease-lend act by the United States of America we undertake it with unshakeable confidence," he said in launching war weapons week here.

"There can be no going back to the world as we knew it before the war....our peace goal must be a better world and a nobler Britain."

All Army Leaves Are Ordered Cancelled Police Put On 24-Hour Duty As Serb Resentment Hits Revolt Stage

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 24—(AP).—Britain, in a formal "third and final representation" on Yugoslavia's prospective Axis partnership, warned this nation tonight that she is "deluding herself" if she believes that joining the Axis "will be condoned by the British Government."

The third representation was in writing, whereas the other two were oral. The contents were not disclosed.

Resigned to a full junior partnership in the Axis, the Yugoslav government ordered stern military and police measures to cope with any outbreak when the pact was signed.

A special train got up steam to carry Yugoslav delegates to Vienna tonight, now that a patchwork job of smoothing over Yugoslavia's Cabinet difficulties has been completed.

The British note, referring to Anglo-Yugoslav friendship, sealed Allies in the First Great War, expressed astonishment at Yugoslavia's "drastic change from the long-established policy of strict neutrality."

Whether it contained any allusion to possible British retaliation could not be learned officially, but diplomats expressed belief that it pointed to British action as threatened in the case of now German-occupied Rumania and Bulgaria.

Army Leaves Cancelled.

Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic rounded out his arrangements for departure by ordering police on 24-hour duty throughout the country and by forbidding all public meetings. Starting at midnight to-night all army leaves will be cancelled and troops in large towns were instructed to keep their arms in readiness. Reservists were being called to the colors.

With opposition to the alliance growing hourly, there were reports from the Greek frontier that Yugoslav officers were crossing the border to offer their services to the Greeks. They were said to include four generals and three high officers of the Royal Guard. Two new ministers were sworn in the Cabinet and a third objector swung over.

Pamphlets calling for a mass meeting of protest to-morrow in a Belgrade public park flooded the capital. Police declared the meeting would be broken up.

Neghelli Falls; Fascists Flung Back On Cheren

CAIRO, Egypt, March 24—(AP)—British troops have beaten off seven heavy Italian counter-attacks outside Cheren, key to Italian Eritrea, and "again are making headway," a General Headquarters communique said today.

Britain's offensive position in Italian East Africa had been improved by capture of Neghelli, provincial capital in Southern Ethiopia, which put a third column in position to strike toward Addis Ababa, Ethiopian capital.

Free French troops fighting on the British side had been reported battling for hill positions four miles from Cheren, in Eritrea.

Addis Ababa, the Ethopian capital, already was the goal of British-led natives from the northwest and British and South African forces from the east when the new drive started from the Kenya frontier to the south early this month.

2 Quebec Homes Burn With Ten Children

WINDSOR MILLS, Que., March 24.—(CP).—Seven children were reported burned to death early today when flames swept through a frame farm house near this town, about 20 miles north-west of the eastern townships centre of Sherbrooke.

The dead:

Patricia, 18 months; Etienne, three years; Robert, five; Jeannie, eight; Raymond, 10; Pauline, 12; and Giselle, 13.

The fire, of unknown origin, broke out while the parents were visiting friends, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph St. Pierre. The flames began shortly before midnight and raged until the building, about half-way between here and Richmond, was but a heap of ashes and scorched stone.

Wind Beats Brigade.

The flames died out with the coming of the dawn, after the unavailing efforts of fire-fighters from this pulpwood-producing town. Bucket brigades failed to stem the wind-fanned fire.

The fire was discovered by a truck driver who sighted the glare against the darkened sky. A few moments later Oscar Pruneau, a nearby farmer, was on the scene, and together the men sought to save the children.

But the flames, eating swiftly into the wooden and stone structure, drove them back time and again. Later, Pruneau said they could catch glimpses of the youngsters between swirls of smoke from the upper windows.

2 U Boats Sunk In Night Scrap

A BRITISH PORT, Mar. 24, — How British warships with depth charges and guns sank two U-boats recently in an encounter off the British coast was told her last night by a merchant seaman who witnessed the battle.

"Star shells and Very lights illuminated the sky and searchlights swept the water," he said. "There was a series of dull explosions as depth charges were let off. Great columns of water were hurled into the air.

"Hardly had the churning water subsided when the first U-boat broke the surface. It was badly battered and as I watched, it split up and disappeared in the oily sea.

"Then there were more depth charges. Again muffled explosions made my ship tremble from shock. A second U-boat jerked into view and as it broke the surface the warships' guns belched out a salvo of screaming steel. The submarine was blown to pieces before my eyes."

Italian Raider?

Aboard the Liner President Jackson, March 24 (AP)

AN indication of Italian naval operation in the Pacific has come with the sighting off Kobe breakwater of a weather-beaten warship identified by passengers aboard the liner President Jackson as the 2,172-ton Italian escort vessel Eritrea.

The vessel was seen anchored off the breakwater Saturday and still was there last night. She flew the Italian flag and the name Eritrea could be seen easily from the President Jackson.

The Eritrea, launched Sept. 20, 1936, is fitted for mine-laying and sailors speculated she may have been laying mines in Australian waters.

The vessel also is sufficiently large and fast for raiding. (Jane's fighting ships gives her speed as 20 knots.)

U.S. Returns Pair Of Hun Officers To Fort Henry

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

OTTAWA, March 24 (CP).—The prison camp at Fort Henry, near Kingston, Ont., held among other prisoners today two German naval officers who sought freedom in a jaunt across the ice-covered St. Lawrence River only to be captured by United States authorities.

The men identified as Bernhardt Gohoke and Heinz Rottman, were returned to Fort Henry during the week-end after being given a hearing before United States immigration officials at the border.

Their escape became known on Friday and on Friday night a United States border patrol nabbed them as they strode across the river. They were charged with illegal entry and not long afterwards were turned over to Canadian immigration officials.

The German officers, among many brought to Canada from Britain for safekeeping, apparently escaped from Fort Henry through a hole in the wall. Two others who attempted to escape about the same time were stopped before they could make a get-away.

Friday's break raised to 33 the number of escapes from custody of internment officials. Only one man, a German identifying himself as Baron Franz von Werra, has not been overtaken by internment authorities. He is free on bail after reaching Ogdensburg, N.Y. Another prisoner, Ernest Nueller, was shot when he resisted capture.

Making 180 Planes a Month

Canadian Output Forges Ahead—Over 7,000 Now On Pay Rolls

By EDWIN JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Military Writer.)

MONTREAL, March 24 —(CP)— About 40 airplanes of varying types are flowing from Canadian aviation plants each week, lending strength to Britain's rapidly expanding air arm through which she ultimately hopes to gain mastery of the skies and victory over the Axis powers.

The 40-a-week production figure, representing approximately 180 machines a month, was announced here Saturday by Ralph Bell, director-general of aircraft production in the department of munitions and supply, during a tour of selected local factories by a representative group of Canadian and United States newspapermen.

On their tour the newspapermen were shown the secrets of organization and production at three of the country's leading aircraft plants — Vickers, Fairchild and Noorduyn. They saw the raw materials being unloaded at receiving depots, followed the intricate processes of manufacture and assembly by an army of expert craftsmen and finally sat in the cockpits of finished machines, from the tiny fleet trainer to the mammoth 12-ton Stranraer flying boat.

Only a few months ago some departments of these plants were non-existent while others, in the words of their managing officials, were in "an industrial tailspin."

Today the factories are giving employment to more than 7,000 skilled and semi-skilled workers with a pay-roll running into many thousands of dollars. Already the companies are again feeling the pinch of restricted space, it was said, and plans for further expansion are under consideration, or already in progress.

"Without doubt the aircraft industry if full of headaches and we have had our bad spots," Mr. Bell told the newspapermen.

"The method by which the American-build bomber was brought to grief is said to have been the introduction of small amount of sand and grass in the oil supply of each engine," says the newspaper. "One of these, according to the story heard here, "burned out" and failed

Reds, Turks Declared Friends

Mean Russian Aid In Every Way—"Short Of War"

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Mar. 24 — (AP). — An unofficial but reliable source said to-day that Turkey and Soviet Russia would publish simultaneously at midnight to-night a "common declaration of friendship."

The declaration, it was said, will mean Russian aid for Turkey "by every means short of war" if she is attacked by Germany.

(A Reuters News Agency despatch from Belgrade said large formations of German troops in Bulgaria began a rapid advance on Sunday afternoon down the Struma River Valley toward the Greek Frontier.

(Previous Turkish reports forecasting a Russian-Turkish declaration had said it would reaffirm a non-aggression pact already existing between the Moscow and Ankara Governments and would mean the same aid for Turkey—principally supplies—as Russia has been supplying China.)

The declaration, it was said, will contain these three points:

1. Denial of the rumors spread abroad that if Turkey enters the war, Russia will stab her in the back";

2. Assurance that if Turkey is obliged to fight, Russia will maintain "benevolent neutrality" toward her;

3. Reciprocal Turkish assurances to the Soviet.

According to this information, it will be based on the Turkish-Russian non-aggression pact of 1926.

Some political sources said it was negotiated by the Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar, Vhacheslaff Molotoff, and Atkay Alihaydar, Turkish Ambassador to Moscow. They said the declaration would not be limited to a signed agreement and that there were secret clauses specifically mentioning the help to be given Turkey by Russia in case of Turkish conflict with Germany.

Vast Store Of R.A.F. Fighters And Bombers Now Ready Lord Beaverbrook Reveals

Stored Secretly Everywhere In Britain, New U.S. Monsters Now Arriving; Press Says U.K. Output 3,200 Month

LONDON, March 24—(CP).—The greatest reserve of bombers and fighters in history is secreted in "storage houses distributed everywhere" in Britain, Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, announced Sunday.

In a broadcast, the Canadian-born publisher who heads Britain's plane production, said a tally had shown that the aircraft assembled, "all ready for action, ready for immediate operations, is a record surpassing anything that has gone before, anything in the history of aviation."

At the same time Lord Beaverbrook's Ministry announced that huge far-flying four-motored bombers had landed in Britain from the United States, presumably for use in the battle of the Atlantic.

Lord Beaverbrook said the tally of reserves was made last Wednesday and disclosed these technical gains in aviation:

1. In the race for altitude, British scientists have "watched Hurricane and Spitfire (fighters) being lifted up and up until now these airplanes ride high, wide and handsome.

2. Two new planes "at this moment are passing from the development stage to production" and behind these are several other new types.

3. Five new motors "have been brought from experiment to manufacture in nine months."

Output Now 3,200 Monthly

Although the numbers of British planes are a closely guarded secret, black headlines in The Sunday Chronicle proclaimed that Britain now is producing 3,200 of all types each month, and that her production peak has not yet been reached.

Arrival of the first giant bombers from the United States with range enough to bring the remostest corners of German-dominated territory into the Royal Air Force's target area was disclosed in a statement issued by the Aircraft Production Ministry.

It did not given the time or number of the arrivals but said the first to come were what the British officials call "Liberators"—long-range, heavy bombers produced by the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation of San Diego, Cal.

These planes, with a power plant greeted by Mayor Fred Conboy and civic dignitaries.

Nothing like the welcome accorded Mr. Willkie had been seen in Ontario since the visit of the King and Queen in 1939. From the time his train left the mists of the Niagara river at Fort Erie until he reached Toronto crowds were on hand to greet him.

Lines of troops were drawn up near the tracks as the train reached here. Mr. and Mrs. Willkie and their party were riding in the private car of Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railways.

2 Mile Parade

The troops were made up of regiments of the Canadian (Active) army training in the Toronto area. The parade was two miles long. Massed bands marched behind Mr. Willkie's car. Thousands of members of the Royal Canadian Air Force took part.

Squadrons of Royal Norwegian Air Force planes roared overhead as the parade passed. The troops escorting Mr. Willkie were in full battle array, wearing helmets and battle dress.

A platform was erected at city hall where Mr. Willkie was given the freedom of the city. Stretching up the high city hall tower was Canada's biggest thermometer which will be used to indicate the progress made by citizens of Toronto in the drive for the Canadian War Services fund.

At the top of the thermometer is a huge Nazi bomber which will be shot down when the objective is reached.

R.C.A.F. planes criss-crossed the sky and stunted over city hall as Mr. Willkie made his way to the platform.

Maj.-Gen. A. D. McCrae, chairman of the War Services Fund, was among the first to greet Mr. Willkie. The commanding officer of Military District No. 2, Maj.-Gen. C. F. Constantine, was also present.

Confident of Victory.

After the address of welcome at the City Hall Mr. Willkie responded briefly and declared his confidence in a British victory.

"Let me say to you confidently that with your help and our help they are going to win and liberty is going to live," Mr. Willkie said.

"I saw the spirit of those people, the courage with which they are fighting, and the defences they are building."

No person feeling as he felt about liberty, having seen what he had witnessed on his recent visit to England, could fail to do all in his power to bring support to the armies of Britain, he said.

British authorities said fast mechanized columns swept nearly 140 miles northeast from Mega and northwest from Dolo to take Neghelli, whose capture by Italians in January, 1936, in the Italo-Ethiopian War was hailed in Rome as an important victory.

Observers said the 275 miles north to Addis Ababa was "easy-going country"—with little opposition expected as far as Hadama, nearest point on the important Addis Ababa-Jibuti Railway and only 50 miles from the capital.

The British-Ethiopian push from the northwest was reported menacing Debra Markos, in Gojjam province ,approximately 12 miles from the capital but in difficult, mountainous country.

One Prong at Harar

To the east the British are trying to drive from Jijiga, captured last week, toward Harar, 50 miles away, and the Addis Ababa-Jibuti rail line just beyond. Harar is 225 miles from the capital by air but nearer 300 by the railway.

Cheren, where 35,000 Italian and native troops for weeks have held the British drive toward the Eritrean capital of Asmara, was said to be under increased pressure—with defence forces in danger of being cut off from supply or retreat.

White British troops hammered at the pass-guarded town from the west and southwest. Free French forces were reported closing in from the northeast, fighting to push Italians from hills overlooking the city four miles away.

In Italy, where Fascists celebrated yesterday the 22nd anniversary of the founding of the Fascist party, a party order of the day pledged Premier Mussolini that "under your orders we shall as always win."

The Italian communique yesterday declared British forces attempting to storm Cheren were "repulsed everywhere in bloody fighting."

Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, said Britain's army of the Nile had been depleted heavily for the Cheren assault and to backstop the Greeks.

Huns Move Down Struma

A heavy movement of German troops through the Struma River valley in Bulgaria toward the Greek frontier was reported in unconfirmed Balkan dispatches today.

Military experts have said the Struma River valley would be the likely portal for Hitler's expected attack on Greece.

A Reuters news agency dispatch from Belgrade said large formations of Nazi troops had been seen advancing rapidly southward through that valley since yesterday afternoon.

German quarters in Belgrade said Yugoslavia would have to sign up as a partner — just as Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Slovakia have done—rather than as merely a passive member.

Presumably, this would give Germany the right to march Nazi troops through the Balkan kingdom via the Vardar valley—strategic gateway for an invasion of Greece.

Greece herself warned Yugoslavia against any "hostile act" in co-operating with Germany, and the British minister in Belgrade addressed a note to the Yugoslav government appealing to the regency not to "betray" Yugoslavia in the face of rising public opinion.

Smouldering unrest was reported in the Yugoslav army.

Leaders of the anti-axis faction said they still were working for the resignation of the entire Cvetkovic government, rejection of all Berlin's demands, and formation of a coalition cabinet pledged to absolute neutrality.

A flood of pamphlets hit Belgrade and other cities to-day. One proposed an immediate military alliance with Soviet Russia as a means to back Yugoslav resistance to the German demands. It was signed by Dr. Dragoljub Javonic, leader of a left wing of the Serb Peasant party.

The semi-official list of cabinet replacements showed that Prince Paul has persuaded the Minister of Justice, Prof. Mihajlo Konstantinovic, to reconsider his protest resignation and had drafted two political unknowns, Caslav Nikitovic, Inspector of Silos, for the Ministry of Agriculture, and Dragomir Ikonic for the Ministry of Public Welfare.

"This is a real revolt of a great majority of the Serbs against any sellout," one Opposition leader declared shortly before the announcement of the settlement.

"We are insisting that the entire government resign. We may lose the fight. We may be ignored but if we are this government will have to assume responsibility for the trouble whih inevitably will follow."

The results of their investigation have not been disclosed, although rumors are being circulated in Canadian-American flying circles—without receiving much credence in responsible quarters here—that one man who helped sabotage the ship was caught and shot in Canada and that another was lured over the border from the United States and dealt a similar fate."

But the greatest activity was concentrated on aircraft. Hundreds of men and women sat a benches or lathes, contributing some vital operation in the making, shaping or assembling of the 17,000-odd parts that go into the giant Stranraer flying boat. In the production of this type of craft, approximately 100,000 man-hours are absorbed. Several machines were near completion.

In other sections of the factory Hampden bomber fuselages were being turned out for government-owned Federal Aircraft Company, charged with production of Avro-Anson training planes.

The same intense industry was evident in the other plants. At Fairchild, for example, where the British - designed "Bolingbroke" twin-engined bomber is under construction, 35 craft were lined up from fuselage plant to flight shed, in progressive stages of assembly.

"Any industry called upon to multiply its productive capacity 20 to 30-fold within a limited period would be sure to bog down somewhere along the line.

"We have suffered in that respect, but now we are organized and set to go, although we may still encounter some difficulties in getting certain parts and material Creating sources of supply has been a tremendous task."

Making Real Bomber

Mr. Bell said the Munitions Department was about to put into production what he described as "one of the best twin-engine bombers in the world." The machine, of United States design, is amphibian with a range of about 3,500 miles, heavily armed.

Tied at the company's docks were sleek Corvettes receiving a final checkup before being commissioned for service with the Royal Navy. In the shipbuilding yards minesweepers and freighters were under construction. Marine engines and other urgently-needed parts and accessories were being turned out by deft ficers," it said. "Some sick women and children already have been evacuated."

The stage was set for the British forces to reclaim the lost colony on the Gulf of Aden last Monday when Imperial forces stormed Berbera from the sea under the cover of warships and warplanes.

This re-entry after a year of Italian occupation was followed by the capture of Hargeisa, near the Ethiopian frontier about 10 miles southeast of Berbera.

THE WAR TO-DAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There seems every reason to expect that Britain's air assault on Germany and Italy will increase fairly steadily in intensity and soon will reach a violence hitherto unseen.

While it seems likely also that the coming good weather of spring and early summer will bring some intensification also of the German air war on Britain, observers attach considerable importance to the exultation yesterday of Lord Beaverbrook that Britain has in secret storage the greatest reserves of fighters and bombers in history.

The actual figures, of course, are guarded as military secrets, but the Sunday Chronicle in London said British production of all types of military aircraft was about 3,200 units a month and that the peak had not been reached.

Four-engined bombers, now being flown across the Atlantic from the United States, are of huge dimensions and capable of the fastest speeds yet seen in craft of their class. They are reported capable of carrying as many as five tons of bombs and are said to have such a range that they could be used to bomb any capital in Europe and still return to their base with a safety margin of fuel.

It is believed that with improved weather these machines will be engaged increasingly in large-scale operations against targets in Berlin and other German cities and, if Italy remains in the war, against targets in Italian cities.

British authorities, significantly, have named these great highwing monoplane bombers "Liberators." They are reported also to be obtaining other giant craft from the United States, as well as developing new and improved designs of their own.

The new Spitfire, for instance, is said to have a service ceiling far above that of the pioneer Spitfire and improvements constantly rolling from the drafting rooms of manufacturing plants are being continuously added to types now in service.

U.S. Naval Yards To Repair British Ships

WASHINGTON, March 24 (AP)—Repair of Britain's naval and merchant shipping in United States yards is expected to be undertaken soon on a large scale, and should prove a means of effectively helping Britain meet the German sea blockade.

It would release British shipyard facilities and labor, now tied up on repair work, to expedite new craft construction. It would also reduce importantly at least one strain on British tonnage requirements in the Atlantic. American-repaired British craft would get their steel, for instance at the source, not after it had been carried across the Atlantic.

Still another benefit for Britain would be that craft undergoing overhaul in United States yards would be out of danger from Nazi bombers.

A recent semi-official claim in Berlin placed the total loss in British-owned and British-used cargo tonnage due to German air and naval action at just under 10,000,000 tons. London thereupon called attention to a Lloyd's review placing the figure at just over 5,000,000 tons. One British purpose in releasing that figure was to back up an Admiralty announcement that Berlin claims on British ship losses have consistently shown a 100 per cent exaggeration.

Washington officials may know how much naval or merchant tonnage is crowding repair yards in Britain. Unofficial estimates mention 2,000,000 tons out of action, in addition to the 5,000,000 tons of cargo shipping sunk by enemy action.

How much of it, either naval or merchant, could be sent across the Atlantic for refitting would depend on the extent of the damage. Only such vessels as could be made seaworthy for the transatlantic passage or in instances where damage at sea occurred closer to the United States than to Britain could be considered for American repair.

That factor, however, does not decrease materially the immediate value Britain could derive in the crucial sea struggle with Germany from both repairing and refueling all available combat and merchant tonnage on this side of the Atlantic.

A second item on the American aid program under consideration in Washington is transfer to Britain of light craft suitable for submarine hunting. It interlocks in a way with the American ship repair idea.

There is reason to believe that whatever British ship construction capacity might be released from repair jobs there would be used for expanding the sub-hunting fleet in British and adjacent waters. Raw materials imported to Britain for naval and merchant tonnage repair use also could be shifted to subchaser construction to the extent that the repair job could be done across the Atlantic.

Sewing Circle Has Completed 21 Quilts

CAMPBELLFORD, March 24.—(ENS).—The decision to make an even greater contribution towards their war work effort was made by members of the Stanwood Sewing Circle when they met for their meeting last week at the home of Mrs. John Rowe. Upwards of twenty members attended, which was spent in quilting. During the business period presided over by the president, Mrs. Lain, considerable discussion centred on additional ways of raising money for the society. It was revealed tha two quilts had been turned over to the Red Cross during the past month making a total of twenty-two in all to the Red Cross with three donated to other societies.

One method of adding to the group's finances will be to sell tickets on a quilt with an Irish chain circle pattern. Next month the members will hold their meeting at the home of Mrs. Robert Lisle.

Crosthwait also conducted chapel at Trinity College School where he once was a student.

The Rev. Douglas R. Gordon, son of Rev. J. W. Gordon regular minister at the United Church, Brown Street, conducted services Sunday. The morning service featured boys' work with the boys' leaders assisting. The Young People's Union conducted the evening service.

Port Hope Fishermen Have Good Catches Of Fresh Water Herring

A. L. Welch, World War veteran and Lake Ontario fisherman, is the only man who hires a crew and operates a fishing boat throughout the winter months out of Port Hope. On Saturday the crew brought in a nice catch of siscoes (fresh water herring) which were taken far out in Lake Ontario in deep water, using gill nets. On the LOWER LEFT Welch is shown with a box of the fish, ready for shipment to New York. On the RIGHT two of his crew, Arnold Kirby, wielding the scissors, and Clifford Hineman, are cleaning the siscoes at the rate of 200 lbs. an hour. Gulls line the docks waiting for the fishermen to toss out the injured fish and the entrails, and in the panel ABOVE the gulls are shown enjoying their meal. They are quite tame once the food is thrown out.

Port Hope Fisherman Operates Boat During Entire Winter

PORT HOPE, March 24.—(By Staff Reporter)—Most Lake Ontario fishermen knock off for the winter, but skipper A. L. Welch and his son, Robert, come of hardy stock and their boat is the only one that operates on Lake Ontario out of Port Hope all through the winter months.

On Saturday afternoon, the skipper and his crew of three were busy cleaning and packing a cargo of siscoes, delectable fsesh water fish ranging in size from five inches to nine inches which are caught way out in Lake Ontario where the water is almost 500 feet deep.

Welch is a war veteran, having served in World War 1 with the 2nd Battalion, First Division, and it was a disability which he sustained during the war that forced him to live a life in the outdoors. He was gassed on the battlefields of France and developed a throat condition that is less troublesome if he gets plenty of fresh air.

Since the war he has been a lake fisherman, taking the good times with the bad, with an ever present optimism that has made him popular with a wide circle of friends. For the past four years his boat, the "Mable M." a typical squat powered cabin boat has not been out of service except for a few brief inspections of the hull, and minor repairs.

Fishing Best In The Fall

In the fall the siscoe fishing is at its best but the fishermen can continue to get good hauls if they move their craft along to deeper water as the cold weather comes on. This week the crew were operating their gill nets in an area between 16 and 26 miles off shore, and they landed a fair catch. The siscoes are better known to natives as fresh water herring, but they have their greatest demand in the United States, and incidentally bring a much better price over there.

The nets are made of Sea Island cotton and one pound of netting costs about $25.00. The boat carries 380 pounds of this equipment aside from the other essential bits of gear.

Besides Welch and his son, there are Arnold Kirby ad Clifford Hineman in the crew and these two veterans do the cleaning when the boat docks. Kirby uses a large pair of scissors to gut the fish, then tosses them on a block where Hineman complete the job of removing the entrails. Under pressure they can clean 200 pounds of fish which is roughly 800 siscoes in a day, and when this is done the fish is weighed and packed in cracked ice ready for shipment.

The past year has been a good one, but like most other industries the fishermen are feeling the bite of increased cost of equipment while the price of fish remains about the same. Their biggest catch was 1,800 pounds, and they claim that so far this winter the catches have been good. At other times during the year they go after the other varities of fish which are in demand and available to the fishermen.

"I have just one regret now," said Mr. Welch, as he gazed in the sky at an air force plane zooming along high above Lake Ontario. "I wish I was young enough to join the air force and get a crack at Hitler, and his pigeon-chested hit-and-run aviators, if I were I'd enlist tomorrow."

Cobourg Battery To Become Anti-Aircraft Unit

The 3-47th Battery, which was organized last fall in Cobourg and has been stationed at Ottawa, is to be changed into the 47th Anti-Aircraft Battery, R.C.A. (A.F.). Driver Attempts To Run Down Chief Constable Wm. Carey

COBOURG, March 24 (ENS)— Chief W. J. Carey recovered a stolen car here on Sunday morning around eight o'clock after the driver apparently tried to run him down, the Chief commandeering a car and heading him off on the way out of town. Driver of the car was James Thompson of Belleville, police stated. Later on Sunday Belleville police took him back to that city. Sunday morning around 7.30 the chief of police received a call from Trenton that a new Plymouth stopped at a service station for gasoline and oil and then drove off without paying for it. The chief took up his post at the four corners and some time later spotted a new Plymouth. When he stepped out to stop it, the car swerved towards him and Chief Carey was obliged to move sharply to one side to avoid being run down. He quickly commandeered a car driven by George Bellamy of Cobourg and on the outskirts of the town, Bellamy moved ahead of the stolen car and cut it off, the right hub cap of Bellamy's car being knocked off by contact with the bumper of the stolen car. The driver was immediately placed under arrest and taken to the cells.

Port Hope Briefs

THEY DOT THE HIGHWAYS

Motorists travelling along No. 2 highway on Saturday through Port Hope and other lakeshore towns were surprised at the number of airmen who were thumbing rides. The men apparently had week-end leaves and a goodly number of them were employing the hitch-hike method to get home.

HIGHWAY IS CLEAR

Highway 28 from Peterborough to Port Hope is clear of snow and ice even to the shoulders, and motorists claim this condition prevails to Toronto and Montreal. No. 2 highway is rather rough in spots where the road surface has dropped or heaved but on Highway 28, there are only a few bumps, one a fairly bad one near Fraserville and it is marked.

WAITING FOR A MEAL

People who are not familiar with the fishing industry in Lake Ontario would get a lot of enjoyment watching the sea gulls lining up on the concrete piers waiting for fishermen to dump, small fish and entrails into the water. On Saturday a fishing boat was in with a load and there were more than 400 gulls on hand for a feed. When a bucket of refuse was dumped they swooped down close to the man, holding the pail and within a few minutes everything had disappeared. The gulls swallow the fish whole, and one wonders how they can do it.

Port Hope Plans To Protest Application By C.N.R. To Abandon Old Midland Line

PORT HOPE, March 24 (By Staff Reporter).—A wave of indignation will crystallize in resolutions of protest has been growing at all centres from Port Hope to Peterborough since it was announced that the C.N.R. had made application to abandon the old Midland railway between Port Hope and Millbrook, and to discontinue mail, express and passenger service from Peterborough to Millbrook.

The greatest hue and cry comes from Port Hope and Peterborough, and the strongest argument advanced at both points is that Port Hope has an excellent harbor for use when the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway is completed. It was pointed out that the railways is a direct link between Port Hope and Peterborough, and a main line connection also between Fraserville, Millbrook and Campbellcroft.

Port Hope Opposed.

Mayor Sherman Gifford of Port Hope did not mince words when he was asked on Saturday if the Port Hope Council would oppose the proposed action.

"We will certainly do everything in our power to block this move, and the question will be debated when the Council meets in its regular session on Monday evening. Every member of the Council is positively against discontinuing the line.

We received a copy of the application on Thursday, and it has been handed over to the town solicitor, D. H. Chisholm, K.C., for his consideration."

Mr. Gifford, who operates a large service station on High 2, a short distance west of the village, is a powerfully built man with a good command of the English language and the ability to put his ideas across with a brevity and forcefulness that is refreshing.

He needed no encouragement to warm to the subject and proceeded to point out a few reasons why the line should be retained.

"This line serve a rich farming community that is often isolated during the Winter months and the railway provides the only means of transportation. The merchants would suffer, too, if the farmers were unable to get in to do their shopping, and lack of rail facilities would be a direct hardship on the farmers.

Excellent Harbor.

Port Hope has an excellent harbor and when the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway is completed, this line will provide a direct shipping line to Peterborough, Mr. Gifford said.

He added that at present hundreds of tons of coal are unloaded at the docks and trucked to Peterborough, whereas the railway might well take steps to get this business. Another argument was that this was the only direct line north between Toronto and Belleville.

"If the railway would only give better service instead of letting the route die a slow death, they would get sufficient revenue to warrant maintaining the line.

He also stated that the road is in good shape, and a short route, and that Port Hope had excellent switching facilities and yards right down to the water's edge.

A plan of campaign to oppose the change will be formulated at the Council meeting tonight.

Town Is Growing

Cy Williams, wholesale tobacconist, when asked about the plan, said, "The C.N.R. has kept this line open for many lean years, and now a period of development is opening up and they plan to close it down."

W. N. Moore, chairman of the finance committee, was also indignant, at the proposed change. "Of course I'm opposed to this plan, he said. It's bad business for the town because we can't grow without adequate rail facilities. The townspeople will be against the move one hundred per cent."

R. H. Wickett, of the insurance firm of Wickett and Reynolds, and chairman of the Retail Merchants' Association, said he had just been informed of the action by the C.N.R.

His observation was that the Retail Merchants would block the step if at all possible.

"In my opinion the reason the line is a losing proposition is because freight and mail is routed by way of Belleville instead of the short route straight north of Peterborough by way of Millbrook. If Port Hope grows, and I'm sure it will, this line will be valuable as a distribution artery, and the more industries locate here, the more it will be used."

Snow Is Deep At Headwaters Of Ganaraska

PORT HOPE, March 24 (By Staff Reporter)—Fear that the Ganaraska River may misbehave again this spring is entertained by many Port Hope residents who live along the waterfront.

There is a great quantity of snow in the back country where the Ganaraska has it headwaters, but there is not a great deal of ice in the stream. At the present time it is rippling along in noisy fashion with about eight inches of water flowing overtop of the ice which formed in midwinter.

One old timer expressed the opinion that the river is not dangerous unless we should have two days of warm rain. If this should happen he forecast that Port Hope would see a flood that would shade any in recent years.

Up in the Crooked Creek area near Kendall, where the headwaters of the Ganaraska start the snow is said to be half way up the telephone poles in some places. Crooked Creek drains into the river proper and is one of its main tributaries. This creek and river drains a large area of farmland and under normal weather conditions is capable of draining the entire district without any damage to property.

Union Of Free People

Dr. Felix Morley, president of Haverford College, was speaking at Rochester, N.Y., and he had something to say about the "Anglo-American Commonwealth of Nations," something which he felt was necessary "to consolidate that post-war order which is vital for the continuation of democracy."

One does not hear a great deal about that in Canada at the moment, but there is much being said on the subject in United States. It began with the "Union Now" movement, something which should have been attended to before the war broke, in which case there might have been no war. The idea gained force from the expression of Prime Minister Churchill when he referred to the increase in the mutual feeling of Britain and United States. His phrase "Let it roll" was interpreted as meaning he was in favor of such plan, and we regard such interpretation as being correct.

Dr. Morley believes the one difficulty may be in reconciling the two forms of government, that of a republic and a limited monarchy.

It would not be possible to dispense with or largely change the government of United States which safeguards the essential principle of home rule. If it were necessary to have "some symbol of unity of this league of English-speaking nations I personally am willing to accept the King of England, though not the system of titles which he is graciously pleased to dispense."

The speaker recalled the visit of His Majesty to Washington nearly two years ago, and admitted that "royalty fills a psychological need which Hollywood and the Knights of Pythias have never quite supplied us. As far as I am concerned he can come back here any time as part payment under the lease-lend law."

Our belief is that Dr. Morley was discussing something of which much is going to be said and written in the future. If this war has proved anything it is that it is not safe for nations to stand alone. Nor is safety to be found in hurriedly-made pacts covering a certain length of time. They are apt to fail or pressure is likely to dissolve them.

Clarence Streight, whose book "Union Now" first brought the matter before the world, was an advocate of an out-and-out union including Great Britain, United States, France, the Scandinavian countries and such of the lesser nations of free people as might see the advantage of entering. He had no faith in making pacts or agreements; he would have one currency, one postal system and no tariff barriers. The idea was to have actually one nation in all that the word means.

It was not suggested that there should be any radical departure in the method of government, but as Dr. Morley suggests, it might be advisable to have "some symbol of unity," and that is precisely where His Majesty comes in with the British Commonwealth of Nations. If it were not for that "symbol of unity" the British Empire would not remain intact.

One finds evidence of that desire in Old Testament history where the Israelites, wishing to change from having a system of judges in control, expressed the desire to have a king, one king over all the tribes, and it was that feeling which caused Samuel to search for and find Saul, "who was higher than any of the people from his shoulders and upward." When he was presented to the tribes they made use of words which have lived ever since: "God save the King."

Of course much of this remains for the future to settle, but our belief is that it is a present problem with a solution yet to come. The free people of the world must come together and must stay together, and an out-and-out union is the only way in which they can be permanently bound.

Paying Two Ways

Every time the Government announces a new policy it is necessary to start the business of bringing into existence the machinery needed to put it into effect. And paying for it too.

That comes to notice again when reading a report from Ottawa saying that "a supplementary estimate to provide $35,000,000 for payments on reductions in wheat acreage under the Government's 1941-42 wheat policy, and for administration and temporary appointments required under the policy, was introduced in the House of Commons."

We take it there will have to be some form of checking land to make certain what claim a farmer is justified in making under the new regulations. And the farms will have to be considered in terms of thousands as there are many of them which will be affected in the West. It is not merely a case of making the payments but of setting up a rather formidable method of inspection and administration, which is apparently to be done by people not presently connected with the civil service.

That is, the people of the Dominion, regardless of occupation, will be paying farmers for not growing wheat, and will also be paying a rather considerable staff to see just how much wheat the farmers are not growing. Working for the Government thus gets another shove up.

We Need Better Jurors

The Legal Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature has decided that editors, reporters and printers shall not be called for jury duty. Dental surgeons go in the same class, but for what special reason it was not stated. The claim has long been that people engaged in newspaper work are apt to be prejudiced. In dealing with the story of a crime from its inception they are likely to have formed opinion regarding the guilt or innocence of persons charged.

The age limit for jurors was raised from 65 to 70 years, and in the discussion Hon. T. B. McQuesten remarked: "There are a lot of old fellows with nothing to do sitting around in their chairs basking in the sun."

One does not wish to place too much emphasis on a remark of that nature because it was undoubtedly intended merely as a remark and not as a considered opinion. The outcome of far too many trials in this province indicates that we are not so much in need of new laws as we are of jurors who will enforce existing ones. That refers in particular to the results of traffic cases where it is almost impossible to get a jury to convict on the charge of manslaughter following a fatal accident. How we are going to secure better jurors is something which we do not know, and we say that frankly. They may be in the class referred to as having nothing else to do but sit in a chair and bask in the sun, but somehow we doubt it.

A Mixed Situation

The first Great War began in what is now the territory of Yugoslavia. On June 28, 1914, a young Bosnian, Gavrio Prinzip, shot the heir to the throne of Austro-Hungary, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, when he visited in the sleepy town of Sarajevo, which was then part of Austria-Hungary, but claimed by Serbia. Within a month the war was on.

The kingdom of Yugoslavia came into existence after the war, and included Serbia, Montenegro and parts of what had been Austria-Hungary. The idea may have been sound enough, to group all the south Slavs in one nation, but the result was to bring together within one national boundary a strange mixture.

Serbo-Croat	9,000,000
Slovene	1,000,000
German	500,000
Magyar	500,000
Rumanian	250,000
Other Slavic tongues	250,000

There are thousands of Albanians there and in all the country has about 15,000,000 population, including polyglot minorities.

Right now Yugoslavia finds itself almost entirely surrounded by Nazi satellites. This way, according to border countries:

Italy	132 miles
Austria	160 "
Hungary	353 "
Bulgaria	283 "
Albania	277 "

There is a Greek frontage of 152 miles and the seacoast of the Adriatic, 1,000 miles, fronts on Italy. The army of Yugoslavia has been regarded as a good fighting force of almost 1,000,000, but if reports can be considered reliable, it is split between the Axis and British view. There appears to be nothing clear-cut in the entire situation, and the question today is: Will Yugoslavia, born in the last war, die in the present one?

Yet Another Problem

Farmers in the bean-growing section of Western Ontario had a delegation waiting on Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture. They have a problem with two features, (1) they have too many beans, and (2) the beans have too much moisture. The moisture content is now at 28 per cent., and we believe 18 per cent. is as high as it should go.

The bean men wanted the Government to do something about it. The foreign markets have been shot and Britain used to take 500,000 bushels annually, but the war has knocked the bottom from that outlet. The result is that beans which were quoted at $2.25 last fall cannot be sold today at half that figure.

If the moisture cannot be reduced then there is but one thing to do, and that is use the beans for feeding stock. When the price for beans went up sharply last year there were growers who did not desire to fill their contracts to deliver beans at $1 per bushel, and the bean merchants went to court about it and won their case—and the beans. Today they probably wonder what to do with them.

Should State The Facts

It is a most unusual story which appeared in a Toronto paper telling of the treatment of Bill Newell, who is in the Don Jail waiting his second trial on the charge of having murdered his wife. One prisoner who has just been released tells of the manner in which Newell has been beaten and how his arms were twisted. He had been placed in solitary confinement in the death cell.

We do not believe Newell would be an easy man to get along with in any place, as during the days of his trial he gave plenty of evidence of being short tempered and inclined to fight when he was in the court room.

But stories of that nature give the average reader a bad impression of what is taking place in the Don jail; they smack of abuse and physical punishment, and they lead away entirely from the chief idea that an imprisoned and accused man is considered innocent until judge or jury has declared him guilty. Now that the matter has reached the stage of the printed story those in charge of the jail or the administration of justice would be justified in making a full and accurate statement. Otherwise a serious injury is going to come upon the reputation of the place of confinement.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It seemed a little strange to read of a discussion in the House of Commons about the shortage of natural gas.

Tommy Farr, the Welsh boxer, had jewelry and prizes worth $17,000 stolen from his house while he slept. The thief proba y used a left hook.

A cousin of Benito Mussolini has been taken prisoner by the Greeks. Better keep working on that family tree until they land the big bluffer of Rome.

Possibly the dictionary would not agree, but our streets in recent weeks have fallen into three classes: Rutty, ruttier, ruttiest.

Court case at Oshawa centred around liquor which a woman claimed had been either made or designed for singeing chickens. The trouble came when it was turned to other uses.

A gentleman in Australia has sung at 16,000 church services, evensong each day and twice on Sunday. That is a fifty-year record, and probably as he goes through the book some of the notes must wink at him for old times' sake.

Many communities in Western Ontario have had the miserable problem of finding what to do in cold weather when they depended on natural gas for heating and cooking because the gas went down to the disappearing point. In our district we place more faith in the existence of a nice pile of wood. It is a comforting thing at which to look in zero weather.

IDEA

(By A.R.K.)

¶ The cars that come in forty-one, are dashing things that quickly run, I've watched them scooting by; their speed my Pink Sedan can't stem, I could not keep in sight of them, not even if I'd try.

¶ A salesman came to call on me, had I a little time that's free, I am a busy man; but he had something at the door, I hadn't seen the like before, 'twould beat my Pink Sedan.

¶ He told me that it had such power, that it did eighty miles an hour, that sounded rather brave; he figured out the trips I'd make, and of the time that they would take, and all the hours I'd save.

¶ He bade me get behind the wheel, and see myself just how I'd feel, just let her out a spell; and so I drove ten miles away, for gas I didn't have to pay, and that seemed rather swell.

¶ That notion seems just good to me, to ride around and do it free, I'll chant no hymn of hate; I'll call the dealers in the town, and say to bring their wares right down, so they can demonstrate.

¶ I'll drive to places that I know, steer just to where I want to go, and do the whole thing free; and when they press me for a deal, when I get out behind the wheel—I'll tell 'em I will see.

Harry Hopkins On Inside Track At Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Harry Hopkins

WASHINGTON.—Some of the congressmen who complain of President Roosevelt's alleged proclivity for sending unofficial, irresponsible emissaries abroad are reminding their co-complainants that the White House has, right here at home, a purely personal adviser with probably more influence there than anybody else in the United States. They mean Harry Hopkins.

Harry actually lives under the executive mansion's roof, eats at its table, virtually is a member of the presidential family. Persons who want F.D.R.'s endorsement of plans and policies they're interested in promoting know from experience that they can get it in no other way quite so certainly as by enlisting the aid of "Harry the Hop," provided he'll lend such aid.

Individuals and organizations whom and which he's helped naturally swear by him. There are others, however, that he's turned down. Just as naturally they swear, not by, but at him. Also there are politicians, some of them of considerable consequence, who resent the fact that a 100 per cent official outsider has a lot more pull at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. than they have themselves.

Illustrative, if a senator or representative, for instance, has in his bailiwick an important constituent or company or association with a proposition it seeks to have favorably presented to the nation's chief magistrate, it angers him to have Harry intially consulted over his head. It raises hades with his prestige at home.

HOPKINS' BAD START

WITH the public generally Harry got off to a bad start as head of relief. It practically was a huge welfare worker's job (Harry'd been a professional welfare worker) and a welfare administrator never is popular. Undeserving would-be reliefees, who are turned down, of course are frightfully sore. And those who are relieved usually are sore, too, on the ground that they didn't get enough.

As secretary of commerce he wasn't a howling success, on account of the state of his health, a lot of the folk he'd had contacts with, both politicians and businessmen, assumed that he was out of the picture permanently, and were mightily glad of it.

Instead, as the president's most trusted friend, he immediately became more powerful than ever, and absolutely free of having to answer to the disgruntled bunch, too. Then he was dispatched to England, to do precisely what nobody but F.D.R. had any idea. Nobody outside the White House knows yet, either.

That likewise miffed Capitol Hill, which thinks itself entitled to be asked to confirm our diplomatic appointments, with a chance to veto them if the Senate sees fit. To be sure, the presidential position was that Harry's wasn't a diplomatic appointment, but plenty of the solons think it was. They're normally jealous of the executive branch of Uncle Sam's government, anyway.

NOW HE'S BACK

AND, now that he's back in Washington, they say he's more potent and more irresponsible than he was before.

There isn't a cabinet member, from State Secretary Hull on down, it's asserted, who's presidentially listened to as confidingly as Harry is.

All this isn't to argue that he's all-around unpopular. The big businessmen in the defence organization get on with him admirably. He's prodefence and speaks for them to the White House tenant more effectively than they can do it for themselves, because F.D.R. likes him so much.

The original New Dealers are for him also. They've been pretty completely drowned out by the tremendous volume of the aid-Britain and domestic defensive chorus recently. Harry continues to stand pat for their socio-economic philosophy, though, and they rely on him to keep the boss from drifting away from it in the world emergency of today.

Harry's smart in the line of his specialty, which is welfare work mainly. That doubtless was why he made a hit with F.D.R., at the stage of the game when the latter was principally concerned with relief problems. Then, as he began to be more absorbed in the war situation, it's evident that he remained tied to Harry (who's no authority on foreign affairs) on account of Hopkins' unqualified likability, for the chap's personality is remarkably amiable and interesting.

But, officially, he's as irresponsible as a bird.

NOT THERE

A RESIDENT of Hamburg wrote to an American friend about the friend's brother: "I set out yesterday to call on your brother, and just imagine how forgetful and absent-minded I am becoming! I walked up and down the whole length of the street twice without finding the house." The American thereby knew that his brother's house had been destroyed by a British bomb.—The Nation.

3. Wartime Housing Limited will take action wherever a shortage of housing accommodation is shown to be impeding war-time production or delaying completion of a military construction project.

4. P.C. 1286, page 1, section (d) provides that Wartime Housing Limited is authorized to "purchase or otherwise dispose of, any real or personal property or interest therein which in the opinion of the minister is or is likely to be necessary or desirable for the carrying out of any of the powers conferred upon the minister by this act, or by the governor in council."

5. Wartime Housing Limited is authorized under P.C. 1286, section 7, to spend:

"From the moneys provided by parliament under the War Appropriation Act, 1940, or otherwise, one hundred thousand ($100,000) dollars shall be allotted to permit such living accommodation to be rented, purchased, constructed, or otherwise provided, and for the payment of necessary organization and administrative expenses; the said one hundred thousand ($100,000) dollars shall be placed at the disposal of such company when it is incorporated in such amounts, from time to time, as the minister may deem advisable; and the said company shall not enter into commitments exceeding ten million ($10,000,000) dollars without a further order in council."

6. This is a matter of government policy which is now under consideration and will be disclosed in due course.

• Britain Has the Advantage

EVERY DAY which passes without actual armed conflict in the Balkans is a day of victory for Great Britain and her allies. Time is on the side of England in Greece, just as it is on the side of England in the war as a whole.

As long as the Balkan front merely bubbles without actually erupting, Britain can increase the power of her Balkan army. The Eritrean campaign is entering its final stage. Britain may be able to mop up the Italians in East Africa and then ship those troops with their supplies to Greece before Hitler steps across the Greek-Turkish border.

Each additional day of inaction throws Hitler's boasted time-schedule further and further out of line. It gives him another broken promise to explain to the German nation.

A few weeks ago Hitler told his followers that the moment British soldiers set foot on Greek soil the Nazi army would smash the Greeks along with their British friends. Yet ten days ago at least 35,000 British soldiers landed in Greece and Hitler has only delivered another bombastic speech.

All last summer Nazi leaders of every rank confidently promised that by September 1 (later revised to September 15 and then to October 1) the British Isles would be occupied and crushed. That catastrophe is already six months' overdue and looking more remote by the hour.

The old fable about the boy who cried "Wolf" could be rewritten about the Dictator who cries "Victory." Let the word be shouted falsely too many times, the audience will lose faith in the orator, even that part of the audience which holds the Dictator in highest esteem.

Leland Stowe wrote in his uncensored series, "Unless Hitler gets the jackpot before 1941 slips past, the game will be up for Nazis and Nazism." By "the jackpot" Stowe meant the British Isles. He added that Hitler would have to invade England before this July or never, because by mid-summer the steady increase in Britain's power would make the islands impregnable.

Stowe added that Hitler cannot try the invasion unless the Balkans at his back are quiet and unless there is an uninterrupted flow of supplies from Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

Hitler is in bad. The Balkan back door is not only open, but the British, Turk and Greek armies stand ready to keep it so. The danger is reduced that Nazi might can subdue Balkan resistance by July, much less invade the British Isles. And the clock ticks on, bringing closer the day when the bridge of ships bringing material aid from the United States can remove that danger altogether.—New York Post.

A Bit of Nonsense

Sure Winner

"Now, ladies and gents," said the cheapjack, holding up a shilling, "here's a chance for everyone. A silver shilling—how much will you give me for it?"

As he expected, bids came quickly. Finally, a small boy said:

"Elevenpence."

"Very well, my lad," said the cheapjack, "the shilling's yours. Hand up your elevenpence."

The boy shook his head.

"Take it out of the shilling and give me the change," he said.

Fair Play

Father criticized the sermon, mother disliked the blunders of the organist, and the eldest daughter thought the choir's singing atrocious. The subject had to be dropped when the small boy of the family, with the schoolboy's love of fair play, chipped in:—

"Dad, I think it was a jolly good show for a penny."

Cutting!

She was having a good old wifely nag, and hubby was losing his patience, although so far he hadn't answered a word. Perhaps that was why his wife suddenly burst out with:

"Nothing I ever say to you bears fruit."

"Perhaps it might if you pruned it a bit!" he retorted.

Still Nil

Fan (arriving late)—"What's the score?"

Friend—"Nothing to nothing."

Fan—"Good game?"

Friend—"Don't know. It hasn't started yet."

O.K. Now

The examiner was questioning a candidate for the position of engine-driver.

"You are driving an engine down a steep incline at an excessive speed. What do you do?"

"Make a brake application," said the candidate.

"Doesn't act," shot back the examiner.

"Put brake handle into emergency position."

"Does not reduce speed sufficiently," went on the examiner.

"Reverse the engine and turn on steam," said the candidate.

"The wheels refuse to grip the metals."

"Pour sand on the metals."

"Sand is damp and won't pass through the pipes." The examiner put the question with an air of triumph. "Now what do you do?"

"Let her rip. We've reached the level now."

The Sunny Side

Waiting outside the theatrical agent's office, two world-worn actors were discussing the world.

"I suppose you've seen, laddie, that the Government has prohibited the import of bananas?" said the one with the blue chin.

"Yes," replied the one with the moth-eaten fur collar. "There is also a shortage of eggs, and the high price of tomatoes should restrain the gallerylites, too. It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good, laddie!"

Time's Awasting

First little bird: "Hoo's that sitting on the park bench below us?"

Second little bird: "That's the guy who fired buckshot at us the other day."

Third little bird: "Well, wot are we waitin' for?"

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept when we remembered Zion.

We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

For there they that carried us away captive required of us a song, and they that wasted us required of us mirth.

How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?

If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning.

If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy.—Psalm 137.

Nothing Serious

An R.A.S.C. recruit had had his first spell driving an Army lorry. On his return he had to report a slight mishap.

"Sorry, sarge, and all that," he announced brightly, "but I ran down a man."

"Good heavens!" gasped the sergeant. "Was it serious?"

"Oh, no; just bent a wing and scratched the paint a bit!"

The Occurrence

"One the day on which my wedding occurred—"

"You'll pardon the correction, but affairs such as marriages, receptions, dinners, and things of that sort 'take place.' It is only calamities which 'occur.' You see the distinction?"

"Yes, I see. As I was saying, the day on which my wedding occurred—"

OAK FLOORING

The best oak flooring comes from the Southern States. There is a possibility before the end of this year, due to the exchange situation, that this most excellent oak will not be allowed to be imported. Therefore it would be wise to plan to lay new oak floors now while there is still quantities available. Prices have not advanced — a room 10 x 10 would cost approximately $9.50 for the flooring.

NORTHERN ONTARIO TEAM ELIMINATED BY SENIOR OHA WINNERS

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Pittsburgh Pirates: Pitchers Hold Fate

By JACK SORDS

On the good, or bad, right or left arms of several pitchers lie the Pittsburg Pirates' hopes for a high first division berth in the National league race this year.

Manager Frankie Frisch has one ace in Rip Sewell, who copped 16 games for the Bucs last season. Of the 15 other hurlers on the staff, Frisch hopes to find regular winning tossers who may snap the Bucs out of it and cause trouble all around the loop.

Russ Bauers, a Pirate star two years ago, has been handicapped by a bad arm. He failed to win a game last year. He apparently is ready this season after much treatment.

The case of Johnny Gee, the $75,000 six-foot-nine-inch rookie beauty of a year ago will merit much attention. Gee proved in the minors he had plenty of stuff. He injured his arm in the 1940 training campaign was out the whole year.

Manager Frisch is high in his praise of rookie Dick Conger, a draftee from Beaumont who still hasn't reached his 20th birthday. Conger, a U.C.L.A. collegian star in 1939, got in 30 games with Beaumont last season and has impressed all in the Pirate camp.

Holdover pitchers include Mace Brown, Joe Bowman, Al Butcher, Ken Heintzelman, Bob Klinger, Dick Lanahan, John Lanning and Oadis Swigart. Aldon Wilkie, who won 13 games for Seattle last season, may stick with the club.

Catching is well protected with Al Lopez and Virgil Davis around. In the infield Lee Handley will handle the hot corner, Arky Vaughn, short; Frankie Gustine at second and Elbie Fletcher at first. Among the newcomers are Stuart Martin, second sacker with the Cards last year, and Alfie Anderson, a .351 clouted with Atlanta last season. He is a shortstop.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The Bruins and Leafs made no new history in the opening stages of their Stanley Cup series. The Toronto outfit has never won the opening game of a playoff in Boston and has never lost the second game. This time tradition has held good. The Bruins won the opening Thursday night by a 3 to 0 score and the Leafs came back Saturday night to win a 6 to 3 decision over the Rosmen, and incidentally set up a season's record by scoring five goals in a row against the Bruins, something that just isn't done as a general rule. The Boston team was without Bill Cowley and Bobby Bauer and tried to get by through juggling their lines and using only three defence players. For a while it looked as if they were going to get away with it for they led 2 to 0 at the end of the first period. The Leafs however poured it on all through the second period, banged four goals past Brimsek and had the game well won before the final twenty minutes started.

* * * * * *

Whether or not the Leafs had been stung by newspaper accusations that some of them dogged it in the first game they certainly played with a lot more determination Saturday night and had a lot more luck converting their scoring chances into goals. They were outshot by the Bruins. On this occasion they made their opportunities count while the Boston gang with more chances blew most of them and had to take the small end of the score. Three of Toronto's goals were scored by Nick Metz and Hamilton, neither of whom have been shining lights in a scoring sense this season. Eddie Wiseman who is leading the Boston attack so far got two of his club's three counters.

Now the clubs move into Toronto for two games, Tuesday and Thursday and there should be a lot of action packed into those battles. What fandom is waiting to see now is whether the Bruins for whom Saturday's defeat was their second in 34 games will pick up where they left off or if they will bog down. The odds are that Saturday's defeat will mean little or nothing so far as Boston morale is concerned. When Rangers finally broke their long string of games without a loss the Boston club started right in winning again immediately after and they are likely to do that very same thing now. The chances are that the cripples on both sides will be back in action again, with the possible exception of Bingo Kampman. With Apps added to the Leafs and Cowley and Bauer out there for Boston the quality of hockey should show an immediate pickup.

And now it's Kingston or Owen Sound for the Senior B honros. The Combines who defeated Peterborough in a tough playoff series and the Sounders who were ousted by the Petes last season from the Intermediate A round robin series are billed to tie into each other in a best four-of-seven clash for the title. The length of the final series justified only by the gate receipts it involves, shows the change that has come over the hockey setup. Not so long ago the arrangement would have been home-and-home games, goals to count. A few years later it would have been the best two-of-three games. Last year it would likely have been a three-of-five round. Now, however, the teams have gone the whole hog with a seven game possibility. The first two games will be played in Kingston on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week and then the teams clash in two games at Owen Sound. What has become of the problem of studying so far as the Queen's players on the Kingston team is concerned is by no means clear. When they were hustling the series with the Petes through the Combines were worried a lot about the students and their exams. With four games on the cards this week it is a cinch the studying will not amount to much until the Owen Sound series is over.

With the winter sport season ,so far as Peterborough is concerned, practically a matter of history, this column has to acknowledge a large measure of assistance that has been cheerfully rendered by sport executives in various lines who have co-operated with us most helpfully all season and made the task of holding up the mirror to Peterborough sport a pleasant task. In this connection we most gratefully mention the following without whose co-operation much sport news might have been neglected: Rev. Father Houlihan, South-End Hockey League; Cec Courneya, juvenile hockey; Jim Ferguson, Collegiate basketball; Gord Minty, swimming; Herb Martin, curling; George Groombridge, carpetball; Eric Westbye, skiing; Jim Ellis, Archie Weir, Frank Buckland and other O.H.A. team executives; Howie Macdonald and Sybil Ecobichon, Ladies' Basketball League and other good friends of sport and of The Examiner who have made the job lighter. Thanks, folks, and better luck next winter for all Peterborough sports, say we.

New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens kept their series alive by winning their home games with Detroit and Chicago respectively in hectic games in which all the teams seemed to start out with the idea of knocking each other clear out of the rink. Referees both at New York and Montreal had their hands full but they tossed out penalties until the clubs realized that they might as well settle down and play hockey. Rangers took the Red Wings 3 to 1, getting the only counter of the first period, splitting a pair of goals with Detroit in the second and clinching the game with another marker in the final canto. They play the third game in Detroit tomorrow and the Rangers have to overcome not only the Red Wings but their old jinx, the Detroit arena where they have won only once in three years of hockey.

The veteran Charlie Sands was the ultimate hero of the Canadien-Chicago game for it was he who sank the winning goal after 34 minutes of overtime, giving the Flying Frenchmen a 4 to 3 win and knotting up the series and making a third game in Chicago tomorrow night necessary. The real star from a Canadien standpoint however was the rookie winger Joe Benoit who performed the hat trick by scoring three goals in a row against the Hawks, a noteable feat at any time but something of a record for Stanley Cup hockey. Like the Rangers-Wings' game tomorrow night the third clash between Canadiens and Black Hawks should be a thrilling tussle and is anybody's battle. On the form shown in the first two games in both cases the clubs are about as even as you could find anywhere.

A golf school is a new feature of Y.M.C.A. activity. It has just got under way with Lex Robson, pro of the Kawartha Golf and Country Club, as mentor, a driving court has been installed in one of the handball courts and budding golfers and others whose game is more advanced can get practice and instruction through the medium of this new department. Hours have also been reserved for lady golfers. Tonight two most interesting films will be shown at the Y, one dealing with golf technique generally and the other showing Lex Robson's style and swing etc. Incidentally that swing has been the foundation of a great record which has seen Robson capture the Ontario professional title six times in the last ten years, grab off the Ontario open, finish in the runner-up position in the Canadian professional event in 1933 and wind up as the first Canadian in the Canadian open three times and the second Canadian in the event on two other occasions, a most consistent performance for Robson.

South Porcupine Passed Out Of 1941 Hockey

TORONTO, March 24 (CP) — South Porcupine Bisons passed into the discard today as Toronto Marlboros, their conquerors for the Ontario Senior Amateur Hockey championship went in search of further glories in the Allan Cup field.

Marlboros ousted the Northern Ontario team and the Canadian title hunt here Saturday afternoon by winning 5-0 in the third game of their best-of-three series. Previously each team had won a game by the same score, 2-1. With their victory Marlboros gained the right to meet Montreal Royals in a best-of-five Eastern Canadian semi-final, with the opening game being played tonight in Montreal.

Although goalie Baz Bastien's play was spectacular in the first two contests he rose to even greater heights in the first 30 minutes of the deciding contest to keep Bisons from scoring. The Bisons threw everything into that 30 minute offensive and when it failed they were too weary to match Marlboros the rest of the way.

For the first eight and a half minutes of the game Marlboros didn't have a single shot on goalie Kemp of South Porcupine.

Marlboros, a team noted for their ability to take advantage of every break, finally got their opportunity shortly after the half-way mark of the second period. Johnny Inglis broke away from a four-man Bison attack with Eddie Shamlock at his side and only one defenceman to beat. Inglis drew the Bison rearguard aside and passed to Shamlock, who found the net easily.

George McNamara added another less than three minutes after and in the third period Shamlock got his second tally, while George Imlach and Eddie King also beat Kemp.

Campbellford Bowlers Honor Former President And His Wife

CAMPBELLFORD, March 24.—(ENS).—Campbellford Bowling Club honored one of its former presidents at their annual meeting which took the form of a social held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Bennett on Friday evening. The guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Locke, the former having served two terms as president of the club was eulogized in word by J. P. Archer who spoke of the fine leadership he had given the club during the time he was president and also when serving on committees. To Mr. and Mrs. Locke the speaker presented a walnut coffee table as a token of appreciation and a farewell gift prior to their removal to Arnprior next month. The guests of honor both replied appropriately thanking members for their kind thoughts and best wishes.

The evening was spent in playing various games with Mrs. T. L. Diamond winning at Chinese checkers, Bert Taylor taking the high score in euchre and Mrs. J. D. Mills and Mr. P. M. Locke winning at bridge.

Apart from the election of officers the principal item emanating from the business fas a resolution that all prizes awarded during the coming season should be war savings stamps. J. P. Archer read the minutes of the last meeting and J. D. Mills gave the treasurer's report. It was decided the club should again be affiliated with the Trent Valley league and they appointed C. W. Palliser and Chas. Calver as representatives to attend the annual meeting. Five delegates were appointed to attend the district meeting in Belleville on March 26th. They are Bert Taylor, A. D. Cleveland Leads Providence By Extra Game

(By the Associated Press.)

First stage of the American Hockey League's playoff series has disproved the old theory that the home team almost always wins but if Cleveland Barons can revive that idea tomorrow they'll step right into the final round for the Calder Cup.

The Barons, winners of the Western division title, got an even break in the first two games at Providence and then took the lead over Providence Reds with a 4-2 triumph at Cleveland Saturday. The fourth game is scheduled for Cleveland tomorrow night as the champions of the two divisions battle on a three-of-five basis, the Barons need only one more victory to give the West a clean sweep.

Two Teams Eliminated

Hershey Bears and Pittsburg Hornets, who finished the season second and third in the western group, broke through on eastern rinks to eliminate New Haven and Springfield, respectively, in best-of-three preliminaries. They open their semi-final series at Pittsburg tomorrow with the remaining games to be played at Hershey Thursday and Saturday.

Hershey won the second-place round in two straight against games while Pittsburg made it two-of-three against Springfield's Indians last Saturday when Eddie Convey scored after 22 seconds of overtime play to give Hornets a 2-1 victory.

Cleveland's triumph was the result of a third period rally that thrilled a record crowd of 11,882. The Barons tied the score at 2-2 early in the period then took advantage of a penalty to Emil Bouchard to get the winning tally with less than four minutes to go. Jake Milford hit the unprotected net for another tally when the Reds were staging a six-man attack near the finish

Red Wings Rangers Whip In Second Game

NEW YORK, Mar. 24—(CP). — Flattened in their first Stanley Cup defence, New York Rangers got off the floor last night and squared their preliminary playoff series with Detroit Red Wings by whipping the Wings 3-1 before a crowd of 14,019.

Thriving on the robust, smashing exchanges that marked the contest, Rangers won going away. They were beaten 2-1 on Thursday night in Detroit, and must return to Detroit ice for the deciding game of their best-of-three series on Tuesday night.

Winner of the series meets Montreal Canadiens or Chicago Black Hawks in the semi-final round.

The champions faltered at times in the face of stiff checking, but they attacked all the way and led at every post. Babe Pratt, the lanky defenceman, scored in the first period on a relay from Phil Watson and Bryan Hextall.

The Wings tied it up early in the second, Don Grosso's low shot from the left boards dribbling over the goal line after striking the instep of Goalie Dave Kerr. Alex Shibicky made it 2-1 for Rangers at 11:30 of the same period, and the Wings were rarely able to break through the New York defences after that blow.

In the last minute of the game Mac Colville broke up a Detroit rush and skated in close on Johnny Mowers for an easy clincher.

All the real fireworks exploded in the first two periods, and the first stanza was a rousing slambang session in which Referee Mickey Ion handed out eleven penalties for slashing, roughing, high-sticking and tripping.

Three of these went to Jimmy Orlando, Detroit's jolting defenceman. So effectively did Ion deal with the outbreaks that only two penalties were called in the second period and none in the third.

The star Ranger forward division of Shibicky and Neil and Mac Colville led the blue shirts all the way Detroit held its own except when these first-stringers were on the ice. Then Mowers found himself showered with rubber.

Some Ball Camp Training Notes

By The Canadian Press .. ..

FORT MEYERS, Fla., March 24 (AP)—Cleveland Indians already are looking forward to their tour northward with the New York Giants. They beat the Terrymen 2-1 yesterday to square their eight-year Spring rivalry with the Giants at 43 victories apiece. The teams have a dozen games left against each other.

LEESBURG, Fla. — Manager Bucky Harris of the Washington Senators was depressed today at possibility of losing third baseman Buddy Lewis to the United States army. Lewis banged out five hits in six trips yesterday as the Nats whaled Detroit Tigers 15-5.

MIAMI, Fla.—Shortstop Bill Jurges is back in a New York Giants uniform with an encouraging report from the Mayo Clinic on the dizzy spells that have plagued him since he was beaned last Summer. He said he received 14 injections and the doctors told him to resume practice and that the dizziness probably would not return.

SARSOTA, Fla. — Manager Joe Cronin is hoping Boston Red Sox may finally realize some of the pitching the club always has hoped for from Jack Wilson. He worked six innings against Louisville yesterday and allowed only three hits.

LAKE WALES, Fla.—All winter New York Yankees brain trusters said the only problem in the way of a pennant was pitching. This problem is looking less difficult now. Until St. Louis Cards scored two runs in the seventh yesterday, the Yankee hurlers had worked 16 scoreless innings and Red Ruffing, one of the club's question marks, worked three of the shut out frames in his debut against the Redbirds.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Jack Russell, veteran big league pitcher, showed up at Brooklyn Dodgers camp and declared, "I see by the papers that I'm on the Brooklyn club, so I thought I'd better show up here." The Dodgers announced Saturday they had hired Russell as a batting practice pitcher, but he said the first he knew about it was when he saw the story in print.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Eddie Collins, Jr., son of the one-time member of Connie Mack's famous $100,000 infield, is bolstering his bid for a regular job with Philadelphia Athletics by his good hitting. He got a double, a single and a base on balls against Pittsburg yesterday.

LEAFS EVEN SERIES, DEFEATING BRUINS 5 TO 3 IN SECOND GAME

Inspired Leafs Skate Bruins Off Their Feet

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

BOSTON, March 24.—(CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs, who looked dangerously close to a subdued squad in the first game, surged back with all their oldtime power Saturday night to defeat Boston Bruins 5-3 and send their Stanley Cup series into tomorrow night's third game, all even at one victory each.

When the crowd of 16,200 fans saw a short-handed Boston team race into a 2-0 lead in the first half period of Saturday's game, they expected a repetition of Frankie Brimsek's shutout victory, 3-0, scored Thursday.

But that spurt was the only effective hockey that Boston could manage. They were short Bill Cowley, stellar centre, and Bobby Bauer, brilliant right wing. Boston had no replacements and went out to do battle with only 12 men, and their goalie.

Bruins Exhausted

The inspired Leafs skated them into the ice, checked them hard and often, and won going away with several of the Bruins, notably Flash Hollett, Art Jackson, and Herb Cain, close to utter exhaustion.

The Leafs were without two stars, Centre Syl Apps, and Defenceman Bingo Kampman, but they had ample replacements.

Second Period

The second period told the tale of the game. Leafs trailed 2-0 at its start, led 4-2 when it finished. Here is the story of those four goals.

1—Davidson went tearing into the Boston corner and slapped a pass to Gordie Drillon's stick as the big wingman was parked just outside the crease. Drillon stopped it and slammed it into the net in one quick motion. The time was 2:33.

2—Reg Hamilton leaned on a hard shot from near the Boston blue line. Defenceman Dit Clapper and Jack Crawford split to cover the wings and the puck sailed between them, eluding Brimsek's leg. The time was 7:30.

3—Nick Metz took a forward pass from Wally Stanowski and blazed a sizzling backhander high across Brimsek's chest at 15:00.

4—Nick Metz raced into pick up Davidson's rebound and fire it into the cage before Brimsek could get settled down after the first save. The time was 15:47.

Don Metz Scores

The third period had barely got underway when Don Metz fired home a long shot giving Toronto a long lead with which to outlast the Bruins.

Bruins fitted Art Jackson into Cowley's place between Roy Conacher and Eddie Wiseman. This proved their best scoring combination.

Wiseman got two goals, one in the first period and one in the third, both on pretty passing plays with his linemates. The other Boston goal went to Milt Schmidt, centre, on the only glaring error Toronto made all night. He was able to shoot through a maze of legs while Drillon, Hamilton and Bucko McDonald milled around, without making a move to check him.

"Turk" Happy Winner Of Trophy

Goalie "Turk" Broda of the Toronto Maple Leafs was overjoyed as he witnessed Boston Bruins send four counters through Goalie Johnny Mowers of the Detroit Red Wings, giving him the coveted Vezina trophy. The joyful "Turk" is shown autographing a program for a fan after witnessing the downfall of Mr. Mowers The Bruins had their revenge when they sank three counters behind Mr. Broda in the first game of the Stanley Cup playoffs between the Leafs and the Bruins.

Canadiens Even Series With Chicago

Teams Near Exhaustion

The veteran Sands, injured and out of action in the first game which the Hawks won 2 to 1 in Chicago Thursday, fired the winning goal after 34.04 minutes of "sudden death" overtime. It came from a pile-up in front of the Chicago net to force a deciding game in the best-of-three series back in Chicago Tuesday.

Both teams were near exhaustion from the rugged "no-quarter" struggle when Sands got the puck on a rebound after Goalie Sammie Lo Presti had made two successive saves. Standing to one side of the Chicago net, he flipped it between the prostrate Lo Presti and the goalpost.

For a moment there was silence, then a tumultuous cheer rose from the crowd of about 11,000 as realization came that the game was over. Sands waved his stick in the air and shouted that it was the "happiest birthday present I ever received" as mates crowded around to slap his back and hug him.

The tally climaxed a fiercely fought game that saw neither team ever hold more than a one-goal edge. Joe Benoit, brilliant rookie winger, scored all three of the Canadien goals in regular time while the Chicago counters went to Cully Dahlstrom, Joe Cooper and Little Mush March, whose tally halfway through the third period deadlocked the count at 3-3.

Tempers ran high throughout the game as grudges, evidently carried over from the first game, were aired frequently. Every time two players on opposing teams came together it was a signal for sticks to rise and Referee Frank Clancy handed out two majors and fifteen minor penalties in an effort to keep the players in check.

N.H.L. Needs Amerks Smythe Declares

BOSTON, March 24 (CP)—Conny Smythe, manager of Toronto Maple Leafs, said Saturday that his organization will fight "with everything we have" to keep New York Americans in the National Hockey League.

Smythe was asked for comment on a statement issued by Art Ross, manager of Boston Bruins, who declared that new financial interests should take over the Americans, ending the present system under which Frank Calder, president of the league, is also president of the Americans.

Smythe said he did not think it was up to him to make any recommendations to Madison Square Garden in New York as to who their tenants should be. But he felt that the Americans, the oldest New York club in the league, rich in tradition and with a host of admirers, should not only remain in the league, but should be aided until they are one of its strongest clubs.

Bruins Take Toronto 3-0 In First Game Of Series

Oshawa Juniors Drop Third Game To Marlboros By Score Of 8 to 6

TORONTO, March 24.—Evidence cohesive effort of the season, accumulated seven scoring points, of which five were goals. Depew and Percival line turned in its finest Gillespie got one goal and two assists. The Wiest-Stewart-Dew unit was overshadowed by Oshawa's W. Wilson-Sawyer-McAtee line, but Stewart, back to old form, scored two important goals. McLaughlin and Smythe turned in stellar efforts in utility roles. Dickens, Goldham and Morris never looked better defensively and contributed six scoring points. Joe Cleary played a standout game in the nets.

Wally Wilson again stole the spotlight for the Generals. He scored twice and assisted in a third. His linemates, Roy Sawyer and Norm McAtee, gave him able assistance. All told, this line procured seven scoring points. Jim Conacher, Frankie Eddolls, and Stan Rooke were other yeoman-like workmen for the losers.

to support the theory that Oshawa's Junior hockey dynasty is slowly crumbling was offered in compelling manner by Hal Cotton's Marlboros, Saturday night. The star-studded Dukes, striking in blitz fashion in the first period, rode to an 8-6 victory over the Generals. Today they lead the 4-of-7 for the O.H.A. championship, two games to one, with the fourth combat slated for Oshawa, Wednesday night.

Marlboros never looked more impressive than in the first period of Saturday's tussle. Hotter than a tropical noon-hour, the Duke's forged a 5-0 lead before the plucky Oshawa team hit the score sheet. Over the rest of the route, the Generals, gambling desperately to get back in the contention, fought a furious, if futile, uphill fight. They made their most valiant bid for victory in the final period. Trailing, 7-3, going into the closing session, the Generals rapped in two quick goals but couldn't close the gap.

Ernie Dickens, who came through with his finest two-way performance of the season, sparked Marlboros to victory. The big defenceman, who twice previously had sailed through on sparkling solo efforts which just failed to click, assisted in the pair of goals that started the Dukes on the way.

There wasn't a weak link on the Toronto team. The Gillespie-Depew-Percivale line turned in its finest

Norwood Farms Aim To Boost Milk Production

NORWOOD, March 24.—(ENS).—A very interesting meeting took place recently in Norwood Town Hall where a considerable number of farmers gathered to study the boost of milk production as a war effort throughout the province.

C. A. Elliott, president of the Peterborough County Cheese Producers was chairman, and the meeting was addressed by Wm. Newman, assistant chairman of the Ontario Marketing Board, W. J. Moore, County Dairy Instructor, F. C. Paterson, County Agricultural Representative, Joseph Tulley, Holstein breeder of Peterborough, Harold Wood of Trent Bridge cheese factory, and Melville Johnson, president of the Federation of Agriculture for Peterborough County.

The slogan "300 pounds of milk per cow for 1941" has been adopted, which is something for all farmers to aim at. There were several suggestions made for the increase of production, some of which were, open the cheese factories earlier, cut hay earlier, give better feed and use the aftermath for pasture, sow some rye to give green pasture in the fall.

Raising the quality was stressed, also the "clean up plan," "In the next four weeks clean up the stable and whitewash everywhere."

Mr. Elliott stated that in 1940 there were 12,162 boxes of cheese graded in this county. Of that number 2,965 were 94 score and 7,042 were 93 score. These brought a premium of $11,674.80. If all had been of 94 score we would have received about $10,216.80 more.

With the Dominion and Provincial bonuses farmers are assured of 19 cents per pound for high scoring cheese for 1941.

of four Pratt and Whitney engines which developed 1,200 horsepower at the take-off, are said to have a range of 3,000 miles—enough to bomb any point in Italy, Germany or Nazi-occupied countries from Royal Air Force bases in Britain.

They could fly non-stop from England to Egypt or from England to Sofia, Bulgaria, and back, and are credited with a top speed of 335 miles an hour.

The Aircraft Production Minister said close collaboration between the United States and Britain was the "crowning deed" made possible by the war.

"And how has it come about?" he asked, answering:—

"Through the leadership of (Prime Minister) Churchill, through the vision of the President (Roosevelt), through the foresight of my own countryman, Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, through the heroic resistance of the British people, and through the wave of comradeship and resistance they have awakened in the American nation."

Union of Interest

A blessing of the war, he said, was "more that when victory is won we shall enjoy a union of interest and purpose between two sundered fragments of the Anglo-Saxon race.

"Such a mighty concentration of power and influence will subdue the proud and hold in check the wicked, will secure peace in their occupation to men of good will.

"The Canadian Dominion, looking out to Britain over the seas and to the United States of American over the border, has brought us nearer, one to another. Perhaps we will be joined together again.

"How I long for the day. It has been a life work with me, and now perhaps is crowned with triumph through disaster."

The Aircraft Production Minister named only one of the new types of engines—the Sabre—and said that G. P. Bulman, for many years in charge of engine production in the Air and Aircraft Production Ministries, was largely responsible for it.

The Sabre has been disclosed to have the highest power output of any British type which has passed official trials. It also has an extremely small frontal area.

What Nazis Did To Glasgow With Indiscriminate Bombing

Air raid wardens and rescue workers are shown probing through ruins of a building in the Clydeside area of Glasgow, Scotland, after a German air raid on the city. The Air and Home Security Ministries announced March 18, that about 1,000 persons were killed in the recent raids on the Glasgow and Liverpool areas. 1,300 persons were listed as injured.

Marmora Club Presents Play

MARMORA, March 24—(Special)—"You Can't Beat the Irish," a rollicking three-act comedy by Wilbur Braun, was presented Monday night by the Dramatic Club of Sacred Heart Church, Marmora. The hall was crowded to capacity and there was not a dull moment from the rise of the curtain to the singing of the National Anthem.

The play is one that interests all, as it relates the simple story of the sort of people whom one is accustomed to meet and like in everyday life. There is plenty of excitement, mystery and romance as the plot unfolds itself, and many humorous situations that appeal whether one is Irish or not.

The Cast

Mrs. James Black, as Mary Malone, the typical Irish mother, played the heaviest role, with an ease and grace that won general admiration. Her Irish brogue as she carried on the witty dialogue was pleasing. Miss Mary Alice Murray showed considerable talent as she played the difficult role of Peggy Malone, the beautiful movie-struck daughter, in a highly creditable manner, causing much laughter with her high-toned airs. Tommy Malone, the breadwinner of the family, was very capably portrayed by Harold Auger. He took the part of the level-headed older brother in a most convincing manner. His beautiful rendition of Mother Machree added considerbly to the play.

Bernard Finnegan was very appropriately cast as Danny Malone, the youngest son, and played the role with a naturalness that won the heart of the audience. Steve O'Hara, the shy, manly Irish chap, was played by Eugene Reynolds. He caused gales of laughter with his bashful laugh. Armand Ravel, his cousin from France, was successfully played by Breen O'Connor. He afforded much amusement by his gestures and French accent. The role of shy, awkward Ellen-Murphy was admirably taken by Miss Margaret Shannon. William Meighan gave a splendid portrayal of Dennis Dooley, head of the plain-clothes squad.

Miss Rita Deacon as Nora Moriarity played her comedy part to perfection. The role of Sylvia Carston, a mysterious figure, was played with grace and charm by Miss Mary Paquet. Anna Ravolin, her maid, was cleverly played by Miss Margaret O'Connor.

Musical Numbers

Preceding the play, Mrs. H. A. McNally played several beautiful Irish airs. Between Acts I and II little Patricia Laton sang, very sweetly, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and "Blueberry Hill." Rev. H. J. Farrell's beautiful tenor voice charmed the audience as he sang, "A Little Bit of Heaven" and "Oft In The Stilly Night." Verna Black, in quaint Irish costume, danced an Irish jig, responding to an encore in her usual charming manner.

Between Acts II and III, Harold Auger's fine voice showed to advantage in his vocal selection "Beautiful Erin." James Black, in comic costume and make-up under the title "Shawn McGilley," gave a humorous reading entitled "Pat's Dilemma," and a comic Irish song "Meself," which were heartily applauded. A clever exhibition of step dancing was given by Howard Pringle.

Mrs. H. A. McNally and Mrs. J. Black were the pianists for the evening. Harold Auger and Eugene Reynolds were the accompanists.

The play was directed by Mrs. Black and showed the time and care expended on it. At its conclusion, Mrs. Black was presented with a beautiful bonuquet of Spring flowers as a mark of appreciation from the cast. The presentation was made by Paula Nicholson, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nicholson. The singing of "God Save the King," brought a very successful evening to a close.

The cast and those helping in the program were then invited downstairs, where a delightful luncheon was served by several friends.

Hun Fields Bad

The night was the second in succession during which Britain, presumably because of bad weather over Germany's continental flying fields, had a breathing spell from heavy assault.

"Only a small number of enemy aircraft operated against this country last night," a communique said. "A few bombs dropped in Eastern England damaged houses and caused some casualties."

Neither were there any major raids on Britain during the day yesterday when the R.A.F. swept down the French coast from Calais to Brittany.

A communique said a block of German barracks was destroyed by high explosives in an attack on the port of Quiberon, near Lorient, and a German escort vessel described as an anti-aircraft ship was hit near Brest.

In last night's offensive operations, the Air Ministry said, docks, shipbuilding yards and the canal at Kiel were targets of the raid—the 35th of the war—on that great German port.

Oil refineries, rail stations and junctions were objectives at Hanover the ministry said. It was the 31st raid there and an announcement said: "Several very heavy explosions in Hanover were observed from a distance by other bombers taking part in the raid on Berlin."

PITY THE FARMER

City dwellers who rant because they have to shovel narrow sidewalks ten or twelve feet long should take a trip out the highway and admire the big drifts that straddle several of the farm lanes adjoining the highway. Where the lanes meet the highway in some places, there are drifts seven and eight feet high, and the farmers have shovelled the lanes clear so that they might drive cars to the highway.

Water from melting snow and ice is coursing down most of the city streets at midday but in the country it is another story. Former Peterborough Girl Writes Thanking Red Cross For Clothing

Mrs. S. T. Wallis, 39 Manning avenue, has received the following grateful letter from Mrs. Beatrice (Blewett) Williyams, vice-president of the Cornwall branch of the British Red Cross Society, extolling the assistance and the work of the members of the Canadian Red Cross.

"Dear Mrs. Wallis:

I have been hoping for some time to find a few free minutes to answer your kind letter and to thank you and all Red Cross workers in Peterborough, and in fact all over Canada, for the tremendous help you are giving us here in England.

We do appreciate every stitch you put in, and I can assure you that none of it is being sold, but, instead, is put to such good use that it breaks one's heart to think and to see homeless people, and especially the children, in such need to help.

I have had many beautiful gifts of clothing, etc., from Canada, and with the last terrific need we were able to clothe almost 1,800 children. I was the proudest woman in England when that was achieved.

Will you please thank all your friends and organizations for doing what they have done, and we, who receive the goods, do all we can to issue them in places where they are most needed. The great joy of having the clothes in my own house, is that they are on the needy victims at once, and no one suffers through having to wait for permission through other channels.

Thank you again for your kind thoughts and aid to our sufferers. Yours sincerely, Beatrice Williyams."

Mrs. Williyams went overseas from Peterborough as a nursing sister in the last war, and is remembered by her many friends of those pre-war years in this city.

Oppose War Loans

VANCOUVER, March 24.—(CP). —The British Columbia Co-operative Commonwealth Federation Party, ending its three-day convention here last night, went on record as opposed to Canada's present system of financing the war by interest-bearing loans and advocated the socialization of all war industries and financial institutions in the Dominion. Coupled with this resolution was another urging a 100 per cent tax on all war efforts and heavier taxation on all profits.

Market Clerk Question Being Reviewed

The decision of the property committee of the council to defer for three months the letting of a new contract for the collection of tolls at the market signifies only that the members of the committee wish to give this service the fullest consideration and find out whether any improvements can be made.

"We have no intention of closing the market," Alderman Swanston said today. "I don't know how that idea got about, but farmers have been telephoning in the opinion that the market was going to be done away with. We would like to correct any impression of that kind. James Brown is carrying on as collector of tolls for three months. In the meantime we are having a survey made of the market as to attendance and any changes which might help to make it more of a community centre and of value to producers and consumers than it is.

The committee may consider the proposal to engage a clerk and pay him a salary. That is one of the suggestions which have been heard, but it is nothing more than a suggestion. The main thing we wish at present is to assure farmers that the market is continuing, and if we can make it better and more helpful to everybody we would like to do so. That is the only attitude I have heard expressed by the members of the committee."

This little band of eight members, which was organized five years ago, and led during that time by the president, Mrs. George Pickens, has accomplished much work for the needy of their community and has donated quilts to the Salvation Army, Red Cross and to each of the Protestant churches in the village. A recent bingo helped to finance the society so that now the secretary reported it had over $10 on hand.

At the close of the meeting, Mrs. Pickens was assisted by the hostesses, Mrs. William Fleming and Mrs. R. Bibby, in the service of refreshmens. Meetings in the future will be held the first Thursday of the month.

TAKE A GUESS

There's a David Harum in the city. He doesn't sport a sleek, four-legged pacer as the famed trader was won't, but does just as well with a '34 convertible four-wheeled job.

A prospective car purchaser found it out during a scouting tour.

Five of the leading dealers canvassed for an open-air coverup model of about that vintage, had none—but, each and everyone came to bat cheerfully with the identical announcement, "We expect a '34 convertible—in next week!"

The sixth dealer hadn't heard about it, but then that was Saturday, and it's a pipe cinch he's expecting it too by now.

School Property Causes Flooding

One sure sign of spring was in evidence Sunday as small boys sailed paper-sailed boats in a pond in a back yard just west of the Central School grounds.

The property owned by R. A. Dutton and at the rear of his Water Street residence is flooded each spring and today the house situated on the lot has a foot of water in the cellar.

Mr. Dutton complains that the flooding is caused by water pouring into his property from the Central School grounds and flowing over the low wall into the lot next to the school land.

Members of the Board, he says, had promised to look over the situation today. He is asked that the wall between his property and the school yard should be raised a foot or two and thus stop the flooding.

ALFRED MILTON McKEOWN.

Alfred Milton McKeown, well-known Peterborough musician, of 188 Stewart Street, passed away at his home on Sunday after less than one week of illness.

Born in Hope Township, he was the son of the late Robert McKeown and Mary McElroy. He was 84 years of age and had lived in Peterborough since coming here from Woodstock in 1921. Although living in retirement since taking up residence in this city, he maintained his interest and action in the field of music, and until about Christmas had been an active member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church choir.

On Sunday night the choir of St. Paul's Church sang "Crossing the Bar" in a tribute to the memory of one who had been for so many years a fellow-worker and friend.

Not all of his musical knowledge had been turned to religious lines. In 1916 he was bandmaster of the Woodstock Oxford Rifles, but as this unit was not called he and his men enlisted for active service with the 91st Battalion Band.

A member of the Masonic Order, Mr. McKown was a charter and life member of St. Andrew's Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Toronto.

Surviving are his sorrowing wife, the former Susan Letitia Moore, and two sisters, Mrs. G. Gist of Canton, and Mrs. L. Martin, Saskatchewan.

The funeral service will be held in the Nesbitt Funeral Home on Monday night at 8 o'clock, with the Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church officiating. Interment will be in Hamilton on Tuesday.

Wood Is Scarce Fuel Dealers Supply Is Low In City

Stocks of hardwood in local retail fuel yards have been reduced to the last few sticks for the simple reason that dealers failed to estimate the extent of the transfer of business from relief to cash during the winter that is now ending.

Several weeks ago the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company proposed some kind of deal with the city by which six hundred cords of dry body hardwood would be exchanged for the same quantity of green wood. The Fuel Company need dry maple immediately, and the city relief department had the only quantity in the whole district, well seasoned wood of the first grade. The suggestion was to the effect that the city sell as much of their stock on hand as they wished which would be hauled in to the city yarrd on Park Street as replacement.

The Relief Committee has nearly 700 cords of hardwood on hand, and decided to hold rather than sell it. A. G. Metheral, relief officer, admits that the committee's "business" has fallen off sharply as many persons became employed, no longer required relief, and as a result they became during this last winter actual buyers of wood. It seems that the relief committee which during the depression has been in the wood business, estimated its purchases for a decline, but the wood dealers did not make corresponding allowance for increased demand from the public. And so the shortage in the local yards. Some of them are said to have nothing left but chips.

In 1938 the relief department delivered 1,207 cords of hardwood and 979 cords of slabs; in 1939 deliveries were 1,638 cords of hardwood and 852 cords of slabs, and in 1940 relief delivery of hardwood was only 968 cords with 403 cords of slabs. And so it has come about that some those who had been on relief and always got deliveries promptly when they had not money to pay for it, have of late encountered exhausted retail stocks when employment had shifted them into the more fortunate class of purchasers.

Mr. Metheral said we would advise the committee to buy another hundred cords of hardwood for next winter, just as a sufficiency, but he is not certain that it would actually be needed.

Tag Day In Aid Of Greeks Returns $1,259

Citizens of Peterborough gave a wonderful response to the appeal for aid for the Greek War Victims in the tag day held on Saturday. Tag days were held simultaneously in Peterborough and Lindsay under the general chairmanship of Louis Yeotes of this city and the gross receipts amounted to $1259.47. Of this amount, Peterborough contributed $1019.27 and the town of Lindsay added $240.20.

"This splendid response is a gesture of appreciation from the citizens of Peterborough for the valiant fight the Greeks are staging in defending their country and at the same time standing shoulder to shoulder with Great Britain so that freedom and right may prevail against the forces of oppression," Louis Yeotes said this morning.

Organized Taggers

He added that the members of the Greek community in this city are particularly grateful and he wanted to single out Rev. Sister Philomena of St. Mary's, Convent, Rev. Sister Lucretia, principal of St. Peter's High School and Dr. H. R. H. Kenner of the Collegiate for their splendid co-operation in organizing the girls to act as taggers. All through Ontario students from high schools and convents have volunteered to assist in tagging for the Greek War Relief Fund.

Several people in the city made substantial donations to the fund as follows: William Kay, $5; Dave R. Fleming, $5; George Sorenson, $2; Peterborough Auto Supply, $15; Dr. C. B. Waite, $10; Robert Harstone, $3; R. I. Young, $4; Bonner-Worth employees, $35; Graham Eastwood, $5; John Cameron, $1; Andrew Jack, $3; N. Routley, $2; Theo Demos, $10; and the Lucky Strike Bait Works, $5.

Mr. Yeotes donated prizes, boxes of chocolates to the taggers who brought in the largest amount and the following are the winners: Jean Spicer, 5 lbs. chocolates, $25.03; Gertrude Rose, 3 lbs. chocolates, $21.10; Peggy Bowen, 2 lbs. chocolates, $20.07; the following won one pound boxes of chocolates, Yetta Fine, Roma Williamson, Helen Beatty, Margaret Barrie, Patricia Renaud, Rose An Monhan, Elaine Cook, and Georgina Demos.

The following were awarded one pound boxes of chocolates, Joyce Hardy, $11.41; Shirley Stone, $10.99; Mary Hamilton, $10.52; Dorothy Veals, $9.63; Grace Davey, $9.36; Myrtle Mockey, $9.30. Fire Threatened Millbrook Block

MILLBROOK, March 24.—(ENS) —Only the fact that the walls and roof of the store were of metal saved a whole block in the business section of Millbrook from being gutted when a blaze broke out in the back shop of the furniture and undertaking establishment operated by F. C. Scott on Saturday.

An overheated pipe was responsible for the fire, and although the damage is said to be light all of the equipment was removed from the funeral chapel, furniture store and also from the stores on either side, operated by J. J. Powell and W. E. Ball respectively. G. T. McPherson, who lives over the store was overcome by smoke when he tried to extinguish the blaze and save some of the valuables in the building.

No insurance is carried on the building, but according to reports received by the Examiner not a great deal of damage resulted. Smoke and water damage will rival that of the actual fire. The apartment above the store, occupied by Mr. McPherson had to be evacuated after the battle with the flames which lasted for more than two-and-one-half hours.

Cut Adjournments In Drunk Charges

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court again declared war on citizens who get intoxicated, fall into the hands of the police, then seek an adjournment when their cases are called in court, to give themselves time to get the money to pay their fines."

"People who want to get drunk are warned that they must have the money ready to pay their fines," he declared in court this morning. "From now on the cases must go ahead without these adjournments."

His Worship gave point to the warning in one case by granting only a day's adjournment warning the accused that he must be ready to proceed tomorrow.

Another man charged with second offence drunkenness succeeded in getting a week's adjournment on the understanding that there would be no further delay in the case. The accused thought he could have his $50 fine ready by that time.

Another man who pleaded guilty as a second offender was fined $50 and costs. It had originally been charged as a third offence but the police withdrew the third conviction charge.

Still another man who pleaded not guilty to being drunk and asked for an adjournment, getting it after a stern warning from the magistrate, returned to court soon after and changed his plea to guilty. He was fined $10 and $3 costs.

Fourth Donation Acknowledged By Lord Mayor

This morning an official receipt and letter of thanks came to the Examiner office from the Lord Mayor of London in recognition of the fourth contribution of £500 sent to the fund some time ago. At the present time the local fund is closing in on the fifth £500 and local officials should be able to cable this amount before the week is out.

George W. Wilkinson, Lord Mayor of London, in his letter says in part: "Once again I shall be very grateful if you will pass on to the citizens of Peterborough and district my renewed thanks for their sustained support of my fund and for the great solicitude they have shown to those brave people in this country who have suffered so much through enemy air attack.

"Their continued assistance is all the more welcome since it comes at a time when calls upon the fund are becoming more numerous and may well increase in the event of intensified enemy air activities over this country. It is superfluous for me to say how much your gifts are appreciated by all who benefit from them."

The letter is addressed to His Worship Mayor James Hamilton of Peterborough, and it is the hope of the fund officials that sufficient money will be raised in a few days to enable them to cable £500. Much of this money would be sent through the Lord Mayor of London to the bombed out victims in Plymouth.

Ladies' Night Cancelled.

A donation of $50.00 was received by F. G. Mann today and this came in from the members of the Fortnightly Club. The wives of members in this club gave up their usual Ladies' Night and the members contributed the regular cost of this to the fund.

Miss Minnie Williams Havelock sent along another report this morning with two more contributions. One is from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hubbel of the village and the other a donation of $7.75 was raised by the Dorcas Rebekah Lodge No. 98 at a card party held last Thursday night.

Down at Mathers Corners in Otonabee the pupils of S.S. No. 7 held a crokinole party and the proceeds amounting to $8.00 was turned in. This is a splendid bit of work by school children.

Tickets for the draw on the registered wire haired terrier, donated by W. J. Welch, barber, are going well. It is expected the draw will be made within a few days. Employees of the C.G.E. Company are looking after the sale of tickets and uptown the tickets may be obtained from Mr. Welch, at his shop on Hunter Street.

Women Ask Right To Sit On Juries

Communications from fifty presidents of women's organizations in Peterborough will be among the large piles of mail members of the Ontario Legislature will receive today and Wednesday. The telegrams, letters and petitions urge that women be given the right to sit on juries in this province. Plans are also underway for a great body of women representing various shades of political opinion, from the home, from business and from the professions, to pack the Legislature on Wednesday when the bill providing that women be subject to the same liability as men for jury service, comes before the House.

A poll has revealed that the women consider they should not only have the privileges of citizenship, but that they should also face up to the responsibilities that go with the status of citizenship. Heads of women's organizations were practically unanimous in the opinion that a system of mixed juries should be adopted in Ontario. They declared that the Ontario law was antiquated in this respect, pointed out that women in England had been liable for jury service since 1919, that the system had been found very satisfactory there and in the majority of the States of the United States where the same system exists.

It was recalled that for many years the National Council of Women and the International Council of Women have advanced the proposal that women should be given the right to sit on juries.

The telephone convener of the Local Council of Women in Peterborough has contacted all organizations affiliated with the Council since the question came up last week, and the communications from women here eager to do their duty as citizens will be received in Toronto on Tuesday by Alex Elliott, M.P.P.

Marriage is guesswork· Needs Great Great Diplomacy. Young People Gamble When They Go to the Altar, for Both Men and Women Change as They Grow Older.

When a couple marry, believing themselves in love, and in a few years find themselves either in a divorce court or dragging out a miserable existence of double wretchedness, each one blames the other and accuses the other of having changed. "What!" cries the man. "Do you think I would have married Mary if I had known that she was going to turn into a nit-wit who bored me to death?" "Merciful heavens," moans the woman, "why didn't my guardian angel warn me that John was going to turn into a Tired Business Man who had no real heart interest in anything outside of the stock market?" We have a phrase for this all too common matrimonial experience. We call it the "disillusion of marriage," and wonder why it is that husbands and wives who look so desirable on one side of the altar seem such bad bargains on the other. The common explanation is that marriage changes people, and so it does to a certain extent. No one can go through that fiery furnace and come out totally unscathed, but the basic individualism of each of us is still there. The pretty little moron a man married is still a moron in spite of her wedding ring. The egotist a girl married still blows his own horn. They haven't changed. It is only that the husband is a-weary of dealing with a fool, and the wife feels that she will scream if she has to listen once more to her husband's theme song about how great and wonderful he is.

The husbands and wives who find that they have lost their tastes for each other, as the phrase goes, and have no longer anything in common, each blames the other for the catastrophe. Each says the other has changed, but oftener than not it is the one who makes the complaint who has changed. Not the other.

The young man with the regular profile and the slick hair and who danced so divinely, whom the young girl idealized as a romantic hero and married on that platform, still has the Grecian nose and the ambrosial locks and still dances a mean rumba.

Change as They Grow Older

But the girl has grown and developed and has different needs from those she had as a debutante. She wants a man in whom she sees something more than a clothing store advertisement and who has brains in his head instead of his heels.

The man who married a silly little doll of a woman because she rolled her eyes at him and asked such adorable, idiotic questions finds that he is about to perish of ennui and he wonders how she could have changed so greatly. But, bless you, she is just the same degree of stupidity that she was in the courting days.

Meet Altered Needs

He is the one who has changed. He has broadened and developed with life, and the type of woman that satisfied him at 20 is a horror to him at 45. He could no more be interested in her again than he could go back to playing jack straws or eating lollipops.

It has been said that only fools are happy, and to a certain degree this adage is applicable to matrimony. For the more intelligent men and women are, the more they change year by year and the more risk they take in getting married. For their happiness depends upon their husbands and wives changing as they do to meet their altered needs.

The great and terrible difficulty of matrimony is that it is not, and cannot be, eclectic as friendship is. We have a dozen friends whom we love because of some one particular quality and for the sake of this we overlook their other attributes.

For instance, we love one man because he is good and true and honest, in spite of the fact that he is tiresome. We love another because of his wit and charm, although we know him to be unreliable.

Why We Love

We love another for his friendliness and generosity, although his tactlessness gets on our nerves. But we can't do this in marriage. We want our mates to supply all our needs and not leave us to shop around among other people to find the companionship we crave and the qualities we admire.

What can we do about it? Nothing. Marriage is bound to be guesswork because we do not know what sort of a man or woman the boy or girl we marry is going to develop into, nor do we know what changes life is going to make in us and what kind of a wife or husband we are going to need.

And that is the tragedy of marriage, and why our love dreams so seldom come true.

Nutrition Class Is To Open At Collegiate

Realizing that reliable information along the lines of Wartime Nutrition is a subject of paramount and timely importance, and should be made available to women wherever possible, the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society has established classes in many cities, including Peterborough. Women who feel that every housewife owes it to herself, her family and her country to learn what foods, and in what quantities, are needed to protect her family's welfare, may join the classes by telephoning Mrs. C. B. Muir, the local convener, at Number 9685. The classes, which will be held in the Collegiate Domestic Science Kitchen under the direction of Miss Mary Kirkwood of the Collegiate staff, are to open within a few days, and will include instruction in food-purchasing, meal planning and budgeting. They are to be held each Friday evening, with two-hour lessons commencing at seven o'clock.

DO YOU KNOW . . .

After cleansing your face with cold cream, use an astringent before you make up to avoid open pores and blackheads.

To wash doeskin gloves, put them on the hands, wash in mild, lukewarm soap suds, rinse, putting a little soap into the last rinsing water. Dry in a moderate warm temperature with a clothespin in each finger.

If you need the time in your room but can't bear the ticking at night, stand the clock on a felt or rubber mat and invert a goldfish bowl over the whole thing.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, March 25.

Particularly pleasant and propitious astral conditions obtain in all departments of human living on this day, with much of a stabilizing and enduring nature in relation to business, possessions and all sorts of real property. Industry, application and steadfastness to the duties and obligations should bring rich returns, both of a material character and in all phases of private life.

If It Is Your Birthday,

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of progressive, pleasant and prosperous conditions all along the line of human endeavor and aspiration with a stabilization of the fortunes, increase of possessions, rewards for merit and fidelity, especially as tokens of appreciation from elders and superiors.

A child born on this day should be steady, persistent and faithful, with many sterling abilities as well as artistic and intellectual talents and graces.

Short-Cut Piano Method Pleasant Way to Learn

In a little world of their own—playing the piano together.

If you're outside this world of music, you may envy the chances for fun, for companionship it gives you. Yet, if you really want to play, you can.

With a modern keyboard chart you speed through the A. B. C's of learning. The chart, a replica of the most used part of the keyboard, stands behind your piano keys as you learn. Printed above each pictured key is the note for it, so you see at once the key to play for each note.

And here's a way to learn popular pieces quickly. Just play the melody line with your right hand, simple harmonizing chords with your left.

How to learn such chords? Keys on your chart are numbered as in our diagram and you have a table telling you by number the keys in different chords.

A thrill when you're really playing tunes! Our 24-page instruction book, including the "life-size" keyboard chart, explains musical signs, rhythm, chords. Has three practice pieces.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of QUICK COURSE IN PIANO PLAYING to Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of instruction book.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

LEARN THIS COMBINATION

ALMOST all fair-to-middling players make the same mistake with one combination of the cards. That is when holding the singly or doubly guarded queen at the left of a declarer, who has an otherwise entryless dummy containing a five or six-card suit headed by the A-J-10. If the declarer leads a small card toward that suit, the average player will nearly always follow the unsound rule of "second hand low," whereas he should put up his queen.

Let us take the combinations which are important when the suit is of five cards. They are as follows:

West	South	East
1. Q X	X X X	K X X
2. Q X	X X	K X X X
3. Q X	K X	X X X X
4. Q X X	X X X	K X
5. Q X X	X X	K X X
6. Q X X	K X	X X X

We can eliminate the situation in which South has the doubly-guarded K, as in that case he would lay down the K first. We can also forget the one in which he has a singleton, since he then will come up with the A on the first round anyway, and also that in which he has as many as four cards, for then we can't block the suit anyway. The only combinations to consider then are those six given above.

With Nos. 1 and 4, playing the Q may result in your side taking two tricks in the suit instead of one, as the declarer almost surely will duck in dummy and finesse on the second round, since probabilities are that you split honors from K-Q-X. With Nos. 2 and 5, your play of the Q makes it absolutely impossible for declarer to bring in the suit, whereas ducking will enable him to do it if your partner wins the first round finesse, which he may feel he has to do, since two tricks in the suit may be all that the declarer needs for contract.

With Nos. 3 and 6, the declarer may be striving to get two entries to dummy, so that he may lead toward his own hand twice for finesses. If you duck, he gets into the dummy once, and on the next round of the suit, overtakes the K for a second entry to it. But play of the Q on the first round breaks up this play, limiting him to just one dummy entry, without costing your side a thing.

The same principles apply, with very slight variations, in exactly the same way, if the dummy's suit is of six cards, and frequently when it is of only four cards.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

If, during the defense against South's 4-Spades, West ruffs a club with the J, and East later gets a chance for a third-round ruff of a heart, why should he use his 9 instead of his 4?

Survivor Photographs Sinking Of Torpedoed Oil T anker As Lifeboats Pull Away

This dramatic photograph of the actual torpedoing and sinking of the Standard Oil tanker Charles Pratt, 200 miles off Freetown, British West Africa, last December 21, was brought back to the United States by P. S. Schlaflin, second assistant engineer of the Charles Pratt. He and 22 shipmates, of 40 survivors, landed at Bayonne, N.J., from the Standard Oil tanker Standard. The first torpedo, fired without warning, sent 40 men of the Pratt tumbling into the lifeboats—two were killed in the blast—and it was from his lifeboat that Schlaflin made the photograph, LEFT, at the moment the second torpedo struck. A few moments later and there was only a huge oil slick to mark where the Pratt went down. CENTRE shows one of the lifeboats loaded with survivors pulling away from the sinking ship and at RIGHT another picture of the boatload of men, with Schlaflin standing beside the mast, during the days they spent afloat before reaching safety of a friendly port.

Kiwanis Attend Army Service Day Of Prayer

Sunday evening, in the Salvation Army Temple, the members of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club observed the National Day of Prayer in a body. On the invitation of Adjutant Norman Buckley, the club members, their wives and friends attended the evening service.

President John Troke read the lesson, the 90th Psalm, and all of the members heartily joined in the singing of the hymns and the service as a whole.

Belief in God

In opening his sermon, Adjutant Buckley pointed to the spiritual leadership being given the British Empire by the King and the Queen, and sighted it as a reason for thanksgiving. In the words of Queen Victoria he explained much of Britain's might, "Britain's greatness is not in her army or her navy, but in her belief in God." Today, when the enemies are at the gate, an army, navy, and air force are requisites, but the most important factor is belief in God. The people of the Empire must accept their responsibility in the direction of sincere worship, and their several duties toward God.

Conscience is one of the governing factors in the make-up of the Christian, the Adjutant proceeded, and the interpretations put upon word by various groups and men given. St. Paul referred to his as being a "conscience void of offence" in one connection; it has been called the balance wheel or the sentinel of life and the deputy of the soul. The French put it, "Conscience saddens repose."

There is no limit to the age of conscience, and though writers have made claims to the effect that it begins to weaken at a certain age, there is no reason for its fading in the face of world affairs.

Must Return to God

At the present time, more than any other, the world is turning to part of the first words of God to man. "And the second is like unto it, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Now, more than at any other time, people are spending more on their neighbors, as is witnessed by the community funds and war drives in existence. Now it is necessary for the world to return to the first words, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

Adjutant Buckley spoke words of welcome to the visitors, and extended an invitation that they come again to worship. One of the most effective parts of the service was the singing of the Song Brigade. It was explained that in the Salvation Army, hymns are often sung to different music than that originally composed. The result was obvious in this instance, as to the music of the immortal "Beautiful Dreamer," by Stephen Foster, the following words were heard:

Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine,
Oh what a foretaste of glory divine!
Born of His spirit, washed in His blood.
This is my story, this is my song,
Praising my Saviour all the day long
This s my story, this is my song,
Praising my Saviour all the day long.

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

By RUTH AYERS

YESTERDAY: There is a dancing party for Ann on the eve of her wedding. But the congratulations Ann receives on the telephone and in person drum on April's ears. She tries to be the gay April again, but her father senses a difference. Hal proposes again and April knows that she can never marry him. After he leaves she bursts into tears. Then, suddenly, Ann and Kent are beside her.

CHAPTER XXIV

Suddenly, she was on the floor beside Nip, the coral gown as incongruous as a clown's paint, swirled around her. In her sobs, she didn't hear footsteps approaching. When she looked up, tears streaking her face, she saw that Ann and Kent were staring at her.

Ann followed April upstairs, her knock on the door imperative.

"April!" she spoke her sister's name.

"Oh, Ann, don't mind me," April was struggling to pull herself together. She walked to the mirrored vanity and began to smear her mouth with lipstick.

"I think it's time we were truthful with each other," Ann said. Her voice was gentle. Her eyes, too, were the eyes of the real Ann, without steeliness or suspicion.

Ann went on, "I've guessed all along that you've been in love with Kent Carter since that time he came home on leave while I was away."

"Ann, you're being absurd."

"No, not absurd, April, but frank. We love each other very much, April. We're not alike in all ways, but we're sisters, just the two of us, April. Lots of times I've envied you because you're beautiful and I'm not. I've resented you because you had all the admirers, the flowers, the dates. I've been jealous until it hurt. But Octavia said something tonight that expressed what I've always known deep down but haven't wanted to admit."

"Octavia?"

"Octavia said tonight when she was helping me dress, 'Once Ah thought Miss April had nuthing more to her than that gold on the top of her head. Now Ah knows the real gold is in her heart.'"

"Oh—well, Octavia." April tried to smile it off, tried to find some way to stop Ann.

Ann persisted. "You've tried to cover up everything, even to the way you injured your ankle and paid off that wretch of a Winkie Appleman, and it's all been because you didn't want to hurt me. I think it's the most sporting thing I've ever known."

"But you're silly, Ann," April cried. "You're foolish to talk that way. There's nothing to what you're trying to say. It's your wedding day tomorrow. The house is all fixed. Mother and Dad are so happy for you! And Kent—what about Kent, Ann? You've forgotten about him in all this foolishness. Listen, honey, you and Kent and going to make a grand couple."

Ann stood there, still smiling, listening without interrupting.

"I'll come to visit you in your new home," April finished in a rush. "I'll be godmother to your first boy." She was up from the vanity table, almost pushing Ann from the room.

"Annie, go down and dance until morning and then sleep until noon. And don't get any more of those last-mnute bridal brain-storms."

Ann turned one searching glance on her and then leaned quickly and kissed her cheek.

After that, the day was over for April Burnett.

She was too tired to think about it now, too weary to live it over. While the trio from Casa Blanca played in waltz time, she went to sleep.

That's why she was up early the next morning, surprisingly refreshed, ready to face the last day before she would be really free. Yes, once the wedding was over, she would be clear of all remorse and doubts and decisions.

Nip had pushed his way into her room last night and slept curled on the floor beside her bed.

"You be quiet," she cautioned him, "this is a sleeping household."

As she bathed and dressed, April saw that the early morning sky gave evidence of a sunny day. A good omen for Ann. She was glad she had reassured her sister last night, quieted any doubts in Ann's troubled head.

Now for the red skating skirt and the blue suede jacket. If she went out for a brief walk with Nip, maybe it would bring some color into her cheeks and she wouldn't look like a mourner at the wedding.

"Hush," she kept saying to Nip. "One growl out of you and no walk." Nip hushed.

The wedding mas set for 5 o'clock. Everything was in readiness for it, from Octavia's white-tiered cake to Ann's orange blossoms. The house slept quietly after the festivities of last night. Likely, no one would stir until noon. So as April left her room bound for the walk, she tiptoed.

Her first surprise was in seeing that the door to Ann's room was ajar. Nip nosed ahead of her, poked his nose into the door. April stepped to close it and as she did, something struck her as wrong.

The bed was made, Ann's evening dress tossed lightly across it.

April tried to reassure herself. Ann had probably gone downstairs for early coffee. But even as she went to check, she knew that Ann wouldn't be in the kitchen.

The kitchen was empty, spotless, untouched. Octavia had stayed up late to wash and put away the party dishes so everything would be spic-and-span for the great day of her "little lamb's" wedding.

The other rooms were empty and the inside lock was still across the front door. This cut off the last, dwindling hope that perhaps Ann had started off on an early walk, too.

"Something's wrong, Nip," April whispered, "dreadfully wrong."

Nip knew it and sniffed up and down the hall and behind the fern screen. Then a door of the kitchen creaked and opened. April almost jumped in fright.

"Who all's there?" a familiar voice was asking.

"Just me, Octavia."

"Anything I can do for you, Miss April?"

No one must know yet; the house mustn't be aroused. So April thought quickly. "Yes, Octavia, go back to bed and sleep your head off for hours. It's going to be a hard day."

When Octavia, satisfied and unsuspecting, disappeared behind the door, April started upstairs. Every step was an agony. Even Nip sensed it, his whiskers bristling.

It didn't take long to find the white envelope with her name on it in Ann's room. April held it, afraid to read, fearful of what answer her sister had found out of the three tangled lives.

WE . . . NOTICED

. . . That if young ladies attend evening social functions garbed in slacks and sweaters, it will not be a fashion copied from the famous southern winter resorts, but a style feature brought to this country from Britain. Evening gowns are conspicuous by their absence in the brilliant array of styles of British-inspired and created fashions which are making their bow to the Canadian public.

. . . Because the informal garb of trousers and tops allows the wearer to be ready for service at a moment's notice is the reason for this style pronouncement, we are told. The recent bombing of a night club in London is tragic proof that the Nazi raiders care little where their bombs drop, and therefore the need for constant preparedness is evident.

. . . Tweeds from Britain, included in the collection, are not as sombre as formerly, and suits do not conform to the mannish standard in such rigid detail as our Canadian models. The afternoon frocks depend on their sheer beauty of simplicity to make them fashion firsts.

TORONTO, March 24.—Ira A. Humphries, K.C., of 216 Glengrove Avenue West, Registrar of Deeds for East and West York and a former Deputy Attorney-General, died Saturday in the Toronto General Hospital following an acute heart illness of several months.

By his death members of the Attorney-General's Department and of the legal profession lost one of their most beloved associates. Recognition of that association in the public service, dating from 1925, when he was appointed inspector of legal offices, was given Saturday when, at a meeting of the Province of Ontario Crown Attorneys' Association, members paid tribute to his memory. Word of his death reached the association meeting early in the afternoon session and members stood in silence when the news was told by the president, Craig McKay, Crown Attorney at Woodstock.

Mr. Humphries, as senior solicitor to the Department, succeeded the late Edward Bayly, K.C., as Deputy Attorney-General in 1934. Shortly after the 1937 election campaign, of which he was the Chief Election Officer, Mr. Humphries was seized with a heart attack and in time was appointed to the less onerous duties of the Registrar's office.

Mr. Humphries was born fifty-six years ago at Warkworth, Northumberland county, graduated from the University of Toronto in 1906 and from Osgoode Hall in 1911. He was created a K.C. in 1928. He became senior solicitor to the Department in 1928. He was appointed Ontario Commissioner on Uniformity of Legislation in Canada in 1935 and was elected chairman of the conference in 1937.

Mr. Humphries, together with A. W. Roebuck, K.C., then Attorney-General, appeared before the Privy Council on the Bennett legislation affecting labor. He was identified with a number of important cases and commission inquiries. In his youth he was a player of association football and cricket. He was awarded the King's Jubilee Medal in 1935. Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

A.P. Feature Service

France has bounded back into the politico-military picture since the threat of Admiral Darlan to use the French navy to convoy food cargoes through blockaded waters and subsequent negotiations to permit shipment of American grains to the unoccupied zone.

Darlan's announcement has been variously interpreted. The confusion among officials and experts indicates his motivation was not clear. Whether it was a Hitler coup, virtually Nazifying the French navy, or a desperate effort to force Britain to relax the food blockade is a question that still divides the best-informed.

Paramount fact is that defeated France hungers under the weight of not one, but two, blockades.

North of the Nazi-imposed border of unoccupied France, the German legions control great areas of French food production. Food stores for the French army fell into their hands. The Nazis have tightly closed the border. Rarely indeed does a food shipment pass South from occupied France, for the Nazi territory has vital food problems of its own.

Britain announced "reluctantly" the necessity for deeming both occupied and unoccupied France as enemy-dominated territory. Ships for France have not been allowed to pass the British control stations at Gibraltar and Suez. How many lighter craft make the Marseilles-North Africa run successfully is unknown, but certainly normal traffic does not prevail, and British naval craft are a constant threat to this food artery.

French economy is heavily dependent on trade with North Africa; France regularly did more export-import trade with Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco than with any other country. Chief imports have been grains, wine, fruit, livestock, phosphate, iron ore.

Phosphates imported from North Africa have been particularly important, as agriculture in France is dependent on such fertilizers, especially in the poorer farming areas of unoccupied France.

So France is cut off from the food production areas in occupied territory by the Nazi border closure, from her Indo-Chinese and North-South American sources by Suez and Gibraltar, and from all but a fraction of normal supplies from her North African granary.

Other factors make the French food situation grave. At least 1,000,000 of the 2,000,000 still-held prisoners of war are farm laborers. They are not now available for preliminary work on 1941 crops. The problem is complicated, further by a serious shortage of draft animals. They were eaten this winter. There is no gasoline for mechanized farm equipment.

Darlan said the 1941 harvests, in the fact of these facts, cannot carry France through another winter.

It is fact also that France could not, by force, crack the northern border closure. All French land arms were confiscated. Her army is gone. The Nazis can enforce that border closure absolutely. Help from the north can only be sparing, and then only given in return for concessions..

The southern blockade by the British is less than absolute. It certainly offers greater possibilities for cracking—by diplomacy or convoy force.

The threat of convoy is not a hollow gesture. France has one battleship, 14 cruisers, an aircraft carrier, 50 destroyers and 60 submarines in active service.

Britain's main fleet is tied up awaiting the expected invasion. The Mediterranean fleet has been largely occupied in the eastern half of that sea. Britain would be hard put to meet an aggressive gesture by the French fleet.

Britain must also face the fact that the French fleet operating against the British would have a common cause with the Nazis, would be de facto allies of the Reich.

The situation is full of potential dynamite.

Town-Planning For Iroquois 'Drowned' Area

TORONTO, March 24—(CP). —Officials of the Ontario Highways Department said Saturday that the entire St. Lawrence River front west of Iroquois to east of Cornwall may be 'town-planned" to make a model countryside,' when this 45-mile frontage is affected by flooding in connection with the St. Lawrence development.

When the project is completed the present towns of Iroquois, Morrisburg, Aultsville and Farran Point will be wholly or partly under water. "The department would like to see these towns and villages moved to new locations and laid out as model communities connected by a model four-lane highway," commented C. M. Smith, deputy minister of highways.

"Provincial highways, village streets and township and county roads would all be involved in the plan. Undoubtedly there will be be new industrial sites along the river. They may force the department to re-locate No. 2 highway (main highway from Windsor to Quebec) farther back from the river than we would like to go." The ultimate goal is a four-lane highway from Toronto to the Quebec boundary.

IROQUOIS, Ont., March 22.—(CP)—The village of Iroquois will disappear when the St. Lawrence River seaway project is completed and yesterday Reeve Fred Hadley said it is doubtful whether the century-old village will re-establish itself.

"Most of us think the people will scatter wherever they can earn a livelihood," he said.

"Although all of us cannot see it, we are told the plan is a war measure and we are looking at it from that angle."

Iroquois has about 200 homes, 20 or 30 stores of various kinds, and one major industry, a linen mill which it is expected will be re-established at a new location. Assessment value of the village is $500,000 and actual value about $1,-500,000, Reeve Hadley said.

Italian Planes Flown To British Base

A strange message was sent to British air bases in Africa at the beginning of March; to wit, that an Italian plane flying over British lines was not to be fired upon or engaged in battle. The reason was simple. The Italian bomber, a huge three-engined Caproni 133, had made a forced landing in a river bed in Eritrea and had been captured thereupon by British Indian troops. It was refuelled. The Italian fliers, also captured, were persuaded to start the motors and take the plane aloft. Thereupon a British pilot took over the controls. The plane was not engaged in battle, but even so, when it landed at the British air base it was surrounded by troops with bayonets drawn, who were taking no chance. The R.A.F. squadron leader is describing his strange flying experience to his fellow fliers.

Mrs. Charlotte Cooper made the wedding cake. The family gathering was a very happy one, and those at home were especially delighted that they were all together.

800,000 Hun Troops Ready Equipped For Balkan Push, Instead Of Invasion Attempt?

Slav Minister To Moscow Resigns Post, Belgrade Rounds Up Boy Paraders Clamps Censorship On All Telephone News

LONDON, March 25—(CP).—Germany has approximately 800,000 troops fully equipped for immediate battle on the Balkans, to enforce the German drive toward the southeast and guard the Soviet Russian frontier, a reliable foreign source declared today.

British quarters declined to comment on this report and refused to indicate whether it checked with their intelligence.

Germany, the foreign source said, has 50,000 men in Italy and Africa, 600,000 in France, 300,000 in Denmark, and from 750,000 to 1,000,000 in Germany, Poland, Norway and the Low Countries or in transit.

(Reports were current in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, that Germany had sent 18 or 20 divisions—perhaps 240,000 men—to Italy to prevent internal disorder and forestall a separate Italian-Greek peace)

This disposition of troops, the source said, was viewed by his informants on the continent as indicating that Germany had decided a Balkan offensive would be easier than an immediate attempt to invade Britain.

Concentration of heavy forces in Rumania facing Russia was regarded as an indication that Germany had been fully informed of Soviet distrust of a southeastern drive and Moscow's intention to back Turkey's guardianship of the Dardanelles.

London, March 25 (AP)

AUTHORITATIVE sources reported today the capture by British forces of Marda Pass, strategic gateway on the road to Harar west of the fallen Ethiopian town of Jijiga.

The pass is located about 10 miles out of Jijiga on the route to Harar, important Italian stronghold in east central Ethiopia.

Squads Beat Up Strike Breakers

CHICAGO, March 25 — (AP). — Roving groups of what Police Captain John Stege called "Goon squads" assaulted numerous workbound employees near the International Harvester Company McCormick Works to-day. The company is engaged in making parts for defence contractors.

Several thousand Congress of Industrial Organization members and sympathizers, meanwhile, paraded streets near the plant, yelling and jeering at non-striking American Federation of Labor and unaffiliated workers filtering into the factory through half a dozen gates.

Stege said he did not know how many workers were beaten up, but that there were "a lot of 'em." He had one report that a man's leg was broken. He said "Goon squads" of from a dozen to 30 roamed the neighborhood, popping out of alleys and passageways to attack one or two work-bound employees at a time.

More Warships

London, March 25 (CP Cable)

A. V. ALEXANDER, First Lord of the Admiralty, today told the House of Commons that "effective measures have been taken to extend the shipbuilding and repair facilities in the empire."

See C.N. Deficit Of $16,965,044

OTTAWA, March 25.—(CP).—Indications the Canadian National Railways will report a deficit of $16,965,044 in its annual report for 1940 this week is before the House of Commons to-day.

Last night Finance Minister Ilsley tabled further supplementary estimates of the sums required by the government for ordinary expenditures in the present fiscal year which ends next Monday. In addition to the $15,000,000 appropriated for the railway in the main estimates last summer the minister now seeks $1,965,044.

The estimates for the coming fiscal year, tabled last month, indicate the expectation is that the government-owned railway will pay all operating charges and interest on its debt due to the public in 1941 as there is no appropriation for a deficit.

The estimates tabled last night total $78,744,584. Mr. Ilsley asked $5,506,329 for ordinary expenditures

2 Boats Save 22 Others Off Carolina

Tragedy 80 Miles Out Hits At Midnight Traps Men Asleep

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C., Mar. 25—(AP). — Capt. Dameron Meekins of the United States coastguard at Beaufort Inlet reported to-day that 17 survivors of the stricken 9,316-ton oil tanker Cities Service Denver had reached Morehead City and five others had been picked up by the W. M. Bruce, but that 19 were missing after an explosion on board the tanker, 80 miles south of Cape Lookout, N.C.

Two of the survivors were badly burned. They were listed as Wenfield Campbell, Portland, Me., and Oscar Degerstedt, Two Harbors, Minn. They were taken to hospital.

Campbell and Degerstedt were among 17 survivors picked up from lifeboats by the tanker Pan-New York. They were transferred to a coastguard boat which brought them ashore here. None of the 15 men were injured.

The W. W. Brucsn, a tanker, was reported to have taken the Denver in tow, in spite of heavy seas, and was heading for Beaufort, near here. The tanker was still burning.

The chief mate of the stricken ship was quoted as saying he did not know what caused the explosion, or just what happened, because the flames spread so rapidly.

Rescued by the Pan-New York: due in Beaufort, N.C., at 8 a.m., were Chief Engineer R. Priestley, First Assistant C. Matthews, Second Assistant N. Steen, Third Assistant J. Hunt, Chief Officer G. Desimone and Third Officer N. Larsen; also crew members S. Hogge, J. Kerns, J. Poulsen, J. Cartwell, A. Morgan, L. North, R. Fritz, W. Campbell, C. Infante, A. Stabell and O. Degerstedt. The last named was reported badly burned.

The W. W. Bruce saved Captain John Saxon, Second Officer C. Heath, Radio Operator R. Gough and Seamen J. Skeviks and E. Sanders.

The Cities Service Denver's home port was New York, but she regularly plied the Philadelphia-Corpus Christ (Texas) run and was due in Philadelphia Thursday or Friday.

Italian Raider?

Aboard the Liner President Jackson, March 24 (AP)

AN indication of Italian naval operation in the Pacific has come with the sighting off Kobe breakwater of a weather-beaten warship identified by passengers aboard the liner President Jackson as the 2,172-ton Italian escort vessel Eritrea.

The vessel was seen anchored off the breakwater Saturday and still was there last night. She flew the Italian flag and the name Eritrea could be seen easily from the President Jackson.

The Eritrea, launched Sept. 20, 1936, is fitted for mine-laying and sailors speculated she may have been laying mines in Australian waters.

The vessel also is sufficiently large and fast for raiding. (Jane's fighting ships gives her speed as 20 knots.)

Atlantic Navigators

Coral Gables, Fla., March 25.

BENT on learning air navigation so they can help fly United States-made bombers across the Atlantic, 10 young Britishers rubbed shoulders today with United States army air cadets in their first full day at Pan-American Airways' navigators school.

The Englishmen, who range in age from 19 to 33, arrived here from Canada Saturday.

Some four months hence, the Britishers probably will be called upon to navigate huge bombers across the Atlantic to their homeland.

Air Commodore C. C. Pirie, air attache of the British embassy, explained that the men would be assigned to duty in England, possibly as instructors, when they arrive there.

Montreal Hails Willkie In 2-Hr. Parade

MONTREAL, March 25.—(CP).—Wendell Willkie received the acclaim of Canadians hailing him in two languages to-day in a two-hour progress through the streets of this English and French language city.

He and Mrs. Willkie, who seemed to make as big a hit with the crowds as her husband, passed from the Windsor station, where they arrived this morning from Toronto, and followed a route to downtown Montreal and the City Hall, and then to the Windsor hotel, where they occupied the royal suite in which King George and Queen Elizabeth stayed less than two years ago.

The largest crowds were in the downtown financial section and near the City Hall, where torn paper and ticker-tape gave a carnival-like appearance. But all along the way streets were lined and many thousands of office and store workers rushed to the windows and doors and waved or cheered.

Nearing the City Hall Mr. Willkie, a pleader for the cause of democracies and aid to Britain, received cheers at the old Chateau De Ramezay, the same place where delegates from the Continental Congress in 1775 were turned down when they asked French-Canadians to join their cause.

At the City Hall Mr. and Mrs. Willkie were received by Mayor Adhemar Raynault and signed the city's Golden Book.

Reds Pledge Turks Free Hand Rush Them War Supplies As Balkans Clear The Decks

Whole Nation Seethes Demonstrations Break in Provinces

Belgrade Agreement Differs Only In One 'Troop' Clause

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 25—(AP).—Headlines in red ink and blaring radios told Yugoslavs today that their country has signed the three-power pact in Vienna as Germany, Britain, Greece and Turkey cleared the decks for possible large scale warfare on a new Balkan front.

But even as the pact was signed pamphlets were being distributed in the streets of Belgrade declaring that Hitler would "burn his tongue by nibbling on Yugoslavia."

At the same time the Belgrade radio announced it would begin immediately to interpret all foreign war news for the beenfit of the Yugoslav people.

Extra editions featured the notes delivered to Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic by the German and Italian foreign ministers promising to "respect the independence and territorial integrity of Yugoslavia for ever" and that "the Axis powers will not ask Yugoslavia to permit passage of troops through Yugoslav territory."

Palace attendants said Regent Prince Paul and the Croat Peasant leader, Dr. Vladimir Macek, listened together to a broadcast of the ceremony.

(The line was cut at this point).

While Yugoslavia's Premier and Foreign Minister were affixing their signatures to the Axis alliance and their Yugoslav opponents were crying treason, these developments increased observers' belief a showdown is imminent:—

1. Britain appeared prepared to sever diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia and Hungary after advising the Belgrade Government she could not "condone" its alliance with the Axis.

2. Russia, whose attitude long has been an enigma, pledged "full and comprehnesive neutrality" in the event that Turkey, Britain's non belligerent ally, is "obliged to enter the war for the defence of her territory."

3. Soviet war materials were reported flowing across the Caucasus frontier into Turkey only a few hours after this pact was announced in Ankara. Russian army and naval units facing German forces in southeastern Europe also were reported being strengthened.

4. Reliable sources asserted Russia also had halted shipments of oil supplies to Germany.

5. Reports from Bulgaria said minor frontier clashes already had taken place between the Greeks and German forces poised for a thrust toward the Mediterranean. One report said Greek anti-aircraft batteries had shot down a Nazi recon-

REDS PLEDGE

VIENNA, Mar. 25—(AP).— Yugoslavia joined in the Axis to-day but on terms more favorable than those given any other Balkan nation.

Foreign Minister Ribbentrop gave assurances that the territorial integrity of the country would be respected and that no troops would march through it.

Hitler was in Vienna, presumably at Belvedere Palace, when the pact was signed, but it was not known whether he witnessed the actual signing.

The pledge gives credence to the following version which The Associated Press has received from a well-informed source:

1. Germany undertook to guarantee Yugoslavia's integrity.

2. She promised that neither the frontiers nor territory of Yugoslavia would be violated.

3. She exempted Yugoslavia from giving any military aid to the three-power nations.

4. She promised, "after conclusion of the war," to give Yugoslavia an outlet to the Aegean Sea.

What the Slavs Must Agree:

Yugoslavia, according to this version, undertook—

1. To permit the transport of war and hospital equipment as well as of wounded over her territory;

2. To dovetail her economic system into that of the Axis;

3. To end anti-Axis manifestations and influences in Yugoslavia.

However, the text of the document was identical with that which brought Rumania unreservedly into

Worse Than England

Berlin, March 25 (AP)

NAZI spokesmen described today as "very unchivalrous, to say the least" the action of the United States authorities in ordering the return to Canada of two escaped German war prisoners.

(The Nazis escaped Friday from Fort Henry, internment camp near Kingston, Ont. They were apprehended by United States officers on ice of the St. Lawrence River near Clayton, N.Y.)

"That's putting it mildly," a Nazi spokesman said. "I'd like to go so far as to say that not even England would do a trick like that."

The fugitives handled over to Canada were described here as German marine officers who were "charged with no more serious offence than crossing the United States boundary without entry permits."

No Dardanelles Surprises

Russia Acts Quickly With Turkey As Nazis Squeeze Closer

ANKARA, URKEY, March 25. — (AP).—Soviet Russia clarified her attitude toward swiftly-moving events in the Balkans to-day by promising to remain neutral, if Turkey, Britain's non-belligerent ally, were attacked and forced to enter the war in self-defence.

Announcement of the pledge, which observers believed would stiffen Turkish resistance to German overtures, coincided with reports that Russia had cut off oil shipments to the Reich and was concentrating additional army and naval forces in the Black Sea area.

High diplomatic circles saw in the Russian promise an implication that the Soviet is prepared to give Turkey full material support to defend the Dardanelles, vital gateway between the Mediterraean and Black Seas, against any possible German encroachment.

(Reports from Belgrade said Russian military supplies already were flowing into Turkey across the Caucasus frontier.)

These circles attached particular significance to the fact that Russia's reassurances to Turkey coincided with the gathering of axis leaders in Vienna to-day to welcome Yugoslavia into the German-Italian-Japanese camp.

The Soviet declaration was regarded by these circles as a further development of Russian policy reflected when the Kremlin publicly announced earlier this month its disapproval of Bulgaria's action in opening her frontiers to German troops.

Observers expressed belief Russia was feeling increasing concern for her own vital interests, not only in the Balkan zone, but ni a larger sphere.

With German armies less than 100 miles from the Dardanelles, the Reich in control of the entrance to the Baltic Sea and Japan established in the Pacific with a vastly superior fleet, Russia is virtually landlocked from a strategic point of view, these sources said. In the

Want 300 Women On Farms

Demand Double Feminine Land Army Available

TORONTO, March 25—(CP). — Members of the Ontario women's land army, most of them from Toronto, will shortly invade the farms of nearby districts to carry on the work of assisting farmers prepare their products for market. This will mark the second year of a venture to have women help avert a farm labor shortage and harvest crops that otherwise might be lost.

The demand for women to work on farms this year "will far exceed the number available," Mrs. Dorothy Walcot, organizer of the army, said today.

Recruiting for the spring work has just begun, Mrs. Walcot said. She had requests for about 300 women, including one from the farmers in the Simcoe district, who can use 40 women.

New Balkan Defence Lines

Slav Bolt Forces Britan, Greece To Watch Vardar Valley

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Mar. 25 —(AP). — Yugoslavia's alignment with the Axis—opening the way for a battlefront in the Balkans—was expected by military observers to-day to force Britain and Greece to revise their defence plan.

It was said the defence probably would have to be drawn deep into Greek Macedonia— at best beyond the broad Vardar River Valley, and possibly widening the battlefront to 200 miles from Albania to the border of Turkish Thrace.

The chances that British and Greek forces could hold the Struma front against attack from Bulgaria alone had been regarded in some quarters as good.

The defence line there would be barely 30 miles long, with one flank against Yugoslavia and the other, running into Lake Takhino and thence to the coast, able to be strengthened by the guns of British monitors and other war vessels such as battered Italian strongholds in Libya.

The valley of the Struma is narrow, gouging through mountains, and would leave Nazi forces without rail or highway lines of supply back to their Bulgarian bases.

The broader Vardar Valley, winding down from Yugoslavia farther west and emptying into the Gulf of Salonika, has a railway line and roads. Attack there, military observers said, probably would make the Struma defences impossible to hold.

The Vardar, too, is the direct route to the seaport of Salonika, regarded the No. 1 objective of a German drive.

A defence line west of the Vardar would be more than twice as long as the Struma line—and even then passage of German forces through Yugoslavia might turn its flank, or force British and Greek troops to broaden their defence across Albania and all Northern Greece.

Aussies Take Oasis in 9-Hour Sandstorm Battle

CAIRO, Egypt, March 25—(AP)— The fight for Giarabub, Italy's last stronghold in Eastern Libya to fall, was one of "the fiercest hand-to-hand battles ever fought in the heart of the desert," the Air Ministry News Service said today.

The oases town, long besieged, was taken March 21, after a nine-hour attack by Australians, supported by British planes, artillery and armored cars.

The principal defences, the News Service said, were a series of rocky knolls on the south, "bristling with guns" and tunnelled to provide an underground arsenal and shelters.

Australians went through gaps in the wire at dawn and fought in a

Send Ships, And More Ships To Keep Britain Going Willkie Urges 15,000 Rally

Envisions New Three-Way World Order With Canada, U.S. And Britain Creating General Higher Living Standard

TORONTO, March 25 — (CP). — Wendell Willkie left a message with Canadians today urging them to give new cheer to Britons and bring a chill to Nazi leaders by filling the chest of the Canadian War Services Fund to overflowing.

The roving American ambassador of aid to the embattled democracies addressed a crowd of more than 15,000 in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens last night at the opening of the drive for $5,500,000 for the National Auxiliary War Services of Canada.

Willkie departed from his prepared text to declare that Britain must be supplied with "more and more ships" to "keep that northern lung breathing until Canada and the United States and England together can build such an air force as to have supremacy in the air that this devastation and destruction will come to an end."

He coupled his appeal on behalf of the fund with the announcement he had brought a contribution of $22,250 from the Linen Trade Association of the United States to purchase a Spitfire for Britain.

He was greeted with thunderous applause as he turned to present the cheque to Prime Minister Mackenzie King who was on the platform with him.

Mr. Willkie declared his confidence in a British victory but he went farther than that. There would have to be a peace afterwards made in a spirit of intelligent, mutual helpfulness and goodwill. The conquered nations would have to be restored as the Nazi leaders were driven from power.

Then he envisioned a new order in which Canada, England and the United States would join to "create a world in which the standard of living of all men who work will rise; in which the urge of enterprise will bear its rich and ripening fruit to be more equitably enjoyed by all."

A Grim Warning

He had a warning for any who thought that Canada and the United States could preserve liberty if the totalitarian powers crushed Britain.

"If Nazism conquers Britain, it means the whole continent of Europe, of Africa, and, with the help of

MORE ABOUT—

Montreal Hails

from the city hall.

A visitor to the Willkie railway car as the train arrived, was J. W. McConnell, publisher of the Montreal Daily Star.

A thunder of cheers rolled up from a rapidly swelling crowd as Mr. Willkie made his first public appearance walking from his private car along the station concourse on his way to the hotel to start the parade to the city hall.

Thousands of office workers leaned from windows and took up the cheers of the people below. One woman ran out and grasped Mr. Willkie by the hand.

Ticker tape, torn brokerage house slips and confetti streamed down on St. James street as Mr. Willkie rode through in an open car, escorted by a squad of motorcycle police.

Grinning broadly, Mr. Willkie waved to the cheering crowd and the crowd roared back its welcome.

Crowd Almost Halts Parade

At Montreal's historic Place D'Armes people almost halted progress of the cars as they jammed into the streets

Entering the city hall Mr. and Mrs. Willkie shook hands with councillors and city department heads and were taken by Mayor Adhemar Raynault to the latter's office to sign the city's Golden Book.

At the city hall Mayor Raynault, in a brief speech in English, said Mr. Willkie was an example for all statesmen to follow because of his interest in the welfare of the people and because of the way in which he carried on despite an election defeat.

The mayor remarked that everyone present had heard Mr. Willkie's Toronto speech.

Mr. Willkie laughed and asked, "are you sure of that."

"Oh, yes, I'm sure," responded the mayor.

The visitor, still holding a cigaret and with his right hand in his trouser's pocket, said he had intended to say just "thank you" but he wanted to add that what he was doing was because of very deep-seated principles. "I'm trying to hold up the hand of those who are fighting for liberty. Liberty is in the balance. I don't want to live if I can't live under liberty."

Send Every Available Ship.

Later Willkie expressed conviction in an interview that the United States should send to Great Britain "every available ship bottom that we can spare."

"I have said, before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that we should send destroyers and I firmly believe that," said Willkie. "I believe we should send every available ship bottom there is."

Asked by reporters if he thought the United States Navy could spare destroyers, Willkie said, "I wouldn't have said that if I didn't believe we have the available destroyers."

Willkie said the crux of the "English situation is to keep the sea-lanes open and send supplies until England can get superiority in the air."

Willkie said that the people of Quebec, of French race, had a "double urge" in the war—that of saving freedom and that of saving France. "If the people of Great Britain and the United States are out to save democracy the people of this province should have that and more. The people of this area should be the most aggressive."

Discussing labor difficulties in the United States, Mr. Willkie said, "Don't worry about those, they're going to work out all right."

Willkie referred to his visit to Britain and said the damage done by air raids was "insignificant."

"I was amazed and surprised," he added, "at how well the English people have adapted themselves to modern production methods. Perhaps this is because I am an American and think we know how to produce things faster in the United States."

Told that the German press had reported that he had erred in the date upon which his ascestors left Germany, Mr. Willkie said "that means Goebbels says I am a liar. I am the most honest man alive, according to that. It also means that my message to Germany from Great Britain has reached the German people. And I'm pleased to death about it."

THE WAR TO-DAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Germany forced Yugoslavia into signing the so-called tripartite agreement today, widely extending the possible Greek-Axis front and inviting grief from millions of infuriated Serbs, Croats and Slovenes within Yugoslav borders.

Thousands of telegrams poured into the Yugoslav government, urging it not to surrender the freedom given it as a prize from the first Great War and urging it not to sell out its friends, the British-Greek allies.

Discontent was reported from the Yugoslav army when the Council of Regents (which acts as a sort of steering committee for the government) was alleged to have said one reason for surrender to German demands was that the army could not defend the country. Proud Yugoslav soldiers, descendants of those who defended Serbia in the last war, apparently felt mighty mad and said so.

Whether Germany was smart in forcing the agreement out of Yugoslavia caused considerable argument among armchair strategists.

The first immediate result of the agreement—it occurred before the document was signed—was the issuance of Russian assurance that Turkey, if attacked, could depend on the Kremlin's benevolent neutrality, which might mean that Russia would become to Turkey and the Balkan defenders of freedom what the United States now is to Britain and the Commonwealth.

Meanwhile the ill-starred fortunes of Italy's pompous and newest Caesar were reflected in the resignation of Marshal Rodolfo (Butcher) Graziani, formerly in command of the African forces which have been chased like hares across desert and mountainland until little is left of the Italian empire.

Graziani Quits

Graziana organized the Italian advance into Egypt which was turned into a retreat when the British army recaptured Sidi Barrani in December. He retained command throughout the British counter-offensive in which the Italians were driven from Eastern Libya.

The communique announcing Graziani's resignation said:

"At his own request, Marshal Graziani ceases to hold the posts of army chief of staff, governor of Libya and commander in chief of the Italian forces in North Africa.

"The last post was assumed by Gen. Gariboldi. The post of army chief of staff is assumed by the assistant chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. Mario Roatta.

"Maj.-Gen. Francesco Rosai becomes assistant army chief of staff."

Hard War On Leaders

Italy's military reverses in Africa and Albania have taken a heavy toll of high Fascist Commanders—and most of them stepped out just as Marshal Graziani did, by resignation after repeated defeats.

The first to go was Gen. Visconti Prasca, replaced as Commanded in Albania November 16 by Gen. Ubaldo Soddu. One month later Soddu was superseded.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio was replaced as Chief of Staff by Gen. Ugo Cavallero December 6.

Graziani went to Libya first as conqueror, then as administrator, and finally in his capacity as military commander saw much of the territory he, himself, had won wrested from his troops. He served as a Major in the Italian army in the First Great War, then returned to Africa, the scene of his early campaign.

the Axis lineup.

As in the case of Hungary and Bulgaria, the ceremony took place in Belvedere Palace in the presence of Von Ribbentrop, Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano of Italy, and Hiroshi Oshima, Japanese Ambassador to Germany.

They signed for their respective countries while Yugoslav Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Aliksander Cincar-Markovic signed for Yugoslavia.

The Axis governments addressed identical notes to the Yugoslav Premier, Dragisa Cvetkovic. The German note was read by Von Ribbentrop.

"In connection with to-day's action of Yugoslavia in signing the three-power pact," it said, "the German government confirms its determination to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Yugoslavia for all time."

The Extra Note.

This bore Von Ribbentrop's signature.

There was still another note to Yugoslavia signed by the Foreign Minister:

"With reference to the negotiations in connection with Yugoslavia's joining the three-power pact to-day, I have the honor, Your Excellency, in the name of the German administration, herewith to confirm an agreement between the Axis governments and the Royal Yugoslav Government that the government of the Axis powers during this war will not permit the marching or transport of troops through Yugoslav territory."

Cause For Joy?

Ribbentrop, addressing diplomats at the signing ceremony, said there were two "special reasons for joy" that Yugoslavia had joined the axis:

1. Because "practically speaking the hitherto neutral Balkans now have come into the camp of the new order in a body and,

2. "A state which, as reported, England and America tried to influence—which must be described as an unheard of act—now has joined us."

The published version of the ceremony quoted Premier Cvetkovic as replying that it had always been Yugoslavia's policy to keep the peace wth neighboring countries.

In Berlin, the organ of the German foreign office, Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, declared that "no pressure and threats from London and Washington could hold back Belgrade."

The commentary, Dienst Aus Deutschland, which has close foreign office connections, said the Yugoslav action "commands higher value because it follows a situation in which to the last moment every effort was made by Anglo-Saxon quarters to turn Yugoslav politics into a contrary channel.

"The southeast European journey of Colonel Donovan, sent by Roosevelt, whose most important stop-over was Belgrade, is recalled."

(Col. William Donovan toured Southeastern Europe and Northern Africa and visited Iceland and Britain on a recent tour).

alliance "will exceed that of all previous signings."

This informant, recalling that 26 nations were aligned against Germany in 1914-18, asserted "now we are equal to any combination on earth."

PHONE STORIES CENSORED

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 25.—(AP) — Telephone censorship was established in this country, a few minutes after it signed up with the Axis today.

Correspondents attempting to telephone out of the country, found the lines cut whenever they mentioned anything connected with the Axis.

Yugoslavia had had telegraphed censorship but no telephone censorship until today.

CLAIM WARSHIP HIT

BERLIN, March 25.—(APP)—The German high command claimed today that heavy bomb hits were scored by Nazi air raiders on a British battleship in the Mediterranean southwest of the Greek island of Crete.

A communique also claimed an "enemy outpost boat" was destroyed there and two large freighters, each of about 8,000 tons, severely damaged in an air attack on a British convoy south of Crete.

(Comment from British sources was not immediately available.)

Freezes Slav Funds

WASHINGTON, March 25—(AP)—President Roosevelt today froze all funds of Yugoslavia in the United States.

This was announced at the Treasury shortly after Yugoslavia signed the Rome-Berlin-Toyko Axis pact.

No explanation of the freezing was given, but it has been the policy of the administration to tie up the funds of any country coming under the domination of the Axis powers.

The action prohibited the use or removal of any Yugoslavian cash, securities or other movable assets in the United States.

Commerce Department experts estimated such Yugoslavian assets totalled $1,000,000.

Gayda Talks Again

ROME, March 25—(AP).—Fascist Editor Virginio Gayda declared today that Yugoslavia's adherence to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis meant expulsion of Britain from southeastern Europe and the isolation of Greece and should "give cause for mediation to the United States."

"The United States today can well perceive that their aid to England is not going for the cause of Europe's liberty, but for that British Imperialism which Europe already has condemned," Gayda wrote in the newspaper Il Giornale d' Italia.

Declare Friendship.

MOSCOW, March 25 — (AP). — Tass, Soviet news agency, issued Russia's declaration of friendship and non-aggression with Turkey today.

The Tass statement was in language parallel to that used in Ankara's announcement last night.

Proud Of Greeks.

LONDON, March 25 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill, in a special message to the Greeks on their Independence Day, reiterated today Britain's resolve to sustain Greek independence.

Recalling the fight 120 years ago, in which independence was gained from Turkey, he declared that "today that epic struggle is being repeated against greater odds but with equal courage and with no less certainty of success.

In a message from Cairo to the Anglo-Hellenic League here, Foreign Secretary Eden paid tribute to the "indomitable courage" of the Greeks and said "We are proud to serve beside such allies."

"Periods of close action followed when bayonets and hand grenades only were used. By 10 o'clock the entire Australian infantry forces were engaged in hand-to-hand struggles."

The News Service said the British forces took more than 800 prisoners and when the battle was over "dozens of Italians lay dead."

Valley as the road for attack when, in 1915, they moved north from Salonika against the Bulgarians, and in the second battle of Vardar the Allied advance up the valley continued in 1918 until Bulgaria signed a separate armistice.)

Even if British forces now reported moving north through Greece from southern ports were able to halt the Germans near the Greek-Yugoslav frontier, military sources said, the Nazis still could join the Italians in Albania to try a breakthrough there.

Evidence of the strategic importance of Yugoslavia's action was reflected in an article in the pro-German newspaper Vreme, which said "the fate of the Balkans lies in the hands of Yugoslavia."

Greece, meanwhile celebrated her national Independence Day with high tributes for the fighting men who pushed Italian invaders back into Albania and with firm pledges of continued defence of freedom against all odds.

Premier Alexandros Korizis said Greeks faced "new threats on the horizon," determined to give their lives "for the freedom of Greece and the liberation of the world."

Dispatchs from Athens said new Italian attacks on the Albanian front had been repulsed. A spokesman declared the attacks cost the Italians two thirds of the forces sent in efforts to break Greek lines.

Far North, Russia has only one year-round ice-free port, Murmansk.

Russia's reported action in cutting off oil shipments to Germany— a step she was said to have taken immediately after Nazi troops entered Bulgaria—was seen as a potentially heavy blow to the Reich.

Experts said the petroleum Germany is able to obtain from Rumania, one of her main sources of supply, produces an inferior grade of lubricating oil—a vital factor in operations of the Reich's air fleet, navy and mechanized army units.

The Russian pledge to Turkey, as announced here in a special communique, promised "full and comprehensive neutrality," should Turkey become "the object of aggression and find herself obliged to enter war for the defence of her territory."

The pledge is a re-affirmation of a non-aggression pact negotiated between the two countries in 1925. In return for the Russian promise, the Turkish Government said it had given the Soviet similar reassurances.

SALE OF MEAT ON THE COBOURG FARM MARKET IS PROTESTED

Cobourg Businessmen Ask Council To Revise Market By-law Seek Site For Transport Depot

COBOURG, Mar. 25—(ENS). — Cobourg Town Council was visited on Monday night by a deputation from the local Businessmen's Association asking for a revision in the market by-law affecting the sale of fresh meats on the market. Members of the deputation pointed out that outside butchers were buying meats from the abattoirs and selling them on the market. In some instances, according to H. O. Taylor, the meat being sold was "not so ho. either."

The restriction desired was not aimed at the farmers, it was emphasized, but at those who were not producing meat, buying it around the country and selling it on the market. The farmers themselves, when interviewed, were agreeable that such sale be restricted as they had no opportunity to sell meat themselves on the market, said John Ewart, another member of the deputation.

If the sale of meats on the market was restricted to only the producers the result would be very advantageous, the deputation said.

Mayor Jack Burnet assured the deputation that their proposal would receive the earnest consideration of the Council and before any action was taken, the Council would again take it up with them.

"We want to make it clear that we are not opposed to the producers selling meat, only the outside butchers who are retailing it on the market,'" stated Mr. Ewart.

Brief Session.

Last night's session of the Council was brief, the Mayor and Council hurrying through the business, postponing lengthy matters to another session in order that they could adjourn in time to hear Mr. Willkie's speech from Tofonto.

Alexander Young, the Town Clerk, was unable to be present due to sudden illness and his office stenographer, Miss Kay Shorey, was clerk of the meeting.

A letter was received from the Provincial Government acknowledging with thanks the thanks of the Council in regard to the Government's apportionment of the relief costs.

Transport Depot Nuisance.

Thomas Grieves of James Street wrote Council protesting against the alleged nuisance created by the Martin Transport at their depot on James Street, complaining that their trucks blocked the sidewalk. In this connection Reeve Roy Dodge recalled that there had been similar complaints in other years and that efforts were made by the Council to see if another location in town could be found for the transport company. However, no suitable site was found, he said.

"I suppose we could try again and see if we could find some suitable place outside the residential section," sugested Reeve Dodge.

"I think that it is up to the company to adjust the matter themselves and not the responsibility of the Council. I think we should send a letter to the company, point out the complaints, which we have received, and advise them to remedy it," said the Mayor. Council passed a resolution to that effect.

Thousands Welcome Willkie

This picture shows how Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Willkie enjoyed the roaring welcome they received in Toronto. Riding up Yonge Street to the city hall, the couple crane their necks to watch a flight of Norwegian air force planes, in perfect formation, convoying the long parade. Troops of all the forces escorted them to the civic reception, where thousands of Torontonians gathered to salute the Willkies.

Tax Collector, Market Clerk For 32 Years

PORT HOPE, March 25 — (By Staff Reporter). — A Burmese rubber plant, which is more than twenty years old occupies a place of prominence in the council chamber at Port Hope, and has grown so large that it completely fills one corner of the room.

The plant is owned by A. J. Chesher, tax collector and market clerk, who had it given to him about sixteen years ago by the late Mrs. Berryhill. At that time it was about four feet tall, but during the past sixteen years it has been repotted three times, and six or seven slips have been clipped off and all are growing.

The plant is the first thing that catches the eye of a stranger entering the council chamber, and yesterday afternoon when court was in session and an Examiner reporter walked in for the first time, he was astonished at the size of the plant. There is a table and chairs placed near the plant for the benefit of reporters, and when one looks at a reporter sitting there, it would appear he was sitting near a small grove.

The weight of the branches and the fact that the rubber plant grew so tall, has put it out of shape and the plant now resembles an apple tree laden with fruit.

A. J. Chesher, who tends the plant is a horticulturist in his own right and every year grows from seeds, the 3,000 or more plants which are used to decorate the town hall property.

32 Years On Job

Mr. Chesher can be justly proud of his record of community service because for the past 32 years he has held the position of tax collector and market clerk, an extraordinary tribute to his honesty and ability. He was born in Oshawa and started out to be a filemaker, serving his apprenticeship at Toronto. Then he went to the States following his trade as a journeyman filemaker in Indiana and Canton, Ohio, and was transferred to Port Hope when the Nicholson File Company purchased the plant in 1901.

Finding a change in jobs was advisable because of his health, Mr. W. A. F. Campbell in court on Monday. William Fife and Bauthier Ferdinand, each 17 years of age, laconically admitted "It's true" when the Magistrate addressed them. "Don't you think it is a contemptible trick; you should be ashamed of yourself," the Cadi said.

Fife related he was in the district in search of his 14-year-old brother who left his home in Montreal and went to Toronto in company with an older man. He had failed in his search, and when asked by the court what he had to say, he asked to be sent back to Montreal.

"They knocked at the door and asked for something to eat, and as my husband was there we asked them in," Mrs. Moore related on the witness stand. Mr. Moore asked the boys to wash before dining. Later the watch was found missing from a cabinet over the wash basin.

Magistrate Campbell advised the boys to consider their actions while they served out the balance of a thirty-day sentence dated from March 13.

Held By British

Former Yugoslav Premier Milan Stoyadinovitch, whose efforts to align his country with the Italo-German Axis cost him his power in 1939, is said to be held by the British. Stoyadinovitch had been in custody in Yugoslavia and rumors state that he was handed over to Britain when the Belgrade government feared he might be interjected into critical discussions with Germany as a Yugoslav "Quisling."

Port Hope Firm Reports Vast Increases

PORT HOPE, March 25. —(By Staff Reporter).—A boom in home building and general expansion of many industrial plants to meet increased production demands has brought a business boom to the Port Hope Sanitary Company, the largest industry in this town.

The factory produces bath-tubs, toilets, sinks and many other vitreous enamel products and is equipped to handle any order regardless of size or quantity.

In an interview with the Examiner, J. S. Owens, general manager, said the plant is operating at top speed, and the number of employees has increased one hundred per cent. from two years ago, having 400 on the payroll at the present time. This is an increase of 80 per cent over the number employed one year ago.

"Our industry has shown a steady growth and we are confidently looking forward to even greater production," said Mr. Owens.

Asked for his comments on the application of the C.N.R. to abandon the railway line between Port Hope and Millbrook, Mr. Owens said, 'Port Hope is the best industrial town between Toronto and Montreal and if the powers that be see fit to isolate it by removing transportation facilities it might become a ghost town like Deseronto. I am of the opinion that the rail facilities that exits should be retained. This town may be small now, but it is certainly on the eve of a great expansion period and its growth should be rapid. This railway line is a direct link to the north with the thriving city of Peterborough, and on person can forsee the advantages that might accrue when the St. Lawrence Deep Waterway is completed."

Mr. Owens pointed out, too, that Port Hope has excellent harbor facilities and people of the town have felt very good with the news that the deep waterway project is about to become a reality.

Who Cut Down Tree In Horse Show Park Is Question Worrying Cobourg Town Council

COBOURG, March 25—(ENS).—Mayor Jack Burnet drew attention of the Town Council last night to the fact that a beech tree had been cut down in the Horse Show Park by a citizen. Proposal that the matter be referred to the Police Committee for appropriate action was endorsed by the Council. Council referred to the Streets Committee the recommendation of Reeve Roy Dodge that the council buy its own sign and instal it in connection with the dangerous Division street and Base Line road intersection. Council received an invitation from the Knight of Columbus to attend a presentation to be made to Rev. Father G. Wolff, who leaves shortly for Peterborough after several years at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church here. Council accepted the invitation, and passed a resolution expressing its regrets in losing the popular cleric.

Reeve Roy Dodge presented figures to explain how the Streets Committee went over their estimates last year by around $2,900. He stated that he felt that the people should know the reason for the extra expenditure.

Extra expenditure in roads and bridges was $1,000; sidewalks, extra costs, $700; snow disposal extras, $300; extra labor, $700 to $800, and two accounts from previous 1938 and 1939 amounting to $290, were items in the unexpected expenditure, said the reeve.

In this connection the Mayor urged the committees to keep within their estimates if at all possible this year. A date for a meeting of the Manufacturers Committee was set for a week from to-day. Council voted $35 to the Cobourg Junior Hockey Club for an appropriate expression of approval to the good work accomplished by the players, at the request of Dr. A. R. Richards.

Port Hope, Cobourg Represented In District War Victims' Fund

Since December 5 last, the Peterborough and District British War Victims Fund has been functioning, to receive voluntary contributions to send direct to London, England, to help the valiant men, women and children of Great Britain, who are standing up so nobly under the fierce assaults of the enemy by attacks from the skies.

All work necessary to operate this fund is being done voluntarily, and all out of pocket expenses met in the same manner, thus enabling 100 per cent of moneys contributed to be sent over to the Lord Mayor of London's National Air Raid Distress Fund. Four donations each of £500 for a total of £2,000 have already been sent, graciously received and gratefully acknowledged, and the fifth £500 is almost contributed, and will be sent over by cable, it is hoped, in the course of the next few days. Elsewhere in this issue of the Examiner appears a list of today's acknowledgments, a daily feature of the Examiner since the fund began to operate. In this column devoted to the fund, free publicity for coming events in aid of the fund is given to groups and individuals who sponsor them, when word of such is received by the secretary-manager, F. G. Mann, care of the Examiner, in time to be of service, and to whom all correspondence in connection with the fund should be directed.

Official representatives for both Cobourg and Port Hope have been appointed in the persons of W. A. Johnson, manager of the Bank of Commerce, Cobourg, and H. W. Mitchell, druggist, Port Hope, both of whom will be pleased to receive your contributions, and are authorized to isue official receipts. Due acknowledgment of these will appear in the column devoted to the fund, after they have been received at head office.

Boxes for the depositing of odd coins in aid of the fund have also been distributed in Cobourg and Port Hope, and in Peterborough over $200 has already come into the fund through this medium. Both of the Lake Shore towns benefit much from visitors during the summer from their nearest city neighbors, and it is confidently hoped that they will support this district fund to help those in distress in the Motherland.

PORT HOPE

Drunk Sentenced On Two Counts

PORT HOPE, March 25 (ENS)—"You look like a good man who should have made something of yourself, why haven't you?" Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell asked E. Morrow, age 54, when the accused appeared before him on a charge of theft and a second charge of being intoxicated.

Morrow claimed an unknown soldier invited him into the washroom of a local station and there gave him a drink of rubbing alcohol. At that time accused claimed the soldier turned to him and said "Do you want a pair of gloves"? I said yes, the pair I had in the spring were worn out." Chief Murphy said the gloves were the property of D. Cluff, station clerk.

"He denied having them at first and then said a soldier gave them to him" Chief of Police T. Murphy said.

Morrow was sentenced to eleven days on the charge of stealing the gloves and ten days or a $10 fine on the second count, dating from the date of his arrest.

"That gives you a chance to get out today" Magistrate Campbell said.

Council Opposes Junking Line

PORT HOPE, March 25—(ENS). —The town of Port Hope moved last night to oppose the Canadian National Railway's application to abandon 16.24 miles of the Lakefield subdivision from Port Hope to Millbrook. A committee of Mayor Sherman Gifford and Councillors W. N. Moore, H. Bird and H. Brownlee, was appointed to consult with Town Solicitor D. H. Chisholm and investigate on behalf of the corporation.

Locally, opposition to the railway's application has been voiced in many quarters.

"The date for hearing witnesses by the Board has not been set yet though the application sought an early hearing.

FISHING SEASON NEAR

Fishermen in Port Hope are getting their gear ready for the spring and soon several boats will be heading out into Lake Ontario daily in search of big catches. On Saturday afternoon the "Grace Darling" owned by Hugh Campbell of Port Hope was skidded out of drydock into the lake, the first one of the season, although one boat operated by the Welch's has been operating through the winter.

Cadi Faints In Court Room

PORT HOPE, Mar. 25—(ENS).—Magistrate W. A. F. Campbell fainted in court on Monday afternoon while trying a charge of reckless driving preferred against Lyall Hie, a resident of Hamilton Township. The atmosphere of the court room was very warm, while the March sun shining through the large windows near the Magistrate's seat further increased the temperature of the section of the court in which he was sitting. The Magistrate quickly revived and was later removed to his residence on King Street, where he was reported considerably improved.

The court room doors and windows were quickly opened and the warm air cooled off, greatly to the relief of everyone in the room.

PORT HOPE

Authority Given To Frontiersmen

PORT HOPE, March 23—(ENS) —The squadron of Frontiersmen members policing the Town Hall at future dances will not lack authority, Councillor H. Bird, chairman of the Police Committee, said at Council last night. At a recent dance the Frontiersmen assisted local police in their duties, but when confronted with a demand to prove their authority, none could be shown. Councillor Bird said he omitted to write them a letter of authorit yfrom the Police Committee. At future dances, however, the members on duty will be sworn in and given badges.

A resolution to appoint the town clerk as the central purchasing agent for the town's needs and limiting the purchasing authorities to chairmen of the committees in council, was shelved for two weeks. In the meantime the purchasing bodies will tender their requisition slips to the town clerk each morning.

The Police Committee reported Chief of Police Thomas Murphy considered the speed of cars passing through Port Hope should be curtailed. No definite action was taken in council.

A Good Address

In a radio address Lord Beaverbrook did something which was a distinct improvement. That is, he spoke plainly about aircraft. He was definite; he gave numbers which were impressive; he told about deliveries and he mentioned how the great planes were being flown across the Atlantic. That process does away with the delay of crating and the delays in ocean shipping, and it lands them ready for service.

Lord Beaverbrook said there are now in existence vast numbers of reserve planes, but they are for the moment hidden away waiting for the moment when the Battle of Britain reaches its supreme point. Never in the history of the nation has there been as many planes as the present moment, and the number is continually increasing.

It must be somewhat of a genius who finds names for the new planes. Hurricane and Spitfire have been before us for months, but those names are indicative of the machines on which Britain has been depending. They have passed all the tests and the R.A.F. know what they can do by what they have been doing. Now comes the larger and heavier machine from United States, "Consolidated Liberators," and that name can hardly be surpassed. These new planes, according to Lord Beaverbrook, "bring practically every point in Nazi-dominated territory within the target area of the R.A.F."

We need a speech like that now and then because it gives to us some adequate idea of what is being done. If people desire information, and our belief is they do, then Lord Beaverbrook gave it to them.

A Sabotage Story

New York papers have been making much out of a report that the plane on which Sir Frederick Banting and two others met death had been sabotaged. The method was by mixing grass and sand in the oil, and that in time had the effect of wearing the life out of the engines and causing them to go dead. The report has it that one of those found guilty had been captured in Canada and shot, and the other had been run down in United States and met with similar fate.

Air Minister Power said he knew nothing of the report which had been made to the government of Newfoundland and to Lord Beaverbrook, and that would be correct. The R.C.A.F. has nothing whatever to do with ferrying bombers across the Atlantic, and Lord Beaverbrook makes his own arrangements on this continent.

It was not difficult to deny the report about one saboteur being caught in Canada and shot, as not in this war and not in the last one were there any executions for sabotage for any military reason.

There was an investigation and a report was made by two R.C.A.F. officers who were loaned for the purpose, but all negotiations were handled by the Department of External Affairs, and not by the Air Force.

What was in the report is naturally a matter of major interest to Canadians. Reports at the time of the disaster told of one engine going dead, of the radio going out of commission and shortly after another engine was out of business. It was that sequence of mishaps which fired public opinion to a state where it believed something had gone wrong with intent and as the result of evil planning.

It's An Odd System

Manitoba will have an election on April 22, and Premier Hepburn of Ontario is likely to be the issue. At least we see nothing else in sight. The other consideration is that the fixed five-year tenure of office expires in 1941.

When Premier Bracken goes to the country it cannot be said that he is heading any particular party, nor did he have to serve time as a back bencher before moving up toward the front. He was president of Manitoba Agricultural College in 1922, and following the election of that year he became Premier, and he has held that position since. If he gets another five-year term he will equal the record of Sir Oliver Mowat in Ontario—1872 to 1896—or 24 years in office. And such records are scarce.

In November of last year there was a coalition cabinet formed in Manitoba, including Conservatives, Social Crediters, C.C.F.-Labor, and the reason for the coming together was largely because there was a desire to have a united front on the Sirois report. Manitoba was all set for that report having its way. Premier Hepburn of Ontario is regarded as the gunner who looked through the political periscope and aimed an effective torpedo at the Sirois document when the provincial session was in session at Ottawa. That is why Mr. Hepburn will be the issue in the coming election in Manitoba.

It is an unusual set-up, and the various supporters of the Bracken Government will be nominated as Progressives, Liberals, C.C.F., Conservatives, and so on, supporting the Bracken ministry. At the moment it looks as though there might be a number of acclamations. The members all retain their political identity, but they all support the Bracken Government. Perhaps Manitoba is right and all the rest of the provinces are wrong.

There are reports which state the Government will be returned because people in Manitoba are desirous of showing Ontario that they are opposed to Premier Hepburn and his stand on the Sirois report. What good that will do them is not certain, as Ontario at the moment, and before Manitoba votes, is quite well aware of the feeling of its Western neighbor.

Yugoslavia With Hitler

If Yugoslavia throws in its lot with the Axis powers—and that appears to be the decision—Britain is not going to regard it as something about which nothing will be done. Britain delivered two verbal warnings and the third one was written in plain language and signed so it would be on record.

It is not possible to believe that anything like a majority of the people in that country wish to become tied to the Axis group, but the thing has been daringly engineered. Those in the Cabinet who were opposed have been placed at one side. The government has apparently considered it necessary to take extraordinary steps to deal with any outbreaks which occur when the pact is signed. It is recognized in advance that the signing will not meet with public approval, hence the posting of militia and police and the stoppage of all meetings of protest.

It would make the situation clearer if the attitude of Turkey were more definitely stated. The announcement of a declaration of friendship between Russia and Turkey does not mean much at this critical juncture. Turkey holds a key position in her corner of the troubled world, but that does not mean much unless some one goes ahead and makes use of the key.

Willkie Was Welcomed

Wendell Willkie was not long over the Canadian border until he was aware he was welcome. He gummed up traffic in Toronto, and not since the visit of Their Majesties has there been anything like it.

There is something about the man which attracts people. It was the same when he went to see for himself how things were going in England under bombs. He was not representing any person then but himself, but he was received everywhere, and when he returned he was quick to appear before Congress and throw his weight behind the Lend-Lease bill.

When Willkie was being questioned there by the critics he was faced with quotations from some of his election addresses in which he had been critical of President Roosevelt's foreign policy. He was asked point blank how he could explain his changed attitude, and his answer was typical of the man. He admitted those were his addresses; said plainly that through the election campaign he had never pulled his punches, and then concluded by speaking of President Roosevelt this way: "All that's in the past. Now—he's my President."

An attitude of that sort is sufficient to guarantee the man a reception in any land where free people live today. We're glad he came to this country; wish too that he could have remained longer.

Doing It With Machines

Reading the Lethbridge Herald leads to the belief that the coming of the tractor and the combine put the annual rush to Western Canada out of the running. How many thousands of our young men got a look at the West because of the harvest excursions we do not know. But the number was large.

The Herald recalls that about 25 years ago Southern Alberta was paying hired men $75 per month and at harvest time the prevailing range for extra help was six to seven dollars a day. In '27 and '28 the combine began to make its appearance and by 1930 half the wheat was cut and threshed that way, and the proportion so harvested has been steadily increasing. Excursionists were no longer needed.

With the coming of rubber tire on tractors the work has been speeded. The Herald tells of a one-man hay baler which works from the swath and picks up from three to four tons per hour, making bales from 40 to 100 pounds. Western agriculture is becoming highly mechanized.

Some Hope For Him

Possibly the breaking up of a hard winter and the near approach of spring has something to do with it. There was a young man in Toronto (although not so young as he used to be), for he was 29 and in love. It is recorded that he quarreled with the young lady on whom he had centred his affections as well as his spare time.

When he returned home the outlook was black and he went toward the medicine chest in the bathroom, found some disinfectant and gulped down a portion of it. He would end all. That of course is an old custom, rather quaint but much out of use today.

In an hour he was in pain in the middle, so much so that he went to a nearby hospital, where they operated on him with a stomach pump, and then told him to go home and get better.

There is something to be said for this disappointed chap. When he quarreled with the lady he did not take a revolver along and shoot her. If there was injury to be done he would inflict it upon himself. That way he might yet make a fairly good husband.

Strange Enough

It's a strange story which comes from South Porcupine telling of a 13-year-old juvenile who had fallen into the hands of the police. The lad is reported to have entered a home and there he stole $600. We had not been aware that such sums of money were usually kept lying about where a mere child could find it.

Then he distributed some of the take to his friends and finally set out to see the world, buying a railway ticket to Niagara Falls. In that city he attracted attention of the police by the size of his spendings, and they got in touch with police at Porcupine. Taken back to that town the boy had $149 out of the original $600.

The wonder is that he was not caught previously. If a boy of that age went to a railway station and purchased a ticket from South Porcupine to Niagara Falls it ought to have aroused both interest and suspicion. Apparently he must have been spending freely every move he made, and yet it was not until he had gone through something like $450 that the law caught up with him. Strange enough.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Fires of "unknown origin" account for one-third of the losses on farms, and lightning accounts for $100,000 annually.

One thing we have learned from observation. When we have a snowstorm in our district either Stratford or Orangeville has had a bigger and a better one.

Railway snowplow near Guelph struck a car and turned it over, after which the driver came out all in one piece. Nice trick—that is if you happen to know just how to do it.

Gunner on a small British boat, attacked by a German dive bomber, waited until the bomber was within 50 feet before opening fire with a Lewis gun, and the bomber was destroyed. That sort of waiting is what we call nerve.

WEAKNESS

(By A.R.K.)

¶ When it comes on this time of year, I feel that growing time is near, it strikes me more at noon; when I'll gouge holes within the ground, and raise new plots up like a mound, it's coming very soon.

¶ I have the whole thing well in mind, I know the quantity and kind, I am enthused right now; for I can feel the days ahead, when sun shall beat upon my head, and moisture touch my brow.

¶ And I can close my eyes and dream of such a pretty garden scene, 'twill be revealed some day; and neighbors as they pass will stop, and they will gaze and then they'll gop, "remarkable" they'll say.

¶ For I can see the big red rose, and note the strength with which it grows, the blue forget-me-not; there's not a place where more can go, for I have planned and fixed it so, invested pounds of thought.

¶ But there's a danger well I know, for I've seen seasons come and go, I've handled hoes and spade; it's when the warm days come around, and other things to do I've found, my energy may fade.

¶ For when they turn the heat on good, I just can't work like how I should, my energy will flee; instead of daily doing my bit, I like to spend long hours and sit—beneath my basswood tree.

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

NOW that it seems likely that we shall soon wrest Ethiopia from Italian rule it is fitting that we should know something about it. Personally, I never knew anything about Ethiopia until it came into prominence in 1936, with the Italian invasion and conquest. It is one of those countries, like Russia and the lands of the Scandinavian peninsula, which are neglected in our teaching of history, and I should imagine that few university graduates in Canada knew anything about it. Of course we have all come across references to Ethiopia in literature; Shakespeare uses the word Ethiop frequently to describe something that is black, unsightly, or mysterious. We heard of Ethiopia in the Bible; but Shakespeare and the Bible are scarcely contemporary witnesses, and of the continuous history of Ethiopia we know remarkably little.

C & B

Perhaps the most astonishing thing about Ethiopia at a first glance is its great antiquity. The Greeks knew about it, and regarded it as the most remote of inhabitated lands, the place where the gods held their banquets and where the sun went when it disappeared from the sky. Homer refers to the Aethiopes often. Later on, when history became more scientific and less interesting, the Greek recorder Herodotus gave a good account of the country and the nature of its inhabitants. The Jews were early traders with the Ethiopians and mentioned them often in their records, some of which make up the Old Testament. It is a cherished Abyssinian tradition that the Queen of Sheba, who visited Solomon, was a ruler of their country. The result of this visit, which seems to have been of an unusually amicable nature, was a son, Menelek, from whom all subsequent rulers of Ethiopia, or Abyssinia, claim descent.

C & B

DURING the time of the Babylonian Captivity a great number of Jews settled in Ethiopia, bringing with them their commercial astuteness and their monotheistic religion; there were also Greek colonies in the country at the same time, some of which remained powerful for many centuries. One Graeco - Ethiopian city, Axum, was a great centre of African trade in gold-dust, ivory, leather, medicinal herbs and aromatic gums. The seaport of Adulis, once one of the greatest in the world, is now a ruin, four miles inland.

C & B

Perhaps because of the early Jewish influence, Abyssinia accepted Christianity readily; the first Bishop of Ethiopia was consecrated in the year 330. In the year 525 the Ethiopians made a holy war against the King of the Homerites, on the opposite shore of the Red Sea, the reason being that he had persecuted Christians unmercifully. They defeated him, and became rulers of the richest part of what is now Arabia. But in the 7th century, when the Mohammedans conquered not only Egypt but also Arabia, Ethiopia lost her prize, and, to use a modern term, found herself 'encircled.' As Gibbson says, in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire,"—"encompassed by the enemies of their religion, the Ethiopians slept for near a thousand years, forgetful of the world by whom they were forgotten."

C & B

The subsequent history of Ethiopia is a jumble of conflicting chronicles. The order of the Greeks and the Jews gradually gave place to a tribal civilization, torn by jealously. Tribal chieftains vied with one another for power and lands, and the most successful in arms exacted tribute from the others. He also made himself ruler of the city of Amhara, and assumed the title of Negusa Nagast, meaning King of Kings; the title Negus, applied to Haile Selassie at present, is an Anglicised version of more grandiloquent Negusa Negast. It need not be stressed that the various holders of the title were by no means all direct descendants of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, but they said that they were, and no one had the power to contradict them.

C & B

A NEW chapter in the history of Abyssinia began with the rise to power of King Theodore, a young chieftain who consolidated the whole country under his rule. He was a prince of superior intellect and an admirable ruler until a disastrous second marriage turned him into a cruel and heartless monster. Owing to a piece of official stupidity on the part of one Captain Cameron, Queen Victoria's representative in Theodore's domain, he fell out with England and a war resulted which broke Theodore's power. He was succeeded by Menelek, who in time established friendly relations with Italy. But in time the incursions of the Italians on Abyssinian soil brought about another war, from which the Ethiopians emerged triumphant. Their victory was partly one of arms and partly one of diplomacy, but it did not please the Italians. Readers who may have wondered why Italy chose to attack Ethiopia in 1936 will now see what lay behind it. Ethiopians are a black race, and therefore 'inferior' in the eyes of good Aryans like the Italians, and Italy had an old score to settle with them. The subjugation of Ethiopia was a justification of Italy; it wiped an unpleasant stain off her page.

C & B

And now it looks as though Ethiopia were to shake off the Italian yoke, and to be re-established under British protection, doubtless with the Negus, Haile Selassie as head of the state. The noose around Addis Ababa is closing slowly.

HAPPY LANDING

"Boy! This parachute of pop's sure works swell."

• Italy Must Lose to Win

A Correspondent Just home from the Balkans writes in the Manchester Guardian.

AN Italian said to me a few days ago just before I left the country, "We didn't need Churchill to tell us about the mess we are in, but we are glad to know that he is well informed." This sums up as well as anything what the average Italian thinks of this war. Briefly, he does not like it a bit, but he does not know what to do about it. The middle classes, the working classes, and the Army are all disgruntled, but they see thousands of Germans pouring into the country and they are baffled.

Nowadays, when a Roman meets a Milanese he asks: "Well, when are you people going to start the revolution?" And the invariable answer is, "H'm, we are waiting for you to start the ball rolling." That interchange pretty well sums up the situations.

Curiously enough, the average Italian does not hate or even dislike Mussolini for the plight into which he has got the country. He hates the Germans, whom Mussolini let into the country, and he dislikes the Fascist regime, which is still carried on Mussolini's broad shoulders, but as yet this hatred and dislike have been visited not on Mussolini but on Ciano, the Foreign Minister.

THE Italian remembers the good things that Mussolini did for the country in the past. He realizes that the Duce made a bad blunder and that he is now in the predicament of not being able to go either forwards or backwards and, if anything, he is a little sorry for him. But he does not hate him or even dislike him. No, it is at Ciano's door that the average Italian places the blame for the defeats in Africa, the link with Germany, the defeats in Albania, the passage of German troops into the country.

And a good second comes Roberto Farinacci, one-time secretary of the Fascist party and one of the country's most fervent Fascists. What the country thinks about Farinacci can be gathered from the story that is circulating about him—that he received bribes from Germany. Farinacci was recently sent to the Albanian front with the rank of a captain of the Air Force. But the chief hat is reserved for Ciano. Even ardent Fascists have no use for him.

It is this hatred of the war, combined with the hatred of some of Mussolini's lieutenants, that has led to a new saying in Italy. It is "To win—we must lose this war." This, writes the correspondent, I first heard from the lips of an Italian officer, but I have heard it many times since. The other favorite saying nowadays—and it reflects on what has already been written in this article on Mussolini—is that which greets you when you ask a friend how he is getting on. The answer is "Not so bad, but things were better under Mussolini."

These two sayings, it should be well noted in England, are a candid mirror of the sentiments of the people. Italy is depressed, terribly depressed, but mingled with the depression is a sense of satisfaction that things are going wrong with the Fascists and their Nazi masters.

THE Italian authorities do little to escape such reactions. They still talk about the "Greek front," and that phrase itself brings forth more bad language and sarcasm from the average Italian than anything else. The man-in-the-street is ashamed and humiliated by the reverses which Italian arms have suffered on the Greek and African fronts, ashamed that Italy has been brought so low by a policy which went against every Italian's better feelings. And he finds no satisfaction in the thought that German arms might pull him and his country out of the mire. That, for him, is almost a worse fate than being defeated by Britain.

It was the officer who said "To win, we must lose this war" who also told me:

If Germany wins Italy will become a fifth-rate colony. But if Britain wins we might get some assistance and understanding from the Anglo-Saxon countries and also maintain the independence of our country.

This, again, is an apt summary of the feeling of large numbers of Italians. Paradoxically, they see their only hope in being defeated by Britain. And they make no secret about it either. One hears such sentiments expressed in cafes, in trams and in trains, everywhere where people meet together.

No longer are men and women denounced for saying what they think in Fascist Italy. No longer are they arrested. Nowadays gendarmes and officials hear the people express their desire for a British victory and they shut their eyes and ears and do nothing. That is one way in which the country has changed.

A Bit of Nonsense

NO TIME FOR SPARKLERS

Diamond cutters in New York are paid $195 for a working week of thirty-five hours. Most of the world just now, however, is concerned with matters more important to humanity than precious stones.—Hamilton Spectator.

Out of the Frying-Pan

Mrs. Brown was tired of the borrowing propensities of her neighbor, Mrs. Smith. First it was some household utensil she wanted, then some small article of grocery. The other day a knock came to Mrs. Brown's door. It was Mrs. Smith's little girl.

"Please, mother wants to know," she said, "if you will lend her some pepper and the big flat iron."

Mrs. Brown was determined to stop her neighbor's borrowing.

"Tell your mother I've got other fish to fry," she snapped, and the little girl went away.

She was back in a few minutes, however, with a dish and the usual request.

"Please, mother wants to know if you'll lend her some of the fried fish."

SAFETY IS IN ACTION

AMERICA must give war aid to the British. There is no longer any serious question about that. It is equally true that we have got to see that the aid gets to the British. If that means convoys, it means convoys.

We want to keep it a war without combat if we can. It is more likely to stay that way if the British keep the enemy busy. The Axis could not stop America's material effort by declaring war. They could force us into the active use of force as well as resources.

Our once chance is to keep the flow of war material going to the British. We have got to provide what is required and we have got to see that they get it where and when they need it.—San Francisco Chronicle.

THOSE LEMMINGS

WHEN I was in northern Norway, several years ago, I saw those daft little creatures—the lemmings. They are orange and brown animals, about as large as rats.

These lemmings breed quickly and they would become a pest in Norway if it were not for a strange habit of self-destruction.

Every few years, so I was told, a leader springs up among the lemmings. He leads a host of them to the sea. They all jump in and are drowned.

Why do they do this? No one knows. Perhaps their purpose is to swim across the North Sea and invade Scotland.

Someone should tell Hitler about these lemmings before he sets out to drown the German Army.—Efficiency Magazine, London.

STARVING CATTLE

BROUGHT down to a diet of weeds and nettles, Danish cows are reported to be suffering from near-starvation. This is but one more factor in helping Britain to win the war through scarcity in Europe, and it contains, also, a promise of future benefits for this country.

Many of Denmark's cattle have been slaughtered to supply food for the Reich. Those that remain are sure to deteriorate, both as beef and dairy producers. The strain will be pretty weak among those cows which survive the war.—Windsor Daily Star.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

All we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned every one to his own way and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all.

He was oppressed and He was afflicted yet He opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He was taken from prison and from judgment, and who shall declare his generation; for he was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken.—Isaiah 53.

To The Editor

MR. CAVAN FARMER

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I read your story in the Examiner a few weeks ago regarding unemployment in Peterborough. You stated in your letter that the young men did not work even when they were looking for it. I quite agree with you for that statement, but don't take me wrong; that is only a very low percentage of the people who feel that way.

And you mentioned something about the young men should join the army if they had any guts at all. It looks to me like you are one of those who sit in easy chair and watch the world go by. If you are such an active person try coming to Peterborough and spend an hour or two in all our factory employment offices and see who and what wants work.

I know what I'm talking about and when it is said that the farmers have the preference over the local men, that is right. They also have it over the men who have been discharged for medical reasons and who cannot get a steady or reliable job. So when you talk about guts and the army don't say it in front of an ex-serice man.

Tom McArthur President Of Curling Club

Tom F. McArthur was elected president of the Peterborough Curling Club at an enthusiastic annual meeting in the club rooms, Charlotte street, last night, when reports of a successful year were received, officers elected and the club prizes won during the season were presented to the successful rinks.

T. A. MacKay, retiring president, was in the chair for the early part of the meeting.

Representative to the Ontario Curling Association: Ray P. Best; alternate: W. M. Cruthers.

Honorary chaplain: Rev. W. McDonald.

Auditor: J. A. Robinson.

Umpire: H. R. Martin.

In his anpual report President T. A. MacKay reviewed the various competitions during the winter and congratulated Ray P. Best and W. M. Cruthers for winning the Burden trophy. Mr. MacKay stated that the club had a most successful season with 162 members enrolled.

Secretary-treasurer H. F. Foote presented the annual financial statement indicating that the club had a balance of $437.59 in the current account and $211.92 in the savings account. Receipts during the season Mr. Foote reported had amounted to $3,548.46.

Successful Bonspiel

Reporting for the bonspiel committee T. F. McArthur said that 24 rinks had taken part in the Morrow trophy competition, 22 in the Canada Packers event and 40 in the Neal trophy contest. These three bonspiels had netted around $90 profit. In addition the club's Red Cross bonspiel had netted $41 for that cause. Ray P. Best gave a report of the O.C.A. meeting, outlining some of the features of the successful gathering. He especially stressed Tom Rennie's appeal for more consideration for junior curlers and suggested that much could be done along that line in Peterborough, if the necessary interest were shown and the necessary cooperation forthcoming.

On motion of R. F. Downey, Skips Ray P. Best and W. M. Cruthers were congratulated upon their showing in the Tankard competition and especially upon the success of the two Peterborough rinks in carrying of the Burden trophy.

H. C. Giroux added a word of tribute to the showing made by Ray Best's son, Don, graduate of the Peterborough junior curling section, in the Macdonald Brier competition.

In acknowledging the congratulations the two Tankard skips expressed regret that they had not been able to bring the Tankard honors to Peterborough.

On motion of Frank H. Jobbitt a vote of thanks was passed to the retiring executive upon the work they had accomplished during the year.

Juveniles Are Eliminated By Kingston

KINGSTON, March 25.—(Special to Examiner). — Kingston teams broke even in Ontario Juvenile hockey playdowns at the Jock Harty arena on Monday night, advancing in the B series when Regiopolis College defeated Peterborough by 10-1 and losing in the A section when Oshawa won by a 4 to 1 count. The Regi team took the round with the Petes by a 19 to 6 score while Oshawa won in the A division by a 7 to 1 total.

In both games the winners deserved their spoils. Oshawa had too much team work and drive for the Kingston boys while the strong Regi squad had a big margin on Peterborough with Sweetman setting the scoring pace by netting four goals.

A large crowd for minor hockey attended the games and saw a hard scrap in the first test between Kingston and Oshawa and a clever Regi team in action in the second game. The teams:

Regiopolis: Goal, Reason; defence, Cook and Pearson; centre, Ashley; wings, Sweetman and Keyes; subs, Casterton, Smith, McCarney, Harrison, O'Connor, German.

Peterborough: Goal, Leether; defence, McGregor and Gillespie; centre, Garvey; wings, Huard and Murphy; subs, Close, Hudson, Lawson, Jones, Horton.

The summary:

Marlboros Drop First Game To Royals 3-1

MONTREAL, March 25.—(CP).—Down one game in their Eastern Canada semi-final with Montreal Royals, Toronto Marlboros counted to-day on home-ice advantage and their habit of winning playoffs the hard way to put them back on the Allan Cup trail to-morrow night.

Jaded after a tough series with South Porcupine Bisons for the Ontario title last week, the Marlboros bowed 3-1 to the Quebec-cahmpion Royals here last night. It was the first of a best of five series, with the second slated for Toronto to-morrow.

The Marlboros were at their best in the first period in which they held the Royals even when Frank O'Brien nullified Jimmy Haggarty's opening tally for Montreal. In the second frame, Royals got two straight goals by Russ McConnell and Haggarty for their winning margin.

Only One In Period.

In the second period, Marlboros had only one shot on Goalie Bill Durnan, member of the Allan-Cup Kirkland Lake Blue Devils last season, and just four more in the final frame. Gaolie Baz Bastien was brilliant meanwhile as the Royals swarmed around the Toronto net in continual power attacks.

A crowd of about 7,000 watched Haggarty open the scoring at 15:16 of the initial frame when he took a pass from Johnny Acheson and coasted right in on Bastien. Less than two minutes later, however, O'Brien stole the puck in Montreal territory and stickhandled Durnan out of the net.

It was the last time Marlboros were close as the Royals bagged two goals within four minutes of the start of the second frame. Ronnoy Perowne gave McConnel a perfect pass for the first and Haggarty beat Bastien on a brilliant solo effort.

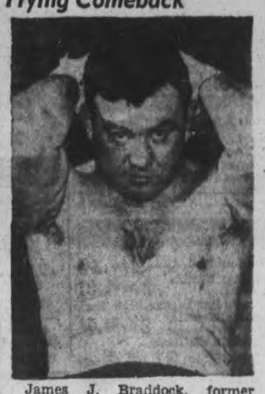
One More Victory The Baron's Goal

CLEVELAND, Mar. 25—(CP). — Cleveland Barons have a chance to step into the final round of the American Hockey League's championship playoffs to-night while two other Western Division clubs, Hershey and Pittsburg, are just starting their battle to reach the same position.

Cleveland holds 2-1 lead over Providence Reds in the fraternal strife between the first-place clubs of the two divisions. One more victory to-night will eliminate the 1940 champions as the leaders play on a best-of-five basis.

Hershey, second during the regular season, eliminated its Eastern rival, New Haven, and Pittsburg ousted Springfield Indians in the third-place series. To-night's encounter at Pittsburg opens their best-of-three semi-final playoff. The winner will go against the survivor of the Cleveland-Providence struggle. The last two games of the semi-final will be played at Hershey on Thursday and Saturday.

Trying Comeback



James J. Braddock, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, is shown exercising his stomach and neck muscles at Stillman's gym New York city when he started training for a comeback because 'there seems to be nobody around able to give Joe Louis a fight.' Braddock now 36, figures to see whether he can get back in shape when he goes on an exhibition junket with Clarence (Red) Burman, scheduled to begin March 24 at Charlotte, N.C.

'Peg Rangers Wallop Bearcats By 6 to 3

WINNIPEG, March 25—(CP). — Port Arthur Bearcats, who took Regina Rangers, Saskatchewan champions, in straight games in Allan Cup playdowns in the last two years, today were the underdogs in the 1941 race.

Rangers last night gave the highly-touted Bearcats a thorough lesson in polish and speed as the 1939 Allan Cup winners went down 4-2 in the first of a Western Canada best-of-five semi-final series. It was Bearcats first loss in nine play-off games this season.

Port Arthur's second bid for Dominion hockey honors—the Juniors—dropped a bruising 6-3 games to Winnipeg Rangers, and held only a slim hope of besting the Manitobans after losing two key men.

Both Defenceman Bob Drainville, who coach Whear said was the "sparkplug," and 16-year-old Tom Brown, Juniors' goalkeeper, are out for the series and possibly for the season. Both were injured in last night's game; Drainville suffering a torn ligament in his left heel, and Brown a torn hip muscle. The teams meet in the second game Wednesday night.

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The attention of hockey fans will centre on the doings in Toronto tonight when the Bruins and Leafs tangle in the third game of their Stanley Cup series. Reports from the two camps indicate that Syl Apps will be back at centre ice for the Leafs and that Bill Cowley and Bobby Bauer are not likely to see action for Boston although there is a chance that Cowley might be shot into the game. Obviously, if he does get in, he will be far from his best. Bauer, according to last reports will not dress. The battling right-winger played 200 games without a miss until the injury he received Thursday kept him out of the lineup in Saturday night's game. The Bruins have called up McCreavey of the Hershey Bears for duty tonight and he will fill in one of the forward line gaps. Bingo Kampman will be on the sidelines for the Leafs.

* * * * * *

Although you can never tell about Stanley Cup battles the odds favor Leafs to take tonight's tussle, especially if Cowley and Bauer are non-starters for Boston and Apps is out there for Leafs. The morale of the Toronto crew has improved materially, too, as a result of Saturday's victory. But it is a little too soon to toss in the towels so far as Boston is concerned, although some of the Toronto commentators seem to have done so already. Art Ross's team is a tough aggregation and the players are not likely to blow high, wide and handsome merely because they dropped a ball game even if it was the second they had last in the space of two months. The Bruins have not been beaten on foreign ice since before Christmas, their two defeats in that run having taken place at home and they will probably be found full of fight tonight. In fact this should be one of the feature games of the whole series.

* * * * * *

The last time the Leafs and Boston faced each other in the Stanley Cup series in 1939, the two teams met, as this year, in two clashes at Boston to start the round going and just as in the present series they split the two battles and returned to Toronto for the next two games on even terms. The Bruins however proved to have too much power for the Leafs on that occasion, taking the two games on Toronto ice by scores of 3 to 1 and 2 to 0 and returning to Boston captured the Stanley Cup by winning the fifth game by 3 to 1. What happened two years ago of course does not mean a thing so far as the present series is concerned. We merely mention it because public memory is short and a lot of folks probably have forgotten the details of the last series between the two clubs.

* * * * * *

Two Others Tough Battles

There are two other Stanley Cup arguments tonight and both should be a honey for the losers will be through for the season. Montreal Canadiens play in Chicago and most of the critics are picking the Black Hawks to win on the strength of the fact they are performing on their home cushion and because of their greater experience. But that Canadien crew will battle them all the way. At Detroit the Rangers and the Red Wings will stage a bitter duel. Even although the New Yorkers have only won one game in Detroit in three seasons they have a real chance to break that hex tonight for Ebbie Goodfellow, veteran Detroit defence star will be out of the game with an injured elbow. The Red Wings can scarcely afford to spot the New Yorkers a player of Goodfellow's defensive ability and it could well be that the injury to the veteran means victory for the Rangers.

* * * * * *

Peterborough Y.M.C.A. volleyball team journeyed to Toronto Saturday to compete for the Ontario Intermediate championship and failed to make the grade although they managed to break even with two of their opponents. Against the Galt team the Peterborough squad lost 15 to 7 and won 15 to 1 and against Toronto Y.M.H.A. they lost 15 to 12 and won 15 to 4. The championship was captured by Western University "Meds" who won all of their six games, defeating Peterborough 15 to 9 and 15 to 3, Galt 15-6 and 15-8 and Toronto Y.M.H.A. 15-6, 15-10. The Peterborough team was composed of the following players: Stan Payne, Nels Stanger, E. Vincent, W. Young, W. Ferguson, A. Dryland. J. Wolstenholme and W. Stanbury

Says Bill Walshe in the Kingston Whig-Standard: Kingston should soon be emerging from the slump in senior sports, caused by the failure to sponsor the minors, considering the success of the age limit teams in hockey and basketball this winter and in baseball next summer Kingston is proud of its present senior hockey team, now in the O.H.A. Senior B finals with Owen Sound, but there are only two Kingston developed players on the club and when the students graduate from college or return to Intercollegiate play a complete new team will have to be formed if Kingston is to continue in the senior ranks of Canada's great winter game. Those replacements are at present in the making, on public school, bantam, midget, mite and juvenile teams. The new outdoor rink at the Fair Grounds helped in the development of minor players and it may not be many years until Kingston can enter complete home-brew teams in senior ball, hockey and basketball."

Collegiate Juniors Out

Peterborough C.V.S. juniors are out of the running for the Lakeshore group basketball honors but Coach H. A. Craig's youngsters went down fighting. They clashed with Cobourg Collegiate in Cobourg last night, starting the game with a deficit of four points as the result at the hands of the Cobourg team in the first game here. The Peterborough collegians put up a determined battle to pull the round out of the fire last night but the best they could do was to defeat Cobourg by one point and thus they lost the group title series by three points, the score on the round being Cobourg 34, Peterborough 31. It was a close and hard-fought series with the scoring cut down by the effective checking of both squads.

Ray Best, one of the veteran skips of the Peterborough Curling Club made an earnest plea at last night's annual meeting for more consideration and assistance to youngsters who want to learn to curl. He pointed out that out of the junior players of years ago some very fine curlers had been developed and remarked that there were many kids at the present time who would welcome an opportunity to play the game if they were given half a chance. They would have to do their curling after school, he said and some arrangement could be made so that the ice would be available for them and coaching could be provided. In that connection Ray Bacon said that all the skips should take a hand in training the young curlers and he offered to do all he could in that direction. The executive will consider the whole question of junior curlers.

Some Ball Camp Training Notes

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 25 —(AP)—Here's a hint for those who believe Brooklyn Dodgers have given up on Babe Phelps, the big catcher who failed to put in an appearance at training camp. Phelps wired yesterday he was ready to report. In reply, Secretary John McDonald told him he could join the Montreal farm club at Macon, Ga., and get into shape at his own expense. But, McDonald added, "We wired that we'd try to get him a rate at the hotel."

NAHEIM, Calif.—No matter what happens to the White Sox in today's game with the Athletics, it can't be much worse for Jess Dobernic, Chicago rookie hurler. He was struck in the face by a batted ball in hitting practice, retired to the bench and was hit on the head by a foul ball during the game. He called it a day and retired to the clubhouse while his mates took an 18-1 plastering from the Cubs.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—With Hugh Mulcahy in the United States army and Kirby Higbe sold to Brooklyn, Bill Crouch may be the star pitcher the Phillies always seem to have on their roster. He turned in his third fine pitching trick of the exhibition season yesterday, shutting out Cleveland with three hits in five innings.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Deacon Bill McKechnie is not altogether satisfied with his Cincinnati outfield. Ival Goodman still is 15 pounds under his best playing weight and hasn't seen an inning of action; Jimmy Gleeson's peg from right field looks weak; Jimmy Ripple isn't on stride, and Harry Craft, most improved player in camp, has gone into a tailspin after a period of hard hitting.

LOS ANGELES—Dick Conger, who celebrates his 20th birthday April 3, seems close to winning a berth with Pittsburgh Pirates. The six-foot, 185-pound youngster from Beaumont allowed only one hit in five frame against Los Angeles yesterday, although he made two wild pitches and walked three.

Y.M.C.A. Youngsters Defeat 'Y' Girls

There was a novel game of basketball at the Y.W.C.A. gym last night when the Y.W.C.A. cadets, the Y's junior girls' team were beaten 31 to 14 by a team of young boys from the Y.M.C.A. who have been training in a basketball class under the guidance of Doug. McPherson and Walter Ward this winter. The two teams battled on practically even terms in first half, the boys leading 11 to 10, but in the second half the boys outfit handling the ball faster and shooting more accurately ran up a score of 20 points as against 4 by the Cadets. The girls had the advantage of height but their shooting was off color and thus scoring opportunities were thrown away. However the Cadets played about their best basketball of the season with M. Lawless, J. Collins, N. Smith and D. Saunders particularly outstanding. Teamplay featured the work of the boys and there was no one particularly outstanding.

The teams:

Y Cadets (14)—N. Smith 4, D. Saunders 2, S. Maguire, I. Stewart, M. Lawless 8, S. Pringle, B. Pringe, J. Collins.

Y.M.C.A. Boys (31)—McNaught, Gynane 2, Estlick 11, Thirnbeck 4, Robinson 2, Pinch 2, Richardson 4, Darling 4, Lee 4.

Y.M.C.A. Ladies Retain Game Margin

The Y.M.C.A. teams unbeaten record in the Ladies' City League was finally halted when they lost the final game of last night's match to Lucky Strikes. However they are still in first place with 15 points in the league standing, one better than Outboard Mariner who turned in an impressive 4 to 0 triumph over Kawarthas. The Westclox won a 3 to 1 decision from the Examiner and Commercials counted another 4 points for their bye.

Agnes Anderson and Marion Timm led the high three hitters for the day. The former counted 733 for the Westclox and Miss Timm 732, with a 344 single included, for the Outboards. Mrs. Watts of Kawarthas turned in another smart effort when she chalked up 681, the best in the 600 or better circle.

Sydney Carves Volants Down By 5 to 1

MONTREAL, Mar. 25—(CP). — Sydney Millionaires, the Maritime champions, and Montreal Royals, representing Quebec in Allan Cup playdowns for a third straight year, were both off on the right foot today toward clashing to decide Eastern Canada's representative in the Dominion hockey final.

Expected to have little trouble with the Ottawa and district champions, Hull Volants, in their best-of-five semi-final, the hand-picked Millionaires ran to form with their second straight victory last night. The 5-1 triumph at Sydney, N.S., left them needing only one more to advance to the final.

Little was known of the relative strength of the other two semi-finalists before they met at Montreal last night in the first game of their best-of-five round. Royals became favorites when they swept to a 3-1 victory over Toronto Marlboros, who appeared jaded after their hard road to the Ontario title.

With the second game of the series scheduled for Toronto ice tomorrow, however, the Marlboros still are rated a good chance to get back into the running.

Royals ran up their lead on a pair of goals by centre Jimmy Haggarty and another by Russ McConnell, while Frank O'Brien got the Marlboros' lone tall. In the last two frames, Toronto had only five shots on goalie Bill Durnan in the Montreal nets, while the Royals continually stormed Baz Bastien, brilliant Marlboro netminder.

At Sydney meanwhile, the Millionaires spotted Hull the opening goal and then scored the next five tallies. Jack Seymour got the only first-period goal for Hull, but in the last two frames Johnny McCreedy counted twice for Sydney, while the others went to Remi Van Daele, George Sneil, and Powell.

The series now swings to Ottawa, home ice of the Volants, for the remaining games.

There was no action in the Memorial Cup hunt.

Archery Golf Rapidly Gaining Popularity With The Fair Sex

Archery golf is rapidly gaining popularity with American co-eds, and the young lady, LEFT, is stringing her bow in the approved manner. One end of the bow is placed on the ground against the foot. One hand pulls the bow in the centre while the other hand pushes at the top of the bow and at the same time places the bow string into the groove. One thing about archery golf is that sand traps will never bring worry wrinkles to the player's brow. This fair player's arrow, CENTRE, landed in the trap and she is now using the shorter and heavier approach arrow to get on the green. While sand traps may be taken in the stride, water hazards are something else again, for the rules of archery golf say that the player must stand on the spot where the previous arrow landed. This damsel, RIGHT, has doffed her shoes to make her next shot. Incidentally the water was cold.

Farnsworth Bees Edge Imps For Welsh Cup

TWEED, March 25.—(ENS).—After playing five games with two wins on each side, and a 20 minute tie in the final series for the Dr. Welsh trophy, in the East Hastings Rural League, Roslin Imperials, the team representing the home town of the donor of the trophy, engaged the Farnsworth Bees in the sixth game of the series at the local arena on Monday and lost the cup 4-3 in one of the most exciting games of the year, before a capacity crowd.

Play opened fast in the first period, with the Imperials tallying two goals in the first minute and a half of play, with Clare scoring on a pass from Jarrell, and then Jarrell banging home Clare's pass. In the closing minutes of play, Marsh scored from Porritt to cut the lead to one goal.

Ganging up in the early stages of the second period, Wager rapped home a pass, taking the puck in his own end of the rink. However, Clare put the Imperials one up on a pass from Jarrell in a ganging attack in front of the Bees' nets, while Porritt was serving time in the box for boarding.

Pressing hard for the equalizer, the Bees hounded the Imperials throughout the period, and kept them from getting a clear path to the goal, while they in turn went to work, with Wager taking a pass from Marsh and Orr to tally the tying goal. Both team battled hard for the tie breaker until only one minute of play remained, when Marsh snared a pass from L. Meraw and Wager to rap in the winning counter.

Apps To Be Out With Leafs For Third Tilt

TORONTO, March 25 — (CP). — The old bugaboo that an exhausting preliminary series may turn a favored Stanley Cup finalist into a pushover loomed before Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins today as they prepared to resume tonight their best-of-three Stanley Cup semi-final.

While the lesser clubs potter around in best-of-three quarter-finals, then a semi-final, the top two clubs engage in a best-of-seven round, from which the winner often emerges exhausted and punched here and there with injuries.

Boston and Toronto have played only two games of their semi-final series so far, each winning one, but already the injury lists are imposing.

Tonight in the third game of the Boston-Toronto series, Syl. Apps, Toronto's captain and centreman, will appear for the first time in weeks. Bingo Kampman, star defenceman will not play because of an injury suffered late in the season. Bill Cowley, Boston's star centre and the league's standing scorer, is a doubtful started because of a shaking-up received in the first game last Thursday in Boston. Bobby Bauer, Boston's most effective forward, next to Cowley, is almost definitely a non-starter.

The fourth game of the series will be played here Thursday, the fifth back in Boston Saturday. If another game is necessary, it will be played in Toronto next Tuesday, and if the series goes the full seven games, the last one will be in Boston, April 3.

Favor Rangers To Shatter Detroit Jinx

DETROIT, March 25—(CP).—An aggressive band of New York Rangers determined to cast defensive hockey to the winds, ruled slight favorites today to overcome the Detroit jinx and the Red Wings in the third and deciding game of their Stanley Cup preliminary playoff series here.

It's do or die tonight for the Stanley Cup champions, and they won't forget the lesson learned in the first games of the best-of-three series—that it doesn't pay to play cautiously against the hard-hitting Wings. The Rangers played that way here last Thursday in the first game, and lost 2-1 in overtime. They played all out in New York Sunday night, and won 3-1.

Favoring the Rangers as they seek to win in enemy territory, is the fact that Ebbie Goodfellow, star Detroit defenceman and playing coach, may be out of action. Goodfellow injured his elbow in the Sunday night game, and yesterday could bend his arm only with difficulty.

Harold Jackson probably will be called up from Indianapolis if Goodfellow is unable to play. Manager Jack Adams also will make another change in his line by replacing Connie Brown, third-string centre, by Ken Kilrea from Indianapolis.

A crowd of 10,000 is expected for the crucial tussle.

Tonight Decides If Canadiens Are Washed Up

CHICAGO, Mar. 25—(CP).—The hockey season ends to-night for the losers of the crucial Stanley Cup preliminary playoff game between Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

With each team showing a win and a loss in the best-of-three series to-night's game will decide which squad is eliminated from Stanley Cup play and which goes on to meet the winner of the Detroit Red Wings-New York Rangers series in the semi-finals.

The Hawks, who beat Canadiens 2-1 here to open the series before dropping an overtime tilt 4-3 in Montreal, have the advantage of home ice.

To offset that, Chicago will be without the services of two pivot men, Bill Thoms and Bill Carse. Thoms is still out with an injury suffered a week ago while Carse was hurt on Saturday in the first game he had been able to see action in in a month.

Doug Bentley suffered a shoulder injury in the second game but is expected to be ready for limited action to-night. He remained in hospital yesterday.

Canadiens will be minus Elmer Lach, rookie centre star, but Red Goupille will be back in action on the defence.

Bethany Ladies Hold Bee, Make 8 Quilts

BETHANY, March 25.—(ENS).—The local branch of Red Cross ladies met in the town hall on Thursday, and put on another quilting bee.

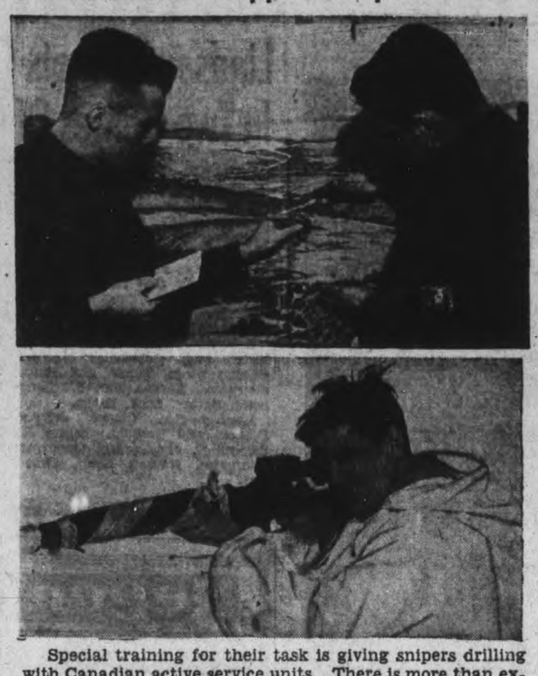
A splendid number of ladies attended early in the morning, and framed eight quilts ready to be worked on after luncheon hour.

The following ladies were present in the afternoon, several returning for to finish the work in hand: Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Cairns, Mrs. H. Kennedy, Mrs. K. Fallis, Mrs. Jarvis, Mrs. James, Mrs. White, Mrs. H. H. Ryley, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Waddell, Mrs. C. Reynolds, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. Hamilton, Miss Nesbitt, Miss Thompson, Mrs. Monk, Mrs. F. W. Reynolds, Mrs. Muckle, Mrs. Harry Neals, Mrs. George Foster, Mrs. Walter Neals, all of Lifford; Mrs. Clarence Neals, Bethany, Mrs. Thorndyke, Mrs. Veale, Mrs. Bigelow, Miss H. Staples, Miss Richardson, Mrs. Cummiskey, Mrs. L. Kennedy, Miss Stark, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Rowland, Mrs. Price, Mrs. Palmer and Mrs. Weatherilt.

Mrs. Price gave a report of the last month's work, accomplished by Manvers' district Red Cross, minus Janetville, which has pooled forces with Lindsay.

Mrs. Thorndyke gave a list of those who had been responsible for supplying quilt supplies and other donations to Red Cross work, and expressed appreciation for the hearty response to the call to meet for the afternoon, several coming a long distance over bad roads to assist at the quilting. A number of extra quilt frames were prepared but had to be left for another day's work.

Canadian Bush Supplies Snipers



Special training for their task is giving snipers drilling with Canadian active service units. There is more than expert marksmanship involved in the job, for snipers are expected to act as scouts and to know how to utilize any natural advantages in the terrain which they are crossing. Many of the men are full-blooded Indians or trappers and hunters from the back-woods areas. Their natural ability with a rifle is important. At TOP two expert marksmen study a contour map during a classroom session which includes drill in signals, map-reading and similar subjects. BELOW one of the snipers draws a bead through a telescopic sight. Note white cloth wrapped around barrel to break the solid outline and afford better concealment in the snow.

Japan, a substantial part of Asia will be ruined by that Nazism.

"It means with their fifth column, they will begin to invade, at least with ideas, South America."

It would mean that North America would become an armed camp. It would mean that most of its substance would be spent on defence forces and a totalitarian form of trading would have to be adopted to trade with the rest of the world.

The leaders of democracies had a heavy burden in these times. Theirs was the burden of the leadership to save liberty "and the least that one individual such as I can do is to uphold the hands of those leaders in this critical hour."

"Recently," said Mr. Willkie who was Republican candidate in the United States 1940 presidential elections, "when I was talking with the president of the United States I told him very frankly—and I will say the same to your prime minister tonight—that part of my objective in joining in the saving of liberty is that I may, at a later date, dispute with these gentlemen about less important questions."

Mr. King, in introducing the speaker, also spoke of a new order. It was based not on fear, greed or hate, but on mutual trust and the noblest qualities of the human heart and mind. It found expression when Britain determined to put an end to aggression in Europe and again when Canada and other nations of the British Commonwealth took their place at Britain's side in the war.

"You will find its latest manifestation in the resolution of the United States to lend its powerful aid to the nations which are fighting for freedom," the Prime Minister said. In the aim of this brotherhood of English-speaking peoples, nations large and small were finding a new unity in the common defence of freedom and of human rights.

Hepburn Has Praise.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn thanked Mr. Willkie and referred to his recent trip to Britain as a "heroic and courageous act" which "will make his memory live in the hearts of Britons while Britons live, and there will always be Britons."

He declared that unless the hearts of men and women were calloused the appeal would find a real response in all Canadians. He urged Ontario citizens to get behind the appeal and put it over.

Expressing his confidence that Mr. Willkie's visit here would be a source of encouragement to Britons, he said "there can be no halfway measure in regard to the prosecution of a war in which our national freedom is at stake."

The first speaker was Maj.-Gen. A. D. McRae, chairman of the National Campaign Committee. He read messages from all parts of Canada expressing confidence that the objective of the drive would be reached.

7. Yugoslavia Communists, reportedly acting on order from Moscow, urged a campaign of sabotage and non-co-operation to disrupt communication lines within the country which might aid the Germans.

British quarters declared a break with Yugoslavia and Hungary, which would leave the British government with only nine of the European diplomatic missions which existed before the war, might "come at any moment."

Observers expected the British to follow up such a break by swiftly seizing Yugoslav merchant ships plying the Mediterranean, for it was understood that under a secret provision of the Axis pact Yugoslavia would "coordinate" all her commerce and industry with the Nazis.

Yugoslavia's merchant marine of more than 400,000 tons has been making rich profits carrying neutral cargoes through the British blockade.

Nazi Troops In Italy.

Reports were current in Belgaade that Germany had dispatched 18 or 20 divisions of troops (216,000 to 240,000 men on a basis of a 12,000-man division) to Italy to keep internal order and forestall a separate Italian-Greek peace which might thwart Nazi plans. The troops were said to have filtered into the country with the greatest secrecy.

Diplomatic circles attached great significance to Russia's pledge to remain neutral, should Turkey find it necessary to meet force with force.

This was described as the first concrete step the Soviet Union has taken to influence the course of the war since she signed her non-aggression pact with Germany in August, 1939.

Uncertainty regarding Russia's intentions presumably has governed all of Turkey's actions to date, and with the fear of Soviet intervention removed, it generally was expected that Turkey might take a more forthright stand against German overtures.

In this connection it was noted that Ismet Inonu, president of Turkey, sent King George of Greece a message to-day commending "the gallantry and resistance Greek forces are displaying in discharge of their national mission."

The note coincided with Greece's national Independence Day celebrations.

Greek quarters declared that action of Yugoslavia granting Germany permission to move war materials down the Vardar Valley toward the Greek frontier, in itself, would violate the Greek-Yugoslav non-aggression treaty of 1934.

COUNTY FARM TOPICS

Waterloo Favors Taxing Land For Federation
Crop Improvement Body Favors Haying Tripods

Waterloo County branch of the Federation of Agriculture endorsed at its annual meeting the principle of taxing land to provide funds for the Federation. They preferred the one-fifth of a mill on assessment. E. C. Hallman of Waterloo Township was elected president.

It was stated at this meeting that 98 per cent of the farmers of Middlesex County have signed a petition in favor of the plan for legislation permitting the tax which could be avoided by any farmer who was unwilling to contribute to the maintenance of the Federation and its work.

A resolution expressed appreciation of the Ontario Government's action in assisting bacon and cheese producers and also by paying part of the cost of freight on rough grain from the West.

New Early Potatoes.

The Warba variety of potatoes matures about a week earlier than the Irish Cobbler, according to a bulletin on potato production recently isued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and prepared by the staff of the Ontario Agricultural College.

This is what it says of the Warba: "Recently introduced to Ontario, it resembles the Irish Cobbler in general shape of tuber, but has pink eyes. It matures about a week earlier than the Cobbler, and has good table and keeping qualities. It is the highest yielding of our early maturing varieties, and during the past six years has gained in popularity in Ontario."

The Chippewa is placed third in order of earliness of maturity, and is described as follows: "The Chippewa is a white, oblong, shallow-eyed potato. It is a comparatively new variety developed by the United States Department of Agriculture, and is one of the popular varieties in the United tSates. It was introduced to Ontario through potato investigational work, and has won a place for itself among a number of the better varieties. Its tubers resemble those of the Katahdin, but it ripens about a week or ten days earlier than this variety, and three weeks earlier than the Dooley. Because of this, it is meeting with considerable approval from growers, especially in the northern potato growing sections of the province, where very large yields of high quality, mature tubers have been obtained."

The Katahdin follows the Chippewa in order of earliness. "It is a white, oval-shaped, shallow-eyed potato, originated by the United States Department of Agriculture. It has been grown at the Ontario Agricultural College since 1929, and, in addition, its performance has been studied on many good potato farms for the last nine years. During this period it has proved to be a potato of outstanding merit. Under average conditions it ripes about seven days earlier than the Green Mountain and twelve days earlier than the Dooley. Its yield of total crop and percentage of marketable potatoes are similar to that of the Dooley, while its table quality, in appearance and flavor, is superior. It also has a high degree of resistance to mild mosaic and is rapidly increasing in acreage and popularity in Ontario."

The bulletin damns the Green Mountain and Dooley with faint praise. Here is one quotation: "The Green Mountain is quite susceptible to disease and because of this is gradually losing favor in Ontario, even though its table quality is good. This variety gives best results in the cool northern sections, but is not so suitable to the southern parts of the province."

Senior Seed Champion.

Peterborough district winners at the Quinte Seed Fair were as follows: First prizes in the winter wheat and barley were won by Robert Armstrong, who was also declared senior champion in both these varieties.

Gordon Hancock won first award ten bushels sealed of early registered oats, and was tied with Oscar Parks for the T. Eaton Company's silver tray to the exhibitor winning highest amount of prize money in the regular grain classes. An additional tray will be given in this class.

Mr. Armstrong was also first prize winner for field peas.

Other results were: Gordon Hancock, 3rd in early oats, 2nd in alfalfa, 4th in registered oats, 1st for the Kingston Agricultural Society's special for half-bushel of alfalfa.

Robert Armstrong, 12th for ten bushels, sealed, of late oats, 5th for ten bushels of registered barley, 4th for registered winter wheat, 4th in alfalfa, 5th for red clover, 2nd in alsike.

Erle Tully: 5th for late oats, and 2nd for winter wheat, 3rd for Irish Cobbler potatoes, and 3rd for Rural New Yorkers.

Henry Blewett was 5th in the early oats class, 4th in the class for ten bushels of early oats.

More Tripods.

Peterborough Crop Improvement Association is hoping to see a big increase in the number of tripods during the 1941 haying season. They have recently sent out a circular letter asking this question:

"Are you going to use some tripods for early cut hay this year? ....If so, you will need some poles read as tripods. They should be made now when you have time."

Here is another question by the Association: "Have you tried some of the new hay and pasture mixtures? Are you going to use fertilizer when you seed down fields."

The Association subscribes to official pronouncement that, "pasture is the cheapest feed you can provide for your live stock....Improved pasture and early cut hay will help increase your volume of milk."

Calves for War Aid.

The Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada hopes to raise four or five thousand dollars from a calf sale at Brampton on May 27, for the British Friesian Cattle Society. They expect to auction one hundred heifer calves, and no expenses will be deducted from the sale receipts. Assistance includes even free advertising from the farm press.

To every breeder who donates a calf the Extension Service Committee will make a nominal payment of $20 from its funds. "Favorable publicity will be given to the entries and also to the consignors in an attractive sale catalogue."

Each county association is being asked for a group of calves, and members who do not have a calf of the right age for sale are asked for cash donations or trucking service. The proceeds will be given to the British Friesian Society to be used in any war effort to which they wish to contribute the money.

OBITUARIES

MRS. HENRY KILLEN.

ENNISMORE, Mar. 25—(ENS).—The funeral of the late Mrs. Henry Killen was held on Saturday morning at ten o'clock, the cortege proceeding from her late residence to St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, where Rev. J. V. Gillogly was celebrant at the funeral mass, and also officated at the last prayers in St. Martin's Cemetery, where interment took place.

Pall-bearers were Albert O'Connor and Fergus O'Cononr, Detroit, Richard Killen, Peterborough, Leonard Clancey, Otonabee, Edward Crough, and Daniel K. Crough, of Ennismore.

Mrs. Daniel K. Crough presided at the organ during the chanting of the requiem mass by the girls' choir.

The late Mrs. Killen (who before her marriage was Margaret Ann O'Connor), eldest daughter of the late Owen O'Connor and Catharine Callahan, was a lifelong resident of Ennismore, with the exception of a short time spent in Peterborough. The deceased's kindly and pleasant personality endeared her to many friends who deeply regret her passing. Of a humble and modest disposition her greatest interest centred around her own home and family. Remarkable, indeed, was her Christian fortitude and resignation to God's Holy will when grim death claimed her two sons while yet in their youth. One son Francis was killed some years ago by a lightning bolt while working in the field, and in later years his younger brother Gene was stricken while visiting his uncles in Detroit and passed away, his remains being brought home for burial.

The late Mrs. Killen's patient suffering during months of illness preceding her death was still greater evidence of her never-failing trust in God's mercy. During these months she had at intervals been a patient in a Toronto hospital, but since Christmas had been confined to her own home, where she passed away on Wednesday.

She is survived by her husband and one daughter Mary, four brothers Albert, John, and Fergus O'Connor of Detroit, and Eugene of Peterborough; one sister, Mrs. Daniel Costello of Enismore.

The number of spiritual offerings bore mute testimony of the esteem and respect in which the late Mrs. Killen was held by her many friends and neighbors.

Those from a distance who attended the funeral, other than the deceased's brother formerly mentioned, were: Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Clancey and son of Otonabee, Mr. and Mrs. John Killen, Richard Killen, Peterborough, James Sweeney, John Sweeney, and Mrs. F. Sullivan, Douro, Bernard McManus, Smith, the latter a brother-in-law of the late Mrs. Killen.

MARY JANE HAGGART.

ENNISMORE, Mar. 25—(ENS).—The funeral of the late Miss Mary Jane Haggart was held on Tuesday afternoon from her late residence to Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough, for interment. The funeral service was conducted at the home of the deceased, with Rev. G. H. Johnson of St. James' Anglican Church, Emily, officiating.

The late Miss Haggart was a lifelong resident of Ennismore, having died in the same home in which she was born. She was possessed of a personality that endeared her to all with whom she associated, whether it was in her immediate neighborhood, in general community life, or in the work of her church, where she will be greatly missed as an ever-willing helper in all branches of work. Those who perhaps were most privileged to know and to partake of the deceased's almost unlimited acts of charity and hospitality were her close neighbors and little children. During her five months of illness she was frequently visited by these children, who were impressed by her kindness to them before she was stricken with ill-health.

In speaking of the life of the late Miss Haggart, Rev. Mr. Johnson eulogized it as one of a good Christian, full of charity and unselfishness.

The deceased is survived by one brother George and a sister Sarah, to whom their many friends extend the most sincere sympathy.

Mountain "Walks" Buckles Tracks, Derails Freight

Railroad tracks were shoved aside, buckled and twisted out of shape as result of landslide on the Conemaugh division of the Pennsylvania Railroad along Pittsburg's Allegheny River Boulevard. An estimated million tons of dirt and rock slid down to disrupt rail traffic as the mountain literally "walked." The freight engine shown here was derailed.

23 Ships Go Down In Sea War Week March 16

LONDON, March 25 — (CP). — Twenty-three British and Allied merchantmen totalling 71,773 tons were lost in the sea war during the week ended March 16, the Admiralty reported today.

They included 17 British vessels totalling 60,670 tons and six Allied ships totalling 11,103 tons.

The total of losses dropped for the second consecutive week. The previous week's total was 98,832 tons and for the week before that 141,314.

The Admiralty said that since the beginning of the war the Germans "have lost by sinking and scuttling approximately 1,449,000 gross tons of shipping and the Italians 790,000 tons.

"In addition ,they have suffered the loss of some 62,000 tons of neutral shipping unde rtheir control, or useful to them."

(The most recent figure for British, Allied and neutral losses since the war began was about 5,000,000 tons.)

Axis shipping losses in the five weeks ended March 16 were estimated by the Admiralty at "about 300,000 tons."

The Better Mousetrap...

HON. W. A. BUCHANAN
Chairman, Newspaper Publishers Committee

MOST people would probably say that the "freedom of the press" means that newspapers can freely present the facts in their news columns, their opinions on the editorial page.

This is the half of the story which guarantees your right to go on saying how you shall be governed and by whom. It is a right which Canadians should be jealous of, and never take for granted.

But there's more to it than that . . .

You have another kind of freedom which no totalitarian state can allow its subjects. A kind of freedom which the pressure of war makes it more than ever necessary for us all to guard. This is our economic freedom . . .

Except for some very necessary restrictions—put not on you but on the manufacturers—you can buy the things you want, not the things you are told to buy . . . You buy knowing where to go, how to get precisely what you want, which brand names to trust, how much you'll have to pay.

You have the FACTS. And you mainly get these facts from the free competition in the advertising columns of your newspaper.

In Canada, to assure a following for his brand of shoes or his coal business, a man must both convince people his merchandise is sound or his service is right . . . and keep them convinced. Others constantly challenge his hold on the business, offering better goods or better service or lower prices. And the first man can't keep the news of the other fellow's offer from you!

This way, by having all the FACTS, you get more or better values for your money . . . you know where the better mousetrap is! This way we avoid dangerous monopolies. This way, if we manage it wisely, the country can keep up the basic prosperity without which it will be quite impossible to pay for the war.

So we can't afford to be smug about this freedom either. It's so easy to lose a little at a time. And it's so tightly bound up with our other freedoms of thought and speech and action.

When you realize that it is your newspaper which stands between you and the loss of your right to know things, your paper takes on a new significance.

And when you know that it's only a free press which keeps all your leaders—in government, and in business—in direct competition with each other, it seems vastly important to keep it free.

How can you help? First of all, don't be complacent. Be alert to these risks! Read your newspaper more carefully . . . talk with your neighbour about what you read. Make sure he's alert, too. Show him this advertisement. Above all, yell the house down when you yourself know of a piece of non-military news that's half-told . . . or worse, an important story that isn't told at all!

Freedom is easier to defend than to recapture!

NOTE: The Newspaper Publishers Committee, speaking through its chairman, will bring you one of these institutional advertisements in this space each week. Clubs, patriotic societies, business firms or individuals who would like reprints may have them by writing to the Business Office of this newspaper.

STORY IS UNTRUE.

A rumour circulating in the city that a man labelled as a meningitis carrier was placed in the isolation hospital is definitely false. A man now in the hospital has meningitis, and the man working near him was sent home for observation because he had been what is known as a contact, not a carrier. This man as yet has shown no signs of being affected and he was ordered into his home merely as a precautionary measure. This story has been verified by the Medical Officer of Health and the supervisor at the hospital.

Canadians Urged To Face Facts

County Council Meets In Special Session

The County Council in special session today discussed a minor domestic question relating to the continuing tenancy of one of the apartments in the Court House which has not yet been vacated by the family of J. F. Fry, former turnkey, who enlisted in a branch of the Canadian war services about the third week in January.

Mrs. Fry told the property committee at noon that Fred J. A. Hall, acting Sheriff, had not informed her that she should move from the premises.

Reeve M. H. Johnston remarked to the council that the former turnkey had enlisted voluntarily, and that he should then have arranged for other quarters for his family.

Deputy-Reeve A. W. Archibald, chairman of the property committee, reported that Mrs. Fry was prepared to leave by the end of this week, but she expected that her husband would be granted a month's salary of $66 from which one month's rent of $25 would be deducted. The council had previously decided in a resolution by Reeve A. B. Mann, seconded by Reeve Coughlin, that there was no outstanding payment due to Mr. Fry, and that the apartment should be vacated by April 1.

Reeve Mann said that Mr. Fry had received his salary for the full month of January, and that his family had the use of the partment for February and March at $25 a month. He also pointed out that the council had a pay an extra $5 a week to William Buchanan, formerly of Norwood, who has been appointed in Mr. Fry's place, to make up a difference rental allowance because the apartment at the Court House was not available for his occupancy.

Mr. Buchanan has been living in the city since the early part of February. Reeve Gifford said that Mrs. Fry told the committee she was ready to move out on March 1, but she expected that the county would pay her husband an allowance of one month's salary from the time he enlisted.

Reeve John McColl commented that the council apparently "has nothing to say about what goes on around here except pay bills." In the meantime the council passed the Mann-Coughlin resolution, and when the property committee returned at noon with their report of an interview with Mrs. Fry, it was pointed out that they could not rescind their motion at to-day's session. It was said they would have to wait until they met another day.

Perjury Count Dismissed Against Brooks

A charge against George Brooks of Blairton that he committed perjury in a recent liquor trial heard before Magistrate Gee was dismissed this morning when Brooks appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., for preliminary hearing.

"I am asking to have this case withdrawn," said Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C. "After considering the evidence I do not believe there is enough to convict this man."

"We are asking for dismissal, not withdrawal," said W. J. Arthur Fair, who appeared for Brooks.

"I am not going to offer any evidence," Mr. McElderry replied.

"In that case the preliminary hearing will be dismissed," said Magistrate Langley. "If he had elected to be tried before me he himself would be dismissed."

The government's main reason for proceeding with the scheme immediately was said to be due to a desire to economize by eliminating overlapping and competing services.

Restaurants Jack Up Price To Ten Cents Of Half-Pint Bottle Of Milk

Organization has jacked the price of milk up to ten cents the half-pint bottle in the restaurants, and the public getting wise to this all-out "gyp" is preparing a loud squawk as business for the next regular meeting of the recently formed Restaurant Proprietors' Association.

Get a yard stick and measure the profit on the half-pint bottle of milk up at that ten-cent mark. The local dairies charge 3½ cents a bottle. Take 3½ cents from 10 cents and you get 6½ cents margin, and if that isn't a big gob and bite of profit at the expense of the public who eat down down even if they don't have to then somebody must be cock-eyed.

In one restaurant yesterday they even trotted out the old serve-it-in-the-glass idea, that was grey-whiskered when Noah put out to sea, contrary to the Board of Health's by-law which demands that milk be sold in the half-pint containers. It may be that the Medical Officer of Health hasn't heard about this reactionary wrinkle of trotting out the glassful stunt, instead of the bottle, but he is herewith advised that in one restaurant on Monday milk was served to a reporter, and it was produced not in the ten-cent bottle form, but in a glass at five cents.

Comments last night were to the effect that the new restaurant association has every right to charge whatever price they think the public will pay, even that 6½-cent spread per bottle, but the Health Department should soon know that apparently an effort is being made to revive the sale of milk by the glass. Consumers like the half-pint bottle, and have heartily approved the action of the Board of Health in requiring its medium of sale, and they are going to object to any attempt to elbow the sale-by-the-glass idea back into respectability.

Communications In Wartime Are Described

"The telephone was born largely out of the inpulse of the inventor, Alexander Graham Bell, to relieve his mother's deafness. From a humanitarian beginning it has developed along pathways of unexcelled human helpfulness. But war comes and the resources of the telephone laboratories, all the fine fruits of their matchless painstaking and skill are employed in myriad phases of war-making," stated George L. Long, historian of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, in an address on "Wartime Communications," before the Peterborough Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs at the Empress Hotel Monday.

The Kiwanians were the guests of their sister service club and were welcomed by President T. J. Carley of the Rotary Club, who presided. John Troke, president of Kiwanis, was also at the head table.

Pointing out that the responsibility for the perversion of the benefits of science to the ends of destruction rather than of construction has lain, throughout history, with war-minded despots, Mr. Long, who was introduced by M. H. Riddle, went on to outline the use of communications in wartime from earliest times, and described many products of modern telephone research which are being used by the armed forces of the Empire in the present conflict. He also dealt briefly with the contributions which The Bell Telephone Company and its employees are making to the national war effort.

The value of the telephone in the mobilization, organization, and direction of armed forces was recognized almost as soon as the invention was perfected. Mr. Long said. Alexander Graham Bell himself demonstrated its use at Aldershot in England with the assistance of the Royal Engineers in 1877. The first actual use of a telephone system on the field of battle took place in the Russo-Japanese War of 1905. The same tactis, only on a much larger scale, were used by both sides during the war of 1914-18. Telephone research workers produced many special inventions, including "electrical ears" for detecting enemy airplanes, gun emplacement, and submarines from afar, during that conflict.

In the present war, telephone research has produced instruments which help to promote air safety, and by means of teletype and telephoto, written messages and military maps can be transmitted over great distances by wire.

In conclusion, the speaker said: "This is part of the story of one industry's contribution in men and materials to Canada's defence of principles which are dearer than life itself. Other industries can, no doubt, match that record. With resolute determination, Canada as a whole is working to defend the last citadel of democratic freedom. In the words of Prime Minister Churchill: 'Let us, therefore, brace ourselves to our duty, and so bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men will still say, "This was their finest hour".' "

Thanks to the speaker were expressed by Kiwanian Dr. C. M. Scott.

No Minimizing Of Striking Power Of Nazi Germany Is Plea Of Former Paris Correspondent

Warning of the danger of minimizing the power and menace and evil of Nazi Germany was the underlying message of the address by P. J. Phillip, former Paris correspondent of the New York Times for twenty-four years, culminating with the fall of France, at the annual dinner meeting of the Chamber of Commerce in the Empress Hotel last night.

"In the air and at sea it is still nip and tuck whether we can hold," Mr. Phillip said in the metaphor of caution "that it is always a good thing to look occasionally over one's shoulder at the gloomy side." And in the same attitude of facing facts, he added, "It is no good playing ostrich."

Mr. Phillip disclaimed the purpose of bringing a message to his large Peterborough audience. In his own modest reference to himself and his visit to this city he said he was simply bringing a report—of things he had seen and heard and also felt, with impressions of the experiences in the France and Europe after the treaty of Versailles to the spring of 1940. And his warning was set in an atmosphere of event and reality, and not in any spirit of defeatim.

J. W. Geraghty, president of the Chamber of Commerce, was chairman of the after dinner program which skimmed over the usual business details to make way for Mr. Phillip who was introduced by A. R. Kennedy, editor of the Examiner.

First Blow To France.

The failure of the United States to ratify the Treaty of Versailles was a tremendous blow to the French people, Mr. Phillip recalled, and he quickly spanned the intervening years of disillusion with the statement that the climax of that period was reached in May last year when Marshal Petain appealed to the Germans for an armistice. Incidentally, Mr. Phillip said he sat through the war of 1914-18, saw the ceremony of peace conference in Paris after the the signing of the Treaty of Versailles, watched the efforts of the Reparations Commission to collect reparations from Germany, went into the Ruhr with the French troops when Poincare decided direct action was necessary, saw the collapse of that adventure, first heard Hitler in 1923 when his voice was beginning to be heard, and so on through the series of events from the first meeting of the League of Nations to the beginnings of the Vichy government in the earliest days of French defeat.

And still going on, hoping against hope for that brave new world "which those political big fellows, the spellbinders, whose words and actions we report, are always promising us." Mr. Phillip said it was in no defeated or defeatest mood "that I have come here to make my report to you."

Keep Empire Free.

"For myself I am at war with Adolf Hitler because I dislike intensely the Nazi and Communist form of police governm ent. I much prefer the Mounties to the Gestapos and the Ogpus. And second, I want to keep this large vital space which is the British Empire free from domination by any one race and by any one doctrine, and free from being systematized and organized in the Teutonic manner until it is robbed of its grand incoherent liberal human vitality. I am for growth and not for stagnation, and I know there can be no growth where there is no freedom."

In the occupied part of France, Mr. Phillip said stagnation had already settled down, and instead of boasted efficiency there was corruption and bribery. Ordinary needs were obtained according to your ability to pay or in recognition of social position.

Marshal Petain, reversing the effects of the Treaty of Versailles, was on of the greatest tragedies in the history of the world, Mr. Phillip said, and expressed his confidence that the spirit of courage was still unsubdued in France.

Price of 1914-18 War.

Speaking of the collapse of French resistance, Mr. Phillip recalled the words of Petain at Bordeaux when he announced that the armistice had been signed, and gave as the reasons

Rents Increase As Houses Become Scarce

Reports reaching this office indicate the several tenants facing an increase in rent may appeal to the chairman of the Rent Control Board at Ottawa to have this city placed in the area under which the Commission has control.

One woman who was so angry she refused to give her name telephoned last evening to say the landlord had given notice of a seven dollar a month increase in the rent, and she was telling all who would listen, she would neither pay the increase nor move out.

Generally speaking rents have remained stable except in cases where houses have been vacant and the rent has been raised as the demand became more acute. At the present time there are far more prospective tenants than there are houses, and the same applies to apartments. There are some appartments, very desirable ones and modern, which rent from $28 a month up, while the rents for the houses available today in many cases exceeds this figure.

A. E. Thompson, real estate agent said he had sold eight houses since the middle of February and at least half of the people now occupying these houses have to move on April 1st and have not secured new places as yet.

Build New Homes

There is a feeling that the demand for houses will cause a substantial increase in the number of new homes built in the spring, and on top of this many people owning large houses plan to convert them into duplexes. This is particularly true in some homes where the family has grown up, married and moved away leaving the parents behind.

One family arrived in this city from Brighton three months ago, rented a large house in the west end residential section and today the woman employs a maid and has eleven boarders.

Spr. Jack Heffernan, formerly employed as clerk at the Grand Hotel is now on active service with the 3rd Field Park Company, Royal Canadian Engineers. He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Philip Heffernan of this city.

Youth Charged With Intent To Rob Woman

To be threatened by a young man whose face was covered by a scarf and who was brandishing what she believes to have been a revolver was the terrifying experience recently of Mrs. Charles Yardley, an elderly woman living at Downer's Corners.

Mrs. Yardley's husband was at work and she was alone in the house when the youth invaded her home and demanded money. Although badly frightened the woman refused to comply with the demand and finally the man left.

Police were notified and yesterday Provincial Constable David Silvester arrested Ted Corrigan, 22 a neighbor of Mrs. Yardley's.

This morning in police court Corrigan pleaded not guilty to a charge of assaulting Mrs. Yardley on March 10 with intent to rob her.

The accused elected summary trial, and at the request of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., was remanded until Tuesday of next week.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., fixed bail at $500.

Port Hopers Promise To Aid British War Victims' Fund

Contributions for the Peterborough City and District War Victims' Fund continues to pour into the Examiner office in a steady stream and now only $200 is needed to make up the last £500.

This morning F. G. Mann reported that two prominent women in Port Hope had congratulated him on the success of the Fund and had promised that if the organizations to which they belong raised any money in the near future they would add their weight to the Peterborough Fund in order to not only help along but keep Eastern Ontario in the limelight of War activities.

Last night at the Salvation Army Temple the Youth Group headed by Arthur Tutte, arranged for a showing of pictures of Bermuda by Captain Robert White of Lindsay and a silver collection netted $10.20 to the fund.

Mrs. Russell Mortimer of R.R. 3, Lakefield has donated a crochet bedspread to the fund and tickets will be sold by the Queen Alexandra A.C.F. under the supervision of Mrs. E. Barnes, at 15 cents or two for a quarter. This bedspread is truly a work of art, and was made by Mrs. Mortimer, as a contribution to the distressed people of England.

The All Saints' Wide-Awake Bible Club made a donation of $5 today to add still another church organization to the long list of groups which have supported the fund.

The following is the latest list:

300 Pre-Fabricated Houses Are Available City Is Advised

Word was received at the City Hall today through Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., that this city would receive 300 pre-fabricated houses if the need justifies their erection and the City Council approves of the plan.

The message indicates that Joseph Pigott, well-known Ontario contractor, and a director of the Wartime Housing Board, had tentatively set down that Peterborough as a busy industrial centre would be able to secure 300 of these houses. The houses are the outcome of an experiment to develop an easily constructed modern dwelling which could be manufactured in quantity and erected in a short time in centres where the demand for houses far exceeded the supply.

It is the intention of the Government to take down these dwellings as soon as the war is over and they would then be taken to some other location where they might be useful.

The suggestion that the houses be erected here will be discussed at the next meeting of the council.

Father In Army, Boy Guilty On Six Counts

"Detective pictures have had something to do with this boy's downfall," John A. Bradshaw told Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in urging leniency for eighteen-year-old William Curtis who had pleaded guilty to six charges of breaking and entering and theft.

Mr. Bradshaw said that the boy's father was a soldier and he asked that he be taken into consideration when punishment was being decided upon. The accused was one of a family of seven, brought up during the depression era, defense counsel pointed out.

"It is a difficult case," agreed Magistrate Langley, as he remanded the youthful prisoners to jail for a week for sentence.

Evidence was given in three of the cases involving break-ins at the store of Max Roseboro by Constable Archie Menzies who said the accused admitted entering the Roseboro establishment on those occasions.

Constable Bruce Menzies testified that he was hidden in the store of Ned Vitarelli on the night of March 21 and at 5.45 o'clock in the morning he had seen Curtis enter the store by means of the fanlight over the door. When arrested the boy had admitted being in the store on previous occasions.

"There had been marked money in the till at the store before the previous robbery," said the witness, "and when we arrested Curtis that morning some of the marked bills were included in the $14 we found on him."

Oshawa Asks To Probe Rents

OSHAWA, Ont., March 25—(CP). —City Council last night strongly endorsed a motion requesting an investigator from Ottawa to look into rent increases and evictions here. Alderman James Haxton proposed the action and was seconded by Alderman Clifford Harman.

"If council does not invite the investigator to come here, I feel that I will have to take the responsibility of doing such, Mayor J. C. Anderson stated.

At the last meeting of council a motion by Ald. Haxton asking that a rent control board be brought to Oshawa was voted down by 6 to 4. At that time Ald. Haxton warned that unless action was taken by council the renters would send a deputation to Ottawa, and a committee of council was appointed to hear complaints of rent boosts.

Dr. B. A. Brown, as head of the committee, named to bring in data on cases of rent increases and evictions, presented a report, but no action was taken on this by council. The report dealt with 11 cases, and in part, found that in some cases landlords had unnecessarily increased rents. Other members of the committee were Aldermen Hayden, Macdonald and Clifford Harman.

Hanson Opposes Borrowing Whole War Bill

OTTAWA, March 25 — (CP). — After covering a field of discussion which included the installation of arms on ships built on the Great Lake, war emergency training, and the distribution of employment, the House of Commons adjourned last night with the $1,300,000,000 War Appropriation Bill still before it.

The closing note was struck by M. J. Coldwell, acting C.C.F. House Leader, who said he proposed to raise a question ruled out of order during debate of the resolution preparatory introduction of the bill—the establishment of compulsory, interest-free loans.

Mr. Coldwell will probably speak on this proposal today.

Last night Opposition Leader Hanson noted that provision is made in the bill for borrowing all the $1,300,000,000 if necessary, and expressed his opposition to borrowing on that scale.

Criticism of provisions of the measure came from Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity, North Battleford), who said she could not give it her support. After urging that grants be provided for health and educational services in Canada, Mrs. Nielsen said:—

"I feel that in the name of the people whom I represent I must oppose this Appropriation Bill because it neglects some of the fundamental things for which we as a nation believe we are fighting."

In the advisers to the Government there was too strong a representation of business and industry, Mrs. Nielsen said.

Quotes Lincoln

She quoted Abraham Lincoln as saying at the time of the United States Civil War: I have two great enemies, the Southern Army to the south of me, and the financial institutions in the rear, and of the two the one in the rear is my greatest foe." Then she said:—

"If . . . business concentration is to guide the destiny of Canada in the future as apparently it is guiding it today, then I think that we can bring the words of Lincoln up to date by saying, 'We have two great enemies, Hitler to the front of us and the financial institutions in the rear, and of the two the one in the rear is the greatest foe'."

"That is, from the point of view of the common people the financial institutions are at the present time our greatest foe."

Mrs. Nielsen said that in the War Appropriation Bill the Government was being one-sided in its war effort. Average farm and industrial incomes were too small to permit of good health and educational opportunities. She urged that grants for education be made to provinces in need of them so there would be equality of opportunity. The time had passed for politics, and statesmanship was needed, she said.

Patriotism should begin at home, in and around the lives of Canadians, and "those of us who are prepared to take this course have as great a claim to patriotism as those interested in the business side of the war effort," Mrs. Nielsen said.

Fraser Urges Troop Aid.

T. L. Church (Con., Toronto-Broadview), T. C. Douglas (C.C.F., Weyburn), G. K. Fraser (Con., Peterborough West) and Victor Quelch (N.D., Acadia) advocated greater transportation concession for members of the armed forces on leave. Mr. Douglas said men stationed on the coasts found it hard to get home on leave.

Defence Minister Ralston said an attempt was made to meet the situation of men on the coasts by moving a whole unit back for relief, so as to give each a turn.

"This is regarded as a line duty," he said, "and the same with the units in Newfoundland and Iceland. As a matter of fact, Iceland was one of the matters I discussed with the War Office when I was in England a short time ago."

The Minister promised to look into the matter of transportation in general to see if there was any ground for reopening the question with the railways.

Labor Minister McLarty reviewed progress of war training schemes throughout the Dominion. He said he expected no difficulty in training 50,000 students in vocational schools and another 50,000 in the industrial schools in this calendar year.

Defence Minister Ralston assured the House the army has no disposition to take men from industry which has to do with war production. The army was not in conflict with industry. Young men of 21 could have their compulsory military training postponed if their services were essential to industry.

Pensions Minister Mackenzie said the restoration of ex-servicemen to civil life had been considered. Complete information would be given them in respect to opportunities in civil life and the closest liaison was being maintained with the Labor Department. A new Welfare Division was being set up for this work.

Rap at Ontario.

Don McNevin (Lib. Regina City) protested against a published statement credited to the Ontario Minister of Labor (Hon. N. O. Hipel) which said that only skilled labor was required in Ontario. Mr. McNiven said there was centralization of war industry employment in Ontario while many men on relief in Saskatchewan, able to work, could find nothing to do.

He said protests from other parts of the country could be expected to grow if the Ontario employment "monopoly" continued.

Resources Minister Crerar announced that Canada and the United States have agreed on a reinterpretation of the Rush-Bagot agreement concerning armed vessels on the Great Lakes. The agreement, he said, constitutes "quantitative and qualitative naval limitation" in that water area. Canada and the United States had recognized that the technical sense and definitions of 1817, when the agreement was made, did not fit the present day and could be waived without vitiating the underlying political spirit which had to be maintained.

This 124-year-old agreement governs naval operations and armaments in the Great Lakes area. Because of the war, it was agreed that without involving deviation from the basic interest of the agreement—that important naval vessels should not be built for Great Lakes service—it was decided further "interpretation" of the agreement should be made.

"An understanding was accordingly effected by an exchange of notes in November, 1940, to the effect that armaments might be installed on vessels built in Great Lakes shipyards but dismantled for the voyage to the sea," said Mr. Crerar.

Not For Service on Lakes.

A letter dated Nov. 2, 1940, from the United States Minister to Canada, J. P. Moffat, to the late Dr. O. D. Skelton, Canadian Undersecretary of State for External Affairs, made the following provisos to United States approval:

1. The vessels are not intended for service on the Great Lakes.

2. Prior to start of construction, each government is to furnish the other with full information concerning any vessel to be constructed at Great Lakes ports.

3. The armaments of the vessels are placed in such condition as to be incapable of immediate use while the vessels remain in the Great Lakes.

4. The vessels are promptly removed from the Great Lakes upon completion.

The Rush-Bagot Treaty restricted British and American forces to one vesel not exceeding 190 tons and armed with one 18-pound cannon on Lake Ontario, two similar vessels on the Upper Lakes and one such vessel on Lake Champlain.

"It Can't Happen"—But They'll Be Ready If It Does

You'd never think one of these shapeless black A.R.P. garments could be attractive, but take a look at this one as Winnie Wiberley (1) buttons up the neck. Of course, Winnie doesn't do the picture any harm. The volunteers are potential instructors themselves, and they're thoroughly drilled in handling panicky crowds if air raids come. Hauling on the heavy boots in (2) is Viola Quigley. All set for something in the way of total war are these two oddly cos-costumed figures (3), dressed in the sine qua non of the well-equipped A.R.F. squad. Throughout Ontario, aided by government grants, civilian defence corps are rehearsing for the day when Canada may be invaded from the air.

Wreck Survivor Reaches Home

LOS ANGELES, March 25.—(AP).—Mrs. Fern Thompson, only survivor of a pearl-hunting expedition that ended in shipwreck and starvation, came home to-day too weak to tell of the ill-fated 5,000-mile voyage to the South Seas.

A missionary found the 28-foot ketch Wing On half submerged on a reef of Visoqo in the Fiji Islands Nov. 24 with Mrs. Thompson lashed to a mast. Dalton Conly and his wife, Eve, were dead of starvation. Mrs. Thompson's husband, Chester, had died and been buried at sea.

Only a brief log, the last entry dated Nov. 12, told a partial story of the horror aboard the drifting ketch, disabled by storms soon after start of the trip from San Francisco last Aug. 14.

"All night east again, but back again now," read the last entry, evidently referring to the ketch's aimless wanderings. "All food and water exhausted."

Four days before Conly had written: "We buried Chester Thompson, age 21, at 8.10 a.m. Died of starvation . . . . collapsed stomach; at any rate he was too far gone to stand any of the remaining can of apricots we had."

Thompson had died the day before, said the log, which added: "What next? Help us, oh God."

Mrs. Thompson, weak and haggard even after her long rest on an island plantation, was escorted down the gangplank by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Mann, and taken directly to her Los Angeles home, where her two children, Jacquelene, 2, and Tom, 14 months, have been cared for during her absence.

The Conlys lived in Oakland, Cal.

Baronet Toasted His Rival Court Is Told

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, March 25.—(CP)—Lady Carbery testified yesterday in a hearing of a murder charge against Major Sir Delves Broughton that dinner company on the night before the killing of the Earl of Erroll had toasted Lord Erroll and Lady Broughton in champagne.

A statement by the 57-year-old Baronet, charged with murder of the Earl, previously acknowledged that he had watched philosophically as a love affair developed between his bride and the 39-year-old wide ower Earl. Lady Carbery said Broughton himself proposed the toast to Lord Erroll and Lady Broughton "and their future child."

The Earl of Erroll, hereditary High Constable of Scotland, was found shot through the head in an automobile in this British East African colony last Jan. 24.

Lady Carbery, wife of Baron Carbery, testified she had been a close friend of the Broughtons for months.

On the night before the tragedy, she said, the major appeared unhappy and peevish and told her he would not give his wife his estate or make her an allowance.

She said he also declared he had been "extraordinarily lonely" in his three months of marriage and that he spoke in a loud voice and "seemed the worse for drink."

The next day, she said, after Lady Broughton had told her the Earl was killed in an automobile accident, she lunched with the baronet at his home. After lunch, she testified, he broke down and wept.

John Butcher, an automobile mechanic, said he had examined the automobile and found it out of gear in a pit into which it appeared to have at run at about ten miles an hour.

A cigaret butt soaked in blood was found near the accelerator, he said. Earlier testimony had established that the baronet smoked two brands of cigarets and that the earl was a non-smoker.

Postmortem evidence had brought out previous that the wound was not self-inflicted and that the body apparently had been arranged in the kneeling position in which it was found.

Lady Delamere, mayor of Nairobi, said she attended Lord Erroll's funeral in her official capacity but had refused a request by Major Broughton that she drop a farewell message from his wife into the grave.

At lunch with him later in the day, she said, he referred in "most abusive terms" to his wife, saying he "never wanted to see her again and loathed the sight of her."

To steel our souls against the lust of ease;
To find our welfare in the general good;
To hold together, merging all degrees
In one wide brotherhood.

To teach that he who saves himself is lost;
To bear in silence though our hearts may bleed;
To spend ourselves, and never count the cost,
For others' greater need.

Using Cocoa Fashionable

By CLAIRE THOMPSON

Just as smart as the spring styles is the new chocolate cocoa now on the market. Fashion experts suggest accessories of "Cocoa Fudge" to blend with milady's Easter suit but food specialists are all talking about cocoa itself—the rich chocolate kind that has so many uses in cookery.

Although cocoa flavors and enriches puddings, sauces, cakes, ice creams and candies in the modern kitchen, its most famous use is that of making a delicious beverage—hot cocoa.

Cocoa made by hastily throwing all the ingredients together is likely to be flecky and uneven. It will have an uncooked taste too. It takes a little longer to cook cocoa and water first but you will have a smoother texture and better flavor this way.

What are the advantages of using a chocolate cocoa? First, you do not need as much of this cocoa because it is extra rich and dark. Then too, it is cheaper than cake chocolate.

Hot Chocolate Cocoa.

1 level teaspoon cocoa.
1 level teaspoon sugar.
Speck of salt.
1-3 cup warm water.
¾ cup milk.

Mix cocoa, sugar and salt in top part of double boiler.

Add water and mix until well blended.

Cook over low heat for 4 minutes, stirring constantly.

Add milk gradually and set pan over hot water continuing to cook until the mixture is thoroughly hot.

Beat the cocoa with a rotary egg beater until light and frothy.

Whipped cream or a marshmallow on top gives added flavor and helps to prevent the skin from forming on top of the cocoa.

Yield: One serving.

Celebrates 50th Year Of Entry Into Religion

Moth St. Michael of the Sisters of St. Joseph. Superior of St. Joseph's Convent, Cobourg, celebrated recently the golden jubilee of her entry into religion. At present ill in St. Joseph's Hospital here, Mother St. Michael can look back over a half century of continuous and fruitful service to God.

Enjoying the esteem of her fellow-Sisters and the confidence of her Superiors, she has capably filled and graced many positions of trust in the life of the community. The first Mistress of Novices after the establishment of the new community, she was entrusted for many years with the formation of subjects to whom the community looked for the maintenance and extension of its life and services. A valued member of the Executive Council for over twenty years, Sister St. Michael has served as superior in many centres, facing and overcoming difficulties with her persevering strong faith and good judgment.

Her many friends will join with her Sisters in religion to lay before the great White Throne a garland of prayerful thanks for her long and useful life and a spiritual bouquet for her speedy recovery to enjoy, for many more years, the blessings of good health and God's favour.

Parcels For Men Overseas Must Be Well Packed

A parcel or letter from home is received with enthusiasm by our soldiers, and if the parcel contains foodstuffs it is doubly welcome to the men in service far from home. Good things to eat, warm wearing apparel and cheery messages from home have been contained in the thousands of parcels and letters which have safely reached their destination overseas, addressed to Canadian soldiers now stationed in Britain. Mail weighing many tons has been shipped from the Dominion since the first contingent of 'our boys' went to the homeland, and it is heartening to the sender to know that only a comparatively small percentage of mail has been lost due to enemy action.

Through lack of proper care in packing, however, some parcels have reached their destination badly damaged or with some glass container broken, allowing the liquid to sep through the contents. Postal officials stress the fact that mail for shipment overseas should be securely parcelled and all breakable articles eliminated.

Fearful that a food shortage may be imminent, many Canadians have forwarded bulky, weighty parcels to soldiers in Britain. The men are well-fed, be assured, but the luxuries such as chocolate, sweets of any kind, fruit cake or fruit juices would be doubly appreciated. We have learned through experience that many of the boys have a hankering for good peanuts, unprocurable in Britain—but a word of caution, there have to be shipped in airtight containers to assure freshness on arrival.

With the coming of spring, thoughts of heaping plates of pancakes covered with golden maple syrup will no doubt bring a longing for the sweet maple liquid to the Canadian soldiers. Cakes of maple sugar or specially sealed tins of the syrup would be hailed with joy. Don't disappoint the men in service in distant parts, your letters and parcels are a link with home.

Age Element Is Most Important In Marriage. Very Few People Are Happy When There Is a Great Difference in Their Years.

Dear Miss Dix — Do you think that a man of 50 can ever keep a girl of 20 content and happy in marriage? That's my case, and I feel as if I were married to my grandfather. My husband and I don't think alike nor act alike. We can discuss a subject for ages and still not arrive at a harmonious decision. We don't talk the same language. Even a funeral parlor would seem bright and gay next to our evenings at home. This is my second marriage, but it is no soap.

MRS. A. T.

ANSWER—A happy marriage between a man of 50 and a girl of 20 would be virtually a miracle. The gulf of years that lies between them is too wide for them to span, no matter how hard they try to do so, because on each side of it is a different way of life, different ideals, habits, customs, different thoughts, feelings and desires. Foolish are those who attempt to mix youth and age. Of course, in these days a man of 50 isn't aged. He thinks of himself as a mere boy, but he befools himself in doing so. Without his realizing it time has laid its hand upon him and he no longer feels like a boy or thinks like one or wants to do the things that boys do. When he marries he wants to settle down and have a wife who will be a fireside companion instead of a dancing partner. He can't understand why a girl of 20 wants to go places and do things, instead of staying put with him.

He has had his fling and is tired. He has seen the world, and he is here to tell you it isn't so hot, after all. He is convinced that all of the old ideas, the old customs are the best.

And you are young. Your feet ache to dance, and you want to laugh and play about with other youngsters. You scoff at the old ideals of feminine conduct and haven't the least desire to imitate the behavior of your husband's late mother.

Differences Are Great

So there you are, and there is nothing you can do about it, unless you can make up your mind to obey your husband and fall in with his ways, as if he were indeed grandpa; or unless he can realize that children have to be amused and will buy you a lot of pretty playthings and take you to the circus. Sometimes grandpa can make life very soft and easy for his little pet, you know.

But the time element is one of the most important things to consider in choosing a mate. Very few people are happy who marry out of their age class. Custom makes manners and morals. So many things are proper now that used to be scandalous that a husband whose ideas are of the vintage of 1900 and a wife whose point of view is of 1941 can always find things to quarrel over.

Leaving Property To the Children

Dear Dorothy Dix — Do you think an aged woman is justified in leaving a small piece of property, which is all she has, to a son and daughter-in-law who have taken care of her for more than 15 years and who have been kind and good to her? There are several other children who have contributed in no way to the welfare of their old mother, but who are already making trouble about the little that she will leave behind her when she dies. What are your views on this subject?

ANSWER—I think the mother should in common justice leave the bit of property to the son and daughter-in-law who have taken care of her. It will be small repayment for all they have done for her.

I do not think that there is anything sadder nor more disillusioning in life than that so many children are so greedy and grasping that they will cheat their mothers out of any little bit of money they may have if they can, and that the quarrel over what pittance she may leave behind her even before she dies.

But we have all seen this happen only too often. We have seen children honey over mother until they got her to deed her property to them, and then turn her out of her own house.

And we have seen neglectful and ungrateful children, who had not been to see mother or even written to her, flock like vultures about her sickbed when she came to die, hardly able to wait until the breath was out of her body before they fought over her little savings.

Mothers are not always grateful to their children. Sometimes they love best the ones who do least for them, and give them the most; but it isn't fair. It is the sons and daughters who have cared for mother, who have been patient with her whims and tender and loving to her who should be rewarded.

Final Decision Is Up to Man

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am very much in love with a girl who has every quality that would fit her to be the wife I desire, except that she has had an affair in the past she deeply regrets. She thinks that if I love her enough I should marry her in spite of this.

I have talked the matter over with my mother, and she thinks that the girl would make me a good wife and that I should not hold this thing against her. What is your opinion of this case?

REX B.

ANSWER — Knowing the girl, you should be able to judge her character well enough to know whether she would be likely to one tragic experience, no temptation again, or whether, having had that could lure her from the strait and narrow path.

There are women of loose morals who will always take the easiest way, and who are never to be trusted, but there are others who wash out their sin with their tears and make the most faithful and devoted of wives.

But whether a man should marry a woman with a blot on her past depends entirely upon his own attitude toward the matter. If he can forget as well as forgive, he may risk it but if he is going to brood over it; if the memory of it is always going to torment him with jealousy; if it is always going to be a barrier between them, then for the girl's sake, as well as his own, he should not marry her.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, March 26

THE Planetary configurations governing this day may be of the utmost significance for unique, audacious and well-planned enterprises of an advanced objective and ambitious scope, even those with ideals, ideas and aims that may be considered visionary, ultra or untenable. However, there is a definitely practical and stabilizing influence at work to balance such temerity, possibly the attainment of approval and capital from influential personages through the very novelty or strange scope of the project. Public recognition is in order, but exercise due caution and sound judgment lest there be sudden and disastrous let down.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of extraordinary experiences or adventures, with strange, novel and unique enterprises getting not only public acclaim but the substantial support of those in high financial circles. This despite certain peculiar, visionary and audacious aspects to such enterprises, which should be promoted with precaution and sanity as well as with alertness to fraud, intrigue or some sinister involvement, which might prove a major disaster to the highest ambitions.

A child born on this day should be endowed with many singular and perhaps startling talents and characteristics, with a trend toward the unique, ultra modern and visionary. These, however, will attract financial support and public acclaim.

WE . . . NOTICED

....An interesting letter received by a relative here tells of an aged widow, a woman who worked hard all her life and now has a small Old Age Pension of $20 each month, who has already expended $4 in War Savings from that small cheque, and has knitted more than fifty pairs of mittens with yarn from old sweaters she unravels.

C.N.R. Officials Honor W. Fred Skitch

W. Fred Skitch, popular agent of the Canadian National Express retired this month after 45 years of service with the Company, and high officials of the organization visited the city to pay tribute to the local agent on the eve of his retirement.

S. O. Martin, General Superintendent of Toronto headed the delegation of company notables who paid a surprise visit to Mr. Skitch's home, and S. H. Bullett, Superintendent, presented the guest of honor with a Victor Globe Trotter radio, and handed a large bouquet of American Beauty roses to Mrs. Skitch.

Mr. Martin in his remarks said he could not let Mr. Skitch's retirement from the active ranks pass without extending to him personally on behalf of the management and himself, a word of hearty appreciation for his long and faithful service and he voiced the wish that Mr. Skitch would be spared many years of health and happiness to enjoy his retirement.

Had Long Career

"You have had a long career in our business and I am sure that it will be a great source of satisfaction in your leisure to reflect on the fact that you played an important part in building up the express service to the standard and position it enjoys today with its many patrons and friends.

"Personally I regret that I was unable to call on you more often since coming to this district, but may I assure you that the capable manner in which you ran your office has always been in mind. We are glad that on reaching your retirement you are still a young man, physically, mentally and spiritually, which we hope may continue for many years, and while you may not be with us in an active capacity you will still be one of the Canadian National Express family.

S. H. Bullett who made the presentation added his words of praise and said he brought greetings from many other officials and agents who would have been on hand if it had been possible.

Mr. Skitch acknowledged the gift on behalf of his wife and himself, and spoke of the many happy associations which he had formed during his term of office

Entered Service in 1895

Mr. Skitch entered the service of the Great North Western Telegraph Company as operator on operator on August 12th, 1895, and stayed at this job until 1902 when he accepted a position with the C.G.E. Company as their private operator. The first agent was the late Hon. George A. Cox, but there were many changes, including Geo. A. Cox and Sons, Cox and Davis, Davis Thompson and Company.

After serving with the C.G.E. Mr. Skitch returned to the office of the Davis-Thompson Company on July 1st, 1904 and was in charge of the telegraph and express departments until January 31st, 1920. On February 1st, 1920 the local express office was transferred to the Grand Trunk depot and Mr. Skitch became agent. Later on this was taken over by the Canadian National Railways and he continued as agent until this month.

It is interesting to note that many young men have gone out into the world to make their way as telegraph operators and expressmen, and express agents, having learned the business under the supervision of Mr. Skitch. A few of these are Melville Jamieson, C.P.R. ticket agent; Bert Boomer, C.N.R. telegraphs; Herbert McMillan, C.N.R. express messenger, Toronto; G. C. Telford, C.N. Express Agent, Lindsay; Milton Payne, clerk audit office, C.N.R. Montreal; W. A. S. Parsons, night foreman, C.N. Express, Oshawa; L. D. Eason, night foreman, C. N. Express, Napanee; Adelard Gervais, operator, Montreal; Max Martin, operator, Toronto; and Howard Crowe of Toronto.

Included in the company officials with Mr. Martin and Mr. Bullett were A. C. Taylor, travelling supervisor, Toronto; G. H. Griffin, Express Traffic Inspector, Toronto; G. C. Telford, agent at Lindsay and H. C. Walker, relieving agent, Kingston.

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

By RUTH AYERS

YESTERDAY: Ann accuses April of being in love with Kent. But there is no bitterness in her heart—only admiration for April's attempts to protect her sisters' happiness. The morning of the wedding, Ann disappears. April finds a letter addressed to her in Ann's room.

APRIL ENLISTS FOR LIFE

CHAPTER XXV

"Dear April—I'm on my way back to New York. Yesterday when you came in from the hearing in court, I was talking on the telephone. It was a call from New York. Vivano told me the night of the audition that I would never make a concert singer, that I didn't have the voice to become a truly great contralto.

"But someone else was at the audition that night who felt rather differently about it. Through this friend, I had an offer yesterday for a contract on a radio program. Oh, I may never be the famous songbird I hoped but this will mean a career in music, and that's all I ask.

"I wasn't quite sure what my answer would be yesterday but I knew last night.

"April, you would have kept quiet the rest of your life to spare me, but there were other things entering into it. Kent's Aunt Elizabeth —a frightening old person, isn't she —let something slip. She liked you, April.

"And Kent himself. When I saw his face last night after we had found you crying, I had the real answer.

"I thought I loved Kent, and at first I was jealous because I suspected you had fallen in love with him yourself. But Kent and I had quarreled once about my singing and we would have quarreled again. That's why this chance to sing gives me a way out.

"I've left another note for Mother and Dad because explanations wouldn't have done any good at this eleventh hour.

"There's only one request I want to make of you. You must be the one to tell Kent.

"Please believe me when I say this finds me in seventh heaven. My hope is that you'll be there, too—with Kent. Ever your sister —Ann."

For a long time, April held the letter.

If it had been written a week ago, a day ago, it would have changed the future. Now it had come too late.

Yesterday she had told Kent she had masqueraded at love—carried through the pretense just as a lark. A lark!

He hated her. He despised her. Nothing could change that.

She went downstairs to telephone him. The quickest way would be the easiest in the end.

"Kent?"

"Yes, Ann—I've been up for hours. Short of thought I'd hear from you."

April steadied the receiver. Kent had called her Ann. All right, let him think she was Ann until she had told himserself that Ann had gone away. He might not even see her if she said she was April.

"I'm taking the roadster out. I'll be by for you in a few minutes."

"Fine," he said. "That will be fine." But he didn't say it in the same glad, ringing voice as on that day when she had 'phoned him before their drive to the windmill farm.

As she drove up the hill in the car, the sky was still streaked in the east with copper and gold. And there was a certain fragrance in the air. Almost like spring, she thought, even though the calendar was still at January.

He was waiting at the gate and when he saw that she was April, curly yellow hair, rakish beret and jaunty coat, he strode angrily to the car.

"Another one of your masquerades?"

"No—no, it isn't."

"Where's Ann?"

"That's what I came to tell you."

He leaned hard against the car door. "What do you mean? Has she gone away?"

"Yes—to New York. She left me a letter."

"If this is one of your ideas of charm and cleverness—"

"Please, Kent," she begged, and the way she said it must have impressed itself on him because he stood up and the grim lines left his mouth.

"Tell me the rest, all of it."

"She had a chance to sing. A wonderful contract. She thought it would mean more to her than—well, than marriage. Maybe you can reach her by telephone. Maybe you can get her back. Planes will be flying today and the wedding isn't until 5 o'clock."

Kent kept silent for what seemed an endless time. Then he said, "No if she wants it to be like that I wouldn't try to get her back. I have a feeling it's for the best."

As she looked at him. April had the impression that Kent wore an expression, almost of relief.

April shifted gears, started the motor. "I'll hurry along," she said. "There'll be things to be done at home. I'm sorry, Kent, it had to turn out this way."

In another instant the roadster would shoot down the hill again, turning its back on Kent and the gloomy old house, this time for all time.

"Don't go yet," Kent said.

"There's something else you wanted to say?"

"You might tell Ann when you write that I want her to be happy. And also, that as long as there'll be no wedding, I'm returning to camp."

"Yes, I'll tell her — and good luck, Kent."

"Thanks—and to you, April. You deserve the best. I had you all wrong, April, right from the first when I called you the Glitterbug."

Suddenly, April switched off the throbbing engine. "Kent Carter," she said, "we're talking her like strangers, making up polite conversation. I don't want your good luck! I don't want you to say you were sorry or that you had me all wrong!"

The April storm was rising in her at last. She began to pound her hands on the steering wheel. Kent reached over and in some way was beside her.

"What do you want?" he asked.

"You! You, of course! Last night when I told Hal Parks I could never marry him, he said that with some people love might be slow blooming, but with me it was like lightning that struck once—and fast. Don't you see, Kent? It struck me that night I met you at the train."

"April—April, darling!"

He kissed her recklessly, dizzily, and right in the full view of the gingerbread Carter house where no doubt the gingery old great-aunt could see.

Then he eyed the April of the blue eyes and the daffodil curls with a certain wondering curiosity.

"Some day," he said, "you can tell me the whole story from beginning to end."

"I can tell it to you now," she answered. "The beginning is that I was drafted for love. The end is — well, that's just it. There is no end. I've enlisted for a lifetime."

Minimizing

for defeat, too few fighting men, too few allies, too few children, too few arms.

The loss of 2,000,000 of its best men in the last war left France deprived not only of them but also their children, and deft her to carry on with much that was second best.

"When the final test came in the last war there were 500,000 more Frenchmen in the line than there were last May. There were 84 British divisions, 52 Italian divisions and 42 American divisions, and even then, as many of you remember, it was tough sledding. This time the French were outnumbered and enormously underequipped.

"There was a second reason why they were beaten, and it is one to beware of. A great many of them, I will not say half, but it was a large proportion, felt that it was not worth fighting at all. It was suicide, they said, for them to go to war with Germany with so little aid forthcoming from England, nothing from the United States, nothing from Russia."

Political Apathy.

Political factions had developed to a great extent, and the people were so "fed up" with the kind of government they had experienced during those years that it was a difficult thing to tell them that "La Patrie" was in danger. Then came the "blitzkrieg" and the miracle of Dunkirk. "You remember Churchill's phrase: "Never have so many owed so much to so few." How true it was and how magnificent. Of course we were unprepared. Our people were much more stirred up over Mussolini's wanton attack on Ethiopia than they were by the German reoccupation of the Rhineland. What changed all that was the brutality of Hitler's methods, his utter disregard for his given word, his personal cruelty as in the treatment of Chancellor Schuschnigg, his duplicity at and after Munich, his ruthlessness in Poland and his treachery in the assassinations of Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium.

That is why we are at war with Hitler and his Nazi doctrine of the subservience of the citizen to the State, and of the superiority of one race—his race over all others."

Mr. Phillip described something of the confusion that came upon France in that brief period around the 9th and 10th of May last year, of the bombing of Nancy while he was there, and the concerted air attacks on French airdromes destroying in one day between three and four hundred airplanes before they could be put into use. He recalled an incident of four years ago in Germany, a meeting with a young Nazi who, inferentially, personified the effect of Nazi doctrine on the youth of the country, the moulding of their minds into dumb obedience and glorification of Nazi way of life. This rugged youth of nineteen enquired about the number of soldiers Britain had in Canada.

Would Garrison Canada.

"When I answered that I did not know, but I believed the Governor-General had always at least one British-born aide de camp, he thought I was joking. I tried to explain to him that Canada did not belong to Great Britain. It belonged to itself within the British family. It was a conception that was quite beyond his capacity to understand. In his nit-wit mind I could feel that he was thinking how all that would be changed when the Fuehrer and Nazi Deutschland got hold of Canada. Then the world would be run in a really orderly fashion with a Gestapo policeman and a soldier for every ten men or less, and not an idea except obedience among the whole lot. That is the prospect you can look forward to, if we lose the war, German garrisons from Halifax to Vancouver. There are millions of them like that, a whole generation, fanatical and brutalized near lunatics. They have been trained from boyhood in that abominable Nazi doctrine of the submission, not the loyalty, of the citizen to the State, and of the exclusive merit of one race—their race—which justifies the hatred, cruelty, the terrorism and the treachery with which Poland, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France are being treated.

They cannot conceive of a world that is not subjected and ruled by a self-appointed gang of whatever you care to call them, like Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, and they say they have a wonderful plan for the establishment of peace and prosperity, but whose only accomplishments up to date have been to terrorize, to oppress, to imprison, destroy and starve."

Rehearsing Invasion.

Mr. Phillip concluded his address by reminding his audience of the Hitler plan of invading England and of the report only on Monday of new rehearsals of method on an island in the Baltic. It might yet be attempted in the north of Scotland, on the east coast and along the Channel, but the continual pounding of the invasion ports by the British Air Force may disperse the whole effort.

"I cannot go beyond my role of reporter and tell you what you should do. But, I shall say this that the whole merit of our race is that once we get into a fight it stuck it out until it won. We broke Spain and we broke France. We have held the seas free to all ships which sailed on lawful occasions. We have not abused our power, but we are not faultless. We have kept the faith. If we lose, we are promised a new order filled with concentration camps, starvation and unhappiness. I shall not again put the alternative, I shall borrow for the final word the last verse of Alice Duer Miller's 'The White Cliffs':

"The tree of Liberty grew and changed and spread,
But the seed was English. I am
American bred,
I have seen much to hate here — much to forgive,
But in a world where English is finished and dead
I do not wish to live."

Alderman James Dutton moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Phillip on behalf of the audience. Dinner music was by the Northrop trio.

Where Jews Suffered In Rumanian Revolt

This scene of destruction shows how the Jews felt the brunt of the Iron Guard revolt late in January. Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu gained the top hand again only after a week of rebellion and a mass murdering of Jews, laid to "gangsters and extremists" of the Iron Guard. ABOVE is the burned out shell of a Bucharest synagogue, with the Star of David LOWER RIGHT, lying in the ruins. More than 6,000 persons were killed in the uprising, 2,500 to 3,000 of them in Bucharest alone, according to one report.

Win Game 15-4, Drop Round

Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School junior basketeers made a valiant effort to grab off the Lakeshore group championship in Cobourg last night when they managed to defeat the Cobourg Collegiate juniors 15 to 14 in a hard-fought battle. The Cobourg youngsters started with a lead of four points picked up when they defeated the Peterborough Collegiate team here in the first game of the playoff series, so that they took the round by 34 to 31, but it was a close fit.

The checking was close all the way and baskets were hard to get, however, Peterborough C.V.S. outscored the Cobourg team 9 to 6 in the first half and were thus only a goal down on the round at the rest period. In the torrid second half the shoe was on the other foot, Cobourg hanging up eight points as against six by the visitors. The checking was closer than ever in the final period and Referee Lucas of Cobourg had his hands full handling the game as the players milled around on the small Cobourg Collegiate floor.

Way to Lose Ten Pounds— Cut Calories Five Weeks

High-Calory Foods Made Her Fat

"Heavens, is that fat woman ME?" When the mirror shows you're not just "pleasingly plump" any more —what to do?

Diet, everyone says. And diet is right, if it's the scientific low-calory one. Skipping courses won't do, for it's calories, not quantities that build fat.

You might think it fattening to eat "whole" meals! But you can lose on them if they're low-calory foods. A lamb chop has only 100 calories, a baked potato 100, 3 stalks of asparagus 20, two cookies 100. A real lunch—only 320 calories!

You can even eat delicious sweet desserts! Only you'll choose date graham pudding (100 a serving), not Brown Betty (500); lemon ice (100), not a chocolate walnut sundae (425)!

But if you don't know your calories what damage you can do with ONE dish. A serving of lamb stew with dumplings has 440 calories. Two buttered waffles are 600! So get yourself a calory chart as a diet guide. Be good, don't falter, and you'll lose two pounds a week!

Our 32-page booklet gives a calory chart, 3-day liquid diet to start reducing and 42 tasty low-calory menus.

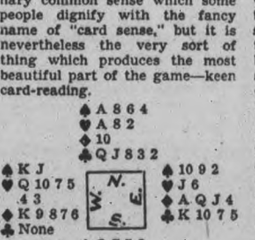
[illegible] coins or stamps for your copy of THE NEW WAY TO YOUTHFUL FIGURE to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

HAS HE A HIGHER ONE?

WHENEVER your partner takes a trick on the defense with a fairly high card, you may ordinarily be assured he was unable to take it with a lower one, or he would have done so. You may be reasonably sure then that, if he has anything else in that suit, it will be higher than the card he used. Making a simple deduction like that is the kind of plain, ordinary common sense which some people dignify with the fancy name of "card sense," but it is nevertheless the very sort of thing which produces the most beautiful part of the game—keen card-reading.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

West led his heart 5, the J forcing the K. South decided to ruff some diamonds, so led to the 10, the J winning. East, desirous of a heart ruff on the third round, returned his heart 6 to the A and the club Q was offered from dummy. East read South as having four, from the bidding, so that his partner could trump this. He therefore covered with the K, forcing the A, and West won with the spade J.

Reading why his partner had led the second heart, West returned his heart Q. Here is where East fumbled the ball badly. He ruffed with his spade 4, and South over-ruffed with the 5. The spade A and Q settled the remaining trumps, and the declarer took all the rest of the tricks except one club, lost to East's 10.

East should have paid more attention to the size of the card with which West ruffed the club trick. It was the J. South, having shifted from his supported spades to his partner's clubs during the bidding, probably had only four spades; therefore West must have either the Q or K in addition to the J, which he played. Figuring thus, East should have ruffed that third heart with his 9 instead of the 4. This would have forced declarer's Q. When the A later dropped West's spade K, the 10 would have become good for a trick in East's hand, defeating the contract.

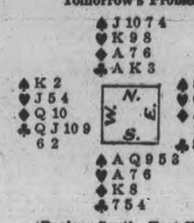
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

If West makes a club overcall during the bidding and then leads his club Q against South's 4-Spades, how should South play the hand?

Ford Plant Shuts

DETROIT, March 25 — (AP). — Production at the Ford Motor Company's Lincoln plant was shut down this morning because of a shortage of automobile frames supplied by the strike-bound Midland Steel Products Co. plant.

Company officials said approximately 3,300 Lincoln employees were made idle by the stoppage, but an additional 500 workers reported for maintenance jobs and assignments on defence products.

Trent Pioneer Mrs. Armour Nears 80 Mark

TRENT RIVER, March 25 (ENS) — An interesting description of pioneer days was given to the "Examiner" one day recently by Mrs. Edward Armour, one of Trent River's most highly esteemed residents, who hopes to reach her 80th birthday in April.

Born at Norwood, Eliza Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Lee, she comes from military stock, as her grandfather on her mother's side was Captain Armstrong, who fought in the Battle of Waterloo. Her grandfather on her father's side was a clergyman of the Church of England at Shrewsbury, England. Of a family of three sons and three daughters, two of Mrs. Armour's sisters live at Regina, Sask. The Misses Alice and Florence Lee, one brother George, formerly of Trent River, reside at Okatox, Alberta.

Mrs. Armour came to Trent River with her parents as a small child, living in a frame house on the back channel near the Garneau place.

First Post Office

Her father kept the first post office in this house and at his death the post office was moved to Brown's Hotel, now the Sedgewick House, where Mrs. Lee was postmistress.

The mail at that time came once a week on horseback from Campbellford. The office after 10 or 11 years was moved to the brick store (M. T. Lean's store) where Mrs. Lee still remained in charge. The mail then arrived daily by stage from Campbellford to Havelock.

Mrs. Armour learned her three R's at Polmont where a log schoolhouse stood on the northwest corner and her teacher was Mr. Pollock, father of H. H. Pollock, of Trent River. At that time there was no bridge across the Trent and people made their way in boats.

The pastoral care of the Methodist Church was in charge of the late Rev. R. B. Denike of Campbellford and later by Rev. Mr. Lund. Mrs. Armour walked to Havelock, three miles, and attended the Anglican church and taught Sunday School and also taught the Sunday School at Trent River Methodist church in the afternoons. Mrs. Armour attended grammar school at Peterborough. Shopping was done at Norwood and Hastings (then known as Crook's Rapids), making the trip to the latter place by boat up the Trent.

Cost of Produce

Brown sugar sold 20 pounds for $1.00; eggs 6c, 7c, 8c per dozen; butter 15c; tea, 25c and 30c; meat was cheap, pork 9c and 10c per pound and good beef from 5c to 11c.

As to fishing—there were no restrictions and one could catch a boatload of lunge at that time.

Mrs. Armour's father, ran a brick yard in Trent River and furnished the brick to build the first church erected here.

In 1893 Eliza Lee was united in marriage to Edward Armour of Belmont and to them was born one daughter (Rose), now Mrs. Wm. McQuigge, who with her husband reside with Mrs. Armour in the same house she still lives in, built by her late husband, whose death occurred in 1930.

Mrs. Armour, with the exception of deafness, enjoys good health, possesses keen intellect can read without glasses, is a great reader of a literary turn of mind, has in her younger days written many verses of poetry, is always interested in the "Examiner" and says she even reads all the advertisements.

She claims times are not as they used to be, people are not so friendly and the girls didn't smoke cigarettes in the good old days. Speaking of the present world struggle for democracy she expresses very strongly her idea of Hitler and thinks prophesies in the Bible are being fulfilled and referred to a verse in Revelations 13:18: "The number of the beast for it is the number of a man six hundred three score and six", (666)—indicating there are six letters in Hitler, Stalin and Kaiser.

The following verses in memory of Pte. "Dick" Cowan (only Trent River boy who paid the supreme sacrifice in the Great War 1914-1918 were composed by Mrs. Armour.

Our beloved boy has fallen;

And lies on the plains of France,
He shrank not from his calling
When they got the word "advance".
On April the ninth in the evening
Of that long remembered day,
They covered themselves with glory
That shall never fade away.
Vimy Ridge shall last in memory
As long as life shall be,
They gained the heights they aimed for
But at what a cost to thee!
In the morning of life he was taken,
Before the noon-day sun.
The Master saw fit to call him,
While his life was just begun.
Good-bye our dear beloved one
Till we all have crossed the flood,
And O the joy of seeing you
When called to meet our God.

It's A Case Of "Hold Tight" When U. S. Cavalry Goes Into Action

It's a case of hold tight as a bantam car, towing a 37-mm gun leaves terra firma as it tops a rise at Fort Aglethorpe, Georgia, headquarters of the Sixth U.S. Cavalry. The three-man crew has to be able to take many a tough jolt.

A new song and stunt were introduced at Redflower, while one of the late Chief's famous stories was told.

On Sunday morning, five of the cubs, Jack Sutcliffe, Allen Poulson, Paul Prise, Lesie McDougall and Robert Peltz, assisted in a special cellection at morning service.

Games were enjoyed, the highlight being a knot relay in which All Saints were the victors in two out of three games. The evening came to a successful end with some good refreshments. The standings at present in the troop; Beavers, 283; Eagles, 275; Crows. 256; Bulldogs and Lynx tied with 239 points.

11th Peterborough, North End

The troop held a very successful Parents' Night on Friday last, a good crowd being in attendance. The troop, under the leadership of Scouter Jefferies, assisted by Assistant Scouter R. Lyons and Troop Leader J. Gaskell. The evening was spent as an ordinary troop meeting, starting off with flag break, roll call and patrol inspection. Following this, the S.M. led in P.T., then a lively game. Knot tying was demonstrated in the form of a relay race. First aid followed with each boy taking some point of interest. Morse signalling was displayed, the message being "Are you buying War Savings Certificates?". The answer following, "Yes, Are You?" Poison Circle following.

At the camp fire Scouter Jefferies gave a brief history of the troop since in inception in 1936; then called on their original Scouter Alex Chivas for a few remarks. Troop Committeeman Mr. Lyons welcomed the parents. Assistant Commissioner L. A. Grant and Scouter Peter Dominik were called on for a few words. Skipper Groombridge introduced the speaker, Mr. A. Kay, who gave a very interesting talk on Birds, finishing up with a quiz contest that was keenly contested by the boys.

Refreshments were served to bring to a close a real scouting evening.

Find Black Eye, Bruises On A.C. Newell

TORONTO, Mar. 25 — (CP). — Dr. Cecil R. Baggs, who examined Ac. H. A. W. (Bill) Newell in Don Jail during the week-end at the request of Newell's mother, said today the 27-year-old Russo-Finnish war veteran, charged with the murder of his wife, has a black eye, a bruise in his groin, multiple scratches, and a small bump on his head.

Dr. Baggs said the groin-bruise could have been caused by a kick, but was not necessarily so. Newell's other injuries, he said, were caused by blows of some kind.

Mrs. Newell asked for the examination by a private physician after G. C. Elgie, Newell's counsel, said on Friday night that his client has "a black eye and bruises all over his body." Newell is awaiting his second trial on a charge of murder in connection with the death of his wife whose strangled body was found on Toronto Island last October 6.

Engineers Stretch Tent Over New Washington State Dam

To keep earth and rock making up fill for the new Mud Mountain dam at Enumclaw, Washington, from drying out too rapidly, engineers of the U.S. army raised this huge tent over the partially completed construction work. Cranes atop the walls of the canyon hauled the huge canvas covering into place. The dam is over the White River. This picture was made as the tent was lifted off the canyon floor to be stretched into place.

U.S., Empire To Shape New World

Will Fight 20 Years If Necessary To Win Says Halifax

NEW YORK, March 26 (CP)—The United States and the nations of the British Commonwealth will be the rallying point around which the new post-war economic order will be built, Lord Halifax predicted here today.

At a press conference, the British Ambassador to the United States declared Britain is willing to fight 20 years if necessary to defeat the Axis but he did not believe it would take anything like that long in view of the increasing flow of American armaments across the Atlantic.

The duration of the war will depend on the flow of armaments from the United States, he said.

Under no circumstances will Britain accept a negotiated peace with Germany, said the former Foreign Secretary.

"It would be worth just one-half the paper on which it was written," he added.

He admitted he could not present a detailed plan how Germany would be defeated, how Britain would use the "tools" being sent from the United States—no one could do that.

Victory Assured

But, he continued, based on a great deal of information that came to him as a member of the British War Cabinet, "the confidence of the British people in a combination of the four factors, military, naval, air and blockade, with your continued help is such that we can assure a victory over the Nazis and

EDWARD EMSLEY had to knock Harold Card out to save him from burning to death as a can of gasoline exploded and set fire to a Clinton street garage last night.

"I ran back in and found him dazed and on the verge of collapse," Emsley said. "I had to give him a punch on the jaw to knock him out because he was holding on to something and wouldn't let go."

They were slightly burned.

Fall Of Musso's Dodecanese Islands Due Bloodlessly As Supplies Wane

WITH THE BRITISH BATTLEFLEET OFF CRETE, March 26—(AP).—Bombardment and blockade are expected by British authorities to cost Italy her Dodecanese Islands, where Italian garrisons already face serious shortages of food and war supplies.

The 12 rocky islands off the Aegean coast of Turkey have been cut off from Italy for months by the British fleet.

The more important islands of Rhodes, Leros and Scarpanto, from whose bomber and submarine bases Mussolini had expected to strike at Egypt and Greece, have been bombed heavily, and the Royal Navy gave Scarpanto one severe shelling.

The British command has shown no disposition to rush a cleanup of the islands by landings, however, taking the position that blockade would starve out the Fascist forces.

Talk of revolt was reported spreading among the Greek population, which outnumbers Italians on the islands 12 to one.

CAIRO, Egypt, March 26—(AP).— The British command announced today that "a small enemy detachment" on Monday occupied El Agheila, 150 miles southwest of Bengasi, Libya. British patrols had previously been withdrawn from the town, a communique said.

RAF Bombs Drop Into Berlin's Tube Railways

LONDON, Mar. 26 — (CP). — An Economic Warfare Ministry official said to-day that in the British raids on Berlin in December and January bombs penetrated to underground railways.

Another blew the roof off a movie theatre, he said, basing his statements on reports from Royal Air Force observation and "other sources."

The official also declared hits were made on a "very important" railway junction, causing "considerable dislocation."

He said the Berlin police presidency and law courts were damaged, the top floors of the widely known Wertheim Department Stores were burned out and minor damage done to a number of important industrial plants.

The heaviest damage during the two months, the official said, was at Mannheim where main docks were hit, several barges sunk, traffic blocked, several engineering shops destroyed, and others damaged.

He said he understood the damage to war factories ran into millions of marks. The official reported that near Mannheim's main freight station a shed housing a field post office for the German army of occupation received a direct hit "when Christmas traffic wos at its peak."

Vichy Navy Busy Escorting Food

VICHY, France, Mar. 26—(AP).—A Petain Government spokesman said to-day the French navy had been escorting merchant ships on the high seas "for many months."

Although not actually convoyed, groups of ships from the colonies have been "policed" by small war vessels, the spokesman declared. He asserted no ship so accompanied ever had been stopped by British war vessels.

The disclosure was made when the spokesman was asked to comment on Spanish newspaper reports that a merchant ship loaded with cocoa, coffee, tobacco and bananas was en route to Casablanca, French Morocco, escorted by a French warship.

Ferries Foiling Jap Bombers On Burma Road

(A special correspondent for Reuters News Agency made a 10-day trip down the Burma Road in a convoy of 10 lorries. In the following story he tells of conclusions he reached as a result of the trip.)

(By a Reuter's Special Correspondent.)

LASHIO, Burma, March 26 (CP-Reuters)—The Burma Road can never be effectively cut from the air, nor can the steady flow of traffic along it to and from China be seriously halted except by land operations.

It is true that the bridges over the Mekong river have been damaged by Japanese bombings. But such are the powers of ingenuity and resourcefulness of the Chinese, that an effective ferry service for fully-loaded lorries is now carrying 100 trucks each way over the river a day.

Shortly, when more ferries are completed and new roads built down to them, as many trucks as the Burma Road can carry will be transported by this means.

The existing ferry is nothing more than a few planks, strapped on to empty petrol drums, manipulated across the river by a cable pulled by a lorry on shore.

It works mainly at night, the whole outfit being dismantled during daylight. Thus there is virtually no danger from Japanese air attack. Even if the ferry were put out of action, its design is so simple that another could speedily be put into operation.

The road is subject to frequent dislocation by landslide and flood. But the Chinese system of speedy reparation through permanent gangs of coolies along the road is so good that deficiencies are quickly repaired.

At first only some 40 trucks a day went through from Burma to China delivering a total cargo of some 100 tons a day, excluding petrol needed for the return journey.

By the middle of last month as many as 160 trucks were going through a day, with a total cargo of 450 tons apart from petrol.

Once the system of building petrol dumps throughout China has been improved, less space will have to be devoted to carrying petrol and the cargo tonnage will be correspondingly increased.

Tokyo Envoy Plotting 'New Order'

Only Hitler, Goering Miss Reception As Jap Chief Arrives

BERLIN, Mar. 26—(AP).— Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka of Japan arrived in Berlin at 6 p.m. (noon EDT) to-day for discussions which German commentators said were designed to make the three-power pact a more effective instrument for organizing the "new order" in Europe and the Far East.

Matsuoka's train which carried him from Moscow where he had talked with Stalin drew into Anhalter station as twilight descended on the city.

Streets had been blocked off and tens of thousands of citizens were on hand to greet him.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, commenting on the visit, said it was "more significant than a mere friendly exchange of opinions."

When Matsuoka begins conferences to-morrow with Hitler and other German leaders, the commentary said, they will "view problems from a worldwide perspective and will stabilize and clarify the preconditions for the fundamental reform of international life."

Hitler Misses It.

With the exception of Hitler and Goering, the top men in the govment and the Nazi Party were on hand to greet Matsuoka.

Foreign Minister Ribbentrop welcomed him and led him to an automobile in which he was driven to Bellevue Palace in the Tiergarten, Hitler's guest house for distinguished foreign visitors.

Matsuoka entered German territory late last night at the tiny town of Malkinia on the Russian border.

Bethlehem Steel Strike In Hand

BETHLEHEM, Pa., March 26, — (AP). — A heavy detachment of Pennsylvania state police maintained order at the beleaguered Bethlehem Steel Company plant to-day after a day of strike violence and as the congress of industrial organizations steel workers' organizing committee threatened to spread the walkout to all Bethlehem steel mills and shipyards in a "finish fight."

On the other side of the state, the S.W.O.C. called upon its members to qiut work in the company's huge plant at Johnstown, Pa., if the Employees' Representation Plan attempts to hold scheduled election to select bargaining representatives —the same step that precipitated the strike here Monday.

Early to-day, however, the S.W.O.C. reported that no ballot boxes had appeared in the Johnstown mills and that the proposed strike there was held in abeyance, at least temporarily.

Just Another Uniform

London, March 26 (CP)

UNCHALLENGED, a man wearing a German army officer's uniform and trappings strolled London streets for hours yesterday, looked over busy Scotland Yard and peered through Buckingham Palace's fences.

Florist, Servant Die In Quebec Mansion Blaze

ST. BRUNO, Que., March 26 (CP) —E. R. Pease, 56, president of the Mount Bruno Floral Company, was suffocated early today in a fire at his St. Brune home which also claimed the life of his housekeeper.

Of undetermined origin, flame-swept through the large house on the $300,000 Pease estate.

The 50-year-old housekeeper, Mrs. Grazzella Murero, was asphyxiated in the fire which destroyed the mansion on the 300,000 estate, "The Pines."

Mr. Pease, the son of a former president of the Royal Bank of Canada, was sleeping in his room on the second floor. Firemen who recovered his body expressed belief he was trapped in his room and burned to death. The body of Mrs. Murero was found in a hallway on the same floor.

Mr. Pease had been in ill-health for the last four years.

He was born in Montreal, son of E. L. Pease, former president of the Royal Bank of Canada, and served in the First Great War with the 42nd Royal Highlanders. He returned with rank of major.

He is survived by two nephews and two nieces.

Students Cry Down With Hitler, Duce Hundreds Arrested In Provinces, Belgrade Calls Out Troops To Aid Police

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, March 26—(AP).—Rioting broke out in the centre of Belgrade at noon today in protest against Yugoslavia's alliance with the Axis powers.

Police and soldiers quelled the outbreak, which occurred a short time after Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic returned from Vienna, where he signed the Axis pact yesterday.

Accompanied by Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic, who also participated in the pact signing yesterday, the Premier hurried from the station to his offices to confer at once with government leaders.

Vice-Premier Vladimir Macek, who met the train with other Cabinet Ministers, followed the Premier to report on disorders which flared in all parts of the country while the treaty was being signed.

The first step taken by the authorities after Cvetkovics arrival was to close several Belgrade public schools where thousands of older boys destroyed pictures of Hitler and staged sit-down strikes.

May Close Schools.

Police cordons were stationed around some of the schools, and it was reported all might be closed until after the orthodox Easter April 20 in an effort to avert further trouble.

Hundreds of persons were reported under arrest in the provinces as a result of yesterday's demonstrations which threatened to reach grave proportions. Serbs peasants, students, Communists and the rejuvenated Comitaji (Committee of Dissenters) which dates back to Turkish Empire days took a leading part in the disorders.

Kosca Pecanac, one-time Comitaji leader and hero of the 1918 Salonika campaign, was reported in Southern Serbia recruiting sons of his old comrades for a new fight against German domination.

Young Serbs besieged the Greek and the British legations, asking transportation to the Albanian and the Greek fronts to join the battle against the Axis.

8,000 in One Parade

One of the largest demonstrations yesterday was in Kraljevo, Serbia, where more than 8,000 men and women gathered to hear speakers in the public square, then paraded through the streets denouncing their "treacherous government."

Two thousand peasants, many armed with pitchforks, marched in Hadji Popovic, Central Serbian city, shouting "We want war!" Thousands participated in similar demonstrations elsewhere, openly expressing sympathy with Greece and Great Britain. In some places police made only perfunctory efforts to halt the demonstrators.

Leaders of the Agrarian and the Independent Democrat parties said they were preparing strongly-worded statements to be handed to Cvetkovic confirming resignations of party members from the government.

An indication the widespread student demonstrations were highly organized was seen in the sudden appearance of hundreds of identical Yugoslav flags, all bearing the slogan, "Long Live The King!"

(The government which capitulated to the Axis is headed by a regency council, named to act during the minority of King Peter II, now 17 years old.)

Boys Defy Teachers

Riotous scenes took place in some Belgrade schools as the boys defied their teachers, broke up furniture and shouted "down with Hitler, down with Mussolini, down with Cvetkovic!"

A number of youths who were made virtual prisoners in one school in the heart of the capital when police surrounded the building vied with each other in writing inflammatory slogans on cards and hurling them out of windows into a crowd of curious spectators.

At another school in the main business district, placards were hung from windows reading "better die than be slaves," "We must renounce the Vienna pact," "Down with Hitler" and "Long live liberty and King Peter."

Trouble In Levant

Vichy, France, March 26 (AP)

GEN. HENRI DENTZ, commander of French forces in the Levant States, where Syrian outbreaks appear to have become serious, was reported to have arrived in France unexpectedly last night. Reports said the government in the mandated territory of Syria had been forced to close schools and establish a 6 p.m. curfew after student nationalist demonstrations.

(Dispatches yesterday said some towns had been placed under martial law to prevent disorders growing out of demands for Syrian autonomy.)

Iceland in New Sub Zone

U.S. On Guard As Nazis Extend Area Almost To Greenland

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP)—The announced extension of Germany's counter-blockade operations to within three miles of Greenland brought the zone of intensive sea warfare today to the threshold of the western hemisphere which the United States has committed herself to defend.

The proximity of the new deadline to Greenland attracted immediate attention here, because authorities have made it known on several occasions that Greeland is considered a part of the hemisphere and, as such, covered by the Monroe doctrine.

Berlin's proclamation last night extending the counter-blockade area brought no immediate comment from government officials here, however, and they declined to indicate what, if any, action would be taken to meet the situation.

Two United States coast guard cutters, both of them armed, were believed now operating in the vicinity of Greenland as part of the neutrality patrol.

The new German decree included Iceland in the extended combat area, claiming that Britain was using the island as a base against the Nazi counter-blockade campaign. The colony, only a short distance from Greenland, was occupied by British and Canadian forces last May.

Greenland contains valuable cryolite mines, said to be the world's only commercial source of the important mineral used in refining aluminum—an essential in aircraft construction.

Several months ago a United States consulate was opened in Greenland to look out for American interests. The United States meanwhile has been the colony's supply source for the foodstuffs and medicines which were cut off by the occupation of Denmark.

Greenland and Iceland recently have been mentioned as possible North Atlantic "stepping stones" for

Save Half Time On Wooden Ships Says Duff

HALIFAX, March 26 — (CP). — Senator William Duff (Lib., Nova Scotia), "the Admiral of Parliament Hill," believes there is no reason why 50 Nova Scotia shipyards should not be started on wartime shipbuilding within a month's time.

Despite the preference for steel ships, the urgency of the situation should make a place for wooden ships in the war effort, Senator Duff said in an interview last night. He advocated building wooden corvettes, minesweepers, patrol boats and small cargo boats "capable of carrying between 1,500 and 2,500 tons of cargo."

He declared wooden ships could be built in half the time, at half

500,000 Trained Canadians

Armed Forces By 1942 To Almost Equal Great War Army

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Military Correspondent.)

OTTAWA, March 26 — (CP). — Canada, with a peacetime strength of less than 100,000 men in the active and reserve formations of the army, navy and air force, will have more than 500,000 all ranks either under arms or partially trained by the end of the present year.

Unlike the expeditionary force of approximately 620,000 men enlisted during the four years of the First Great War, Canada's modern military organization has been built up without the aid of high-pressure recruiting campaigns.

Troops already brought to a high pitch of proficiency are either awaiting the signal which will take them to an active theatre of war or are standing guard in home defence areas.

A steady stream of young airmen is beginning to flow from British Commonwealth Air Training Schools, and reinforcements for Canada's growing navy are being marshaled in every province.

In a recent speech, Prime Minister Mackenzie King disclosed that further contingents would be dispatched overseas during 1941, to augment the Canadian Corps under command of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton. With the arrival of these forces it is estimated the Dominion's overseas fighting strength will be boosted beyond the 100,000 mark.

The stepped-up war program also provides for expansion of the Empire Air Training Plan by the addition of approximately 36,000 men before the end of the present year.

Upwards of 25,000 trained airmen are expected to be turned out annually once the scheme is operating at full capacity. That stage, reliable sources say, is not far off.

The Canadian navy which at the outbreak of war comprised 15 ships and a personnel of 1,774 is scheduled

Halifax Sees Invasion Try Doomed

Paints Empire Bridge To Greater Unity As World Quietens

NEW YORK, March 26—(CP).—The principal war aim of the British people and those associated with them "is to win this life and death struggle for the cause of human freedom," Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, declared here last night.

In his first public address since arriving in January to succeed the late Marquess of Lothian, the Ambassador sketched in broad outline a new world order to be established at the conclusion of the war. It was one in which "every nation, great or small, will have its place and makes its own contribution,' but its mai nobjective would be a community of nations, pledged to mutual co-operation in economic welfare and defensive strength.

The Ambassador spoke before the Pilgrims of the United States and his speech was broadcast. Today he will visit the Seamen's Church Institute to dedicate the New York British Navy Club and tomorrow, like all visitors to New York, he will look over the city from the top of the Empire State Building.

The Columbia Broadcasting System's short-wave listening station reported that a summary of Lord Halifax' speech was being broadcast from London in the German language while he was speaking here.

Lord Halifax frankly said he could not answer the question: When will Hitler invade Britain?

Sees No Invasion.

"But if you ask me: 'Can such an invasion succeed?' or, in other words, 'Will all the help we are planning to send to Britain arrive too late ' then both my head and my heart join to tell you with all the conviction born of knowledge of how the British people feel, and of being a member of the War Cabinet since its formation, that the answer is a confident and unhesitating 'No.'"

Billion Tax Levy Conscription Of Wealth Mov

OTTAWA, March 26 —(CP).—Finance Minister Ilsley has warned Canadians they will pay more than $1,000,000,000 in Dominion taxation —close to one-fifth of the national income "at the present time"—during the fiscal year beginning next Tuesday.

In the House of Commons last night, just before adoption of the $1,000,000,000 war appropriation bill, Mr. Ilsley said a taxation system which took that share of the national income was virtually "conscription of wealth." The percentage conscription of human beings was "far less."

THE WAR TO-DAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The success or failure of the German move in forcing a Yugoslavian signature to a limited Axis collaborative agreement appears to depend to a considerable degree on the temper of the Yugoslav population, a temper which appears at the moment to be none too friendly.

Various manifestations of popular anger against the Government which drafted Yugoslavia into the Axis have been witnessed during the last few days, manifestations culminating today in fierce riots in the capital, Belgrade, and the arrest of numerous anti-Government demonstrators.

One of the conditions of the agreement—allegedly sparing Yugoslavia invasion—was that Yugoslav authorities suppress anti-German demonstrations and expressions of anti-German feeling.

This at the moment appears more easily promised than done, for the Serbs, in particular, descendants of the fierce warriors who faced the Austro-Hungarian army in the first Great War, seem in no mood to take their Government's act lying down. Their students have staged street demonstrations.

Resistance delayed signing of the agreement and gave the British Middle East command time to rush reinforcements to Greece in anticipation of the German drive. British forces in Greece were said in Belgrade to number 150,000, but some observers thought this figure was too low. Certainly British convoys of ships have been extraordinarily active in the Mediterranean of late and have gone mostly unchallenged by enemy surface craft.

British troops carried to Greece were reported in some circles already to have been placed in strategically sound defence positions along the Greek-Bulgarian-Yugoslav frontier, apparently leaving to Greek forces the task of throwing Mussolini's legions out of Albania.

Spring Returns Sap Starts To Run In Trees

This must have been a perfect day down in Mark Burnham's hardwood bush. His hundreds of maple trees were tapped on Monday and Tuesday, and fire was lighted beneath the evaporator this afternoon.

Spring has returned once more to the Burnham estate, just beyond the city's eastern gate on No. 7 Highway, and new life was stirring again in all the little quiet ways of nature, accentuated by the calls of the first birds, especially the earliest crows.

Here was fundamental sanity in the order of God's creation as contrasted with the incredible monsters of Germany, described by P. J. Phillip the other night as near lunatics. A cloistered resounding quiet pervades the Burnham woods, with glorious sunshine and "balm of hurt minds." Probably there are remnant spots of snow and a general dampness underfoot, but what of it with long boots to hand.

Here and there in the countryside smoke is rising in other maple woods and their owners actually expect to get paid for this Elysian work of going about gathering the sap and pouring it into the sweetly steaming boiler house.

Squire Burnham ought to advertise the miracle that has taken place hard by his home, and charge an admission fee at the gate into his woods just for the privilege of loafing for a few hours amid the new life that is coming into being amid the sunshine, and feeling it communicate its warmth and buoyancy into veins and thoughts, with much the same sense of the miraculous as in the beginning of things when the words were spoken, "Be Light Made."

to be increased to 413 ships and 26,290 men by March 31, 1942.

Although the actual number of recruits being trained for active service has not been revealed, training camp accommodation is available for more than 200,000 men.

The first class summoned to camps under the four-month compulsory training scheme embraced less than 5,000 men in the the 21-year age group, but provision has been made for a turn-out of upwards of 60,000 men in the 12 months from March 20. It has been announced between 40,000 and 80,000 active army recruits will also be required this year to replace troops being sent overseas.

Partial training has also been given to more than 80,000 men between the ages of 21 and 25 called up under the original 30-day training plan.

Since the four-month period was adopted early in February, reports have been current that the compulsory training principle might be extended to higher age categories. This move, it is said, would be contingent on the 21-year-old class failing to produce the needed quota for the year's proposed program.

Among the reserve army formations, whose strength according to latest returns is just under 200,000, a general weeding-out process is under way.

Orders recently went out to commanding officers of reserve units advising them to get ready for a possible emergency. As a result most of these formations are being re-organized on a footing where they can be dispatched on active service if needed or employed on home defence duties.

their Axis allies."

Lord Halifax said he was convinced the German people would not stand up to bombing with the same courage, fortitude and doggedness that the British people had shown. Increased bombing of Germany by the Royal Air Force would be possible with the help of the American aircraft industry.

Turning to the question of economic co-operation after the war, Lord Halifax said he would not exclude Germany from any community of nations, but German first would have to demonstrate its sincerity, its intention to be a good European state, and abandon the use of force.

He said he did not have in mind a vast free-trade zone which would mean abrogation of the Ottawa agreements signed at the Imperial Conference in 1932. The nations of the Commonwealth were growing closer together year by year and they were jealous of the rights and privileges that came from their association.

She Must Not Fight Again

Asked if he favored stripping Germany after the war, Lord Halifax said Britain did not desire a vindictive peace, "but we are going to see that steps are taken to insure the world against a repetition of this affair at the hands of Germany."

There must be some international organization after the war, but Lord Halifax did not think the League of Nations would be reproduced on the same basis as before.

The difficulty at this stage was that only general principles could be laid down on the broad question of world reconstruction after the war.

The Principle war aim of the British people and those associated with them "is to win this life and death struggle for the cause of human freedom," Lord Halifax declared in a speech last night.

Premier Extols War Effort Tops In History

OTTAWA, March 26 — (CP). — Critics of Canada's war effort whose attacks contain comparison of the Dominion's activities to those of United States, were answered in the House of Commons last night by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. The Prime Minister described the Dominion's war program before the House passed approval on the War Appropriations Bill.

Mr. King gave a resume of what Canada had done in the form of a "farewell offering," as a country which was spending "not only her treasure, but her blood."

Action of the United States inspired the greatest feeling of gratitude in the hearts of Canadians, he said, but it was not fair for critics to say that Canada was not doing as much in the common struggle to save democracy.

"Never in the history of war have 11,000,000 people given so freely, and pledged so fully their treasure, their resources and their manhood," he said.

According to the best estimate which could be made now, Canada's direct and indirect war effort would require "almost 44 per cent. of our national income" in 1941-42. Recent investigations set the estimated gross national income for the coming year at $5,950,000,000.

If the United States were doing as much in terms of national income and population, her war expenditure in a single year would be $35,000,000,000 of the expected national income of $80,000,000,000. She would have 2,750,000 men in the active

Gordon Campbell, Hamilton Thistles, who won the trophy in 1939 and took consolation honors last year had out a strong rink with R. W. Cross second and Mrs. Cross led, marked up two singles, a 5 and a 3 against four single for T. J. Smith's Granites, end of the 7th, and carried on to win 11-6.

Hamley Wins

N. H. Hamley's Peterborough quartette took a long lead on J. A. Forrest's Granites, but "Jimmy" scored a 5-end in the 8th and the count was 8-all going into the 9th. Hamley counted 2 in the 9th and finished up with a four to win 14-8.

P. B. Scott's Peterborough squad took the measure of C. F. Mason's Granites 12-5, but another Peterborough quartette did not fare so well against Dr. C. H. Brereton's Granites and lost 11-5. Skip Brereton, one of the donors of the trophy, had his daughter, Jean, as his lead.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Mar. 26 — (CP). — Strength at Chicago held wheat futures prices steady during the first half hour of trading on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Buyers were not numerous but offerings were light and at 10 o'clock quotations were ⅛ cent higher, May 77⅛, July 78¾ cents a bushel.

Chicago wheat values climbed more than a cent during the early stages, while Buenos Aires quotations continued unchanged.

Coarse grain trading was featured by a sharp rise in flax prices which leaped more than five cents to new seasonal highs shortly after the opening bell. Buying by crushers and investors, plus absence of hedging pressure, appeared responsible for the flax advance.

Yesterday's Quotations.

rotting in the fields, almost every available acre seems ready for cultivation this Spring.

There is plenty of evidence, however, of a war that has been fought and still is being fought. Tanks punctured with bullet holes line the approaches to several towns.

Rouen, which at various times I had heard was greatly damaged or scarcely touched ,truly was scarcely touched.

I did not see Beauvais, but I was told that it had been little improved since its devastation in June.

Along the roads, railways and at the edge of many copses are graves, mostly single or in pairs, some German, some French, some English.

On the approach to the coast one sees evidence of a war still going on —here and there the wreck of a pursuit plane or bomber.

Hockey Club Ends Year With Deficit

Due to poor patronage and heavy expenses in connection with junior games the Peterborough Hockey Club has finished the season with a deficit of over $100, a statement by Treasurer Max Glover, presented at an executive meeting last night showed.

The senior club had a good season, finishing with a surplus of $121.38. The senior receipts were $2,091.99 and the expenditures $1,970.61.

The junior story was quite different. The only revenue brought in by the youngsters in their home games was $196.38 while the expenses totalled $630.21 and the result was the juniors were in the red $433.83.

The net loss for the club was $312.45 but that is cut down to $106.56 by donations received at the beginning of the season.

The senior games were well patronized, especially those with Kingston and Belleville. The biggest gate of the year was for the Kingston-Peterborough playoff game on February 22 when the Petes' share was $298.15.

Chief expenses involved travelling costs, equipment and time off for players on the games played at Kingston.

In the case of the juniors the largest gate they collected all season was in the final playoff game with Oshawa when their share of the gate was $57.20.

PORT HOPE REPORTS AN INCREASE OF 185 IN TOWN'S POPULATION

Milk Delivered Daily Is 1,600 Daily

PORT HOPE, March 26 (ENS).—Port Hope dairymen distribute 1,600 quarts of milk daily, the milk report issued by Dr. C. B. Kelly, M.O.H., reveals. The average consumption in 1940 was .6 quarts per person. There are four pasteurization plants in Port Hope, and ten producers. Throughout the year, the report shows, the milk was consistently clean.

Since 1936 the population increased from 4,565 to 4,997, the vital statistics report shows. The heaviest increase was in 1940 when, according to the assessor's returns on which the vital statistics are based, the population increased 185 persons.

Since 1936 the mortality rate per thousand hovered between 15.23 in that year and 9.8 per cent in 1940.

War Services Drive Planned For Port Hope

PORT HOPE, March 26—(ENS) Though Port Hope citizens do not know the quota of the Canadian War Services Fund alloted them, they are preparing to dig deeply into their pockets when it is announced, probably following a committee meeting in the Town Hall Thursday evening.

The committee has already been organized. Heading the short but concentrated drive for funds which is expected to be launched early in April is R. B. Baxter, local barrister. Assisting him are Vice-president C. M. Thompson, local merchant; Gordon Bradley, president of the Lions Club; Norman Strong, treasurer; Captain F. Brightwell of the Salvation Army, and the canvassing committee of C. E. Stephenson, J. A. Reynolds, with T. R. Price chairman of the committee.

Among the representatives present at the organization meeting were Gordon Bradley and Bev. Hancock, representing the Lions Club; R. B. Baxter and T. R. Price, representing the Lions Club; Mr. Kennedy, Mr. A. Taylor and Mr. Harwood of the Canadian Legion, and Mrs. J. L. Westaway and Mrs. M. S. Hawkins of the I.O.D.E.

Homes Scarce In Port Hope

(By Staff Reporter)

PORT HOPE, March 26. — A housing shortage is apparent in the town of Port Hope and there is a strong possibility that the town may enjoy a home building boom this year.

With a gradual but nevertheless noticeable growth in most of the local industries, coupled up with the fact that many soldier's wives have moved back with their parents, there is crowding in many homes, and it was reliably reported that some of the larger houses have two and three families in them at the present time.

In 1940 there were twelve new homes built in the town and so far this year there are three underway, and several contemplated. The population of Port Hope now is just over 4,900 but at one time the figure topped the 5,000 mark.

Lower Reaches Of Ganaraska Free Of Ice

PORT HOPE, March 26 (ENS).—The present weather is causing a free flow of sap in the maple bush and melted snow waters in the Ganaraska River and provided there is no rain within the next week, townspeople wish both flows would continue. A large number of trees are producing steadily in surrounding bushes, while the river is taking the threatening flood waters without difficulty.

Back in the northern sections of the Ganaraska's basin there is abundance of snow which is quickly turning to water under influence of the warm Spring sun. Making its way to the river tributary the crest of the water reaches Port Hope by sundown, but up to the present time the flow has occasioned no alarm. For the past three nights there has been an increased flow in the river but through the efforts of Deputy-reeve J. L. Moncrief, chairman of the Street and Bridge committee, the lower reaches are free of ice, permitting free flow of water to Lake Ontario.

Port Hope Citizens Getting Plans Laid For Salvage Drive Last Week In April

PORT HOPE, Mar. 26—(ENS).—Irving Margles and Cy Williams, Port Hope merchants and co-chairmen in the Salvage Drive which will be held during the last week in April, have been getting encouraging offers of assistance from several people in the town.

Big Tony Gikoff, restaurant owner whose European name indicates he has little love for spluttering Adolph, has given the committee the use of a vacant lot in the downtown section. To start the drive off he has gone a step further and has donated two tons of old metal buckets which are now lying on the property.

All citizens who have metal of any kind which they will give to the drive are requested to gather it into a pile and advise either of the co-chairmen or any other member of the Salvage Committee, so that it may be taken care of.

Gone With The Enemy

Yugoslavia has gone in with the Axis powers, and can and should now be classed as an enemy nation. According to the published version of the agreement there is one clause, the first, which says: "Germany undertook to guarantee Yugoslavia's integrity."

And why? No nation was making any threats against Yugoslavia; no invading army was headed in the direction of that land. So how could it be possible to guarantee integrity when integrity was not threatened or in any way at stake?

Next we read that Germany promised that neither the frontiers nor territory of Yugoslavia would be violated. That is much like the first. Nor is Yugoslavia to be asked to give military aid to the Axis powers.

But Yugoslavia must consent to permit the transport of war and hospital equipment as well as of wounded over her territory, and to dovetail her policies so they comply with those of the Axis. Then when the war is over Yugoslavia is to be granted a passageway to the Aegean Sea, and that means a road through Greece.

For the moment the meaning is about as plain as can be. When the government of Yugoslavia consented to permit the passage of German war and hospital equipment through her territory, the gate was opened not a little, but as far as the swing of the hinges would permit.

When Germany starts shipping war equipment it means that German soldiers will go along with it, and when German soldiers get their feet on new territory they are never in a hurry to make use of them for the purpose of seeking an exit. They have done that every place in Europe, and they will do it in Yugoslavia. They will find some good reason for remaining for purposes of protecting the country against enemies which Germany alone can discern.

The practical point is that Yugoslavia will become a concentration point for the German army in its effort to reach Salonika. It is certain that war on a difficult front can no longer be delayed. There has been secrecy regarding the strength of British land, air and naval forces gathered in and around Greece, and the ground is not suited to the German blitzkrieg form of war.

It is unthinkable that Russia can view German expansion in the Balkans with indifference, and there may be truth enough in the report that Moscow has decided to greatly restrict the amount of oil allowed to be shipped to Germany. That would be in keeping with Russian policy throughout — doing what is possible to see that neither Germany nor Britain has too great an advantage in any section.

"... I Am At War"

When Percy Phillip spoke at the annual dinner meeting of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce he preferred to do so as a reporter who had been here and who had been there. For 24 years Mr. Phillip, himself a Scotsman, was representing an American paper, the New York Times, in Paris, and such a triangle might well enough have played havoc with what we commonly call nationalism. He would hardly be in an atmosphere where the voice of any one government would rise as being greater or better than that of another.

We were much taken with the way in which Mr. Phillip described his exact feeling. He found it difficult to understand fully what people meant when they said they were fighting for democracy, and he was moved to doubt if some of those who made free and frequent use of the word had adequate conception of what it actually meant and what it was really all about. For that reason he narrowed it down to the first person singular and put it in these plain words: "For myself I am at war with Adolf Hitler."

From Mr. Phillip's address on that point we quote:

"Our effort is to defeat a conception of life which has been imposed on a great part of Europe, which we consider to be wrong for it denies the right of the individual to think, to speak, or worship and to live freely. It denies the right of nations to develop their own happiness in their own way, and it denies the very law of life because it would make it uniform and static instead of as varied as the landscape and the forest and as tid as a river.

"I do not much care for big words and so when people tell me we are fighting for democracy I am not quite sure what they mean. I sometimes wonder if they themselves know just what they mean. For myself I am at war with Adolf Hitler for two very definite and personal reasons. First, because as a reporter I have no great enthusiasm for any form of government; as a man I dislike intensely the Nazi and Communist form of police government. I much prefer the Mounties to the Gestapos and their Ogpus. And, secondly, I want to keep this very large vital space which is the British Empire free from domination by any one race and by any one doctrine, and free from being systematized and organized in the Teutonic manner until it is robbed of its grand incoherent liberal human vitality. I am for growth and not for stagnation and I know there can be no growth where there is no freedom."

So instead of trying to think and speak in terms of the entire people Mr. Phillip preferred to narrow the problem down to the outlook of one man—Mr. Phillip. The result was that he found himself to be at war with Adolf Hitler and for reasons which were adequate and sufficiently rugged. Our belief is there is something worth while and self-searching in that outlook. We act together as a unit, but we reason and come to conclusions as individuals, and it is the individual conviction which is the basis of strength and effective effort.

She Has a Loose Tongue

Mrs. Dorise W. Nielsen, M.P. from North Battleford, Sask., found it impossible to support the $1,300,000,000 war appropriations bill because it failed to provide for essential Canadian educational and health measures. Her reasoning, if such it can be called, was in these words:

"We have two great enemies today, Hitler in the front and the financial institutions in the rear, and the one in the rear is our greatest foe."

No matter how one looks at that statement it is wrong. It is not smart; in it there is no wit, nor does it rise and fall in the exposition of a great truth or yet in the defence of a sacred principle.

It falls flat; so flat that it can be classed as poor in design and emaciated in its hour of delivery. If it has value at all then the value is in demonstrating the freedom of utterance there is in the Canadian House of Commons.

It is perhaps a rather dangerous thing to be seized with the idea that one must say something which is considered smart or daring.

We do not believe that our financial institutions are our enemies and Mrs. Nielsen undertook to offer no proof of her ragged claim. She just had her fling and let it go at that. She gave no reason for her claim, but apparently was certain she would strengthen her hand in some circles by firing the shot no matter at what point it was aimed.

She proposed nothing which might be done to make the appropriation seem right according to her narrow vision. She must know that our financial institutions do not run wild like buffalo in this country. She must be aware that they are regulated by our governments, that they are inspected, and that there is a code of regulations and ethics inside of which they must operate. We hold no particular brief for financial institutions of any sort, but we do know they have to do business according to the rules which our elected and accredited representatives make for them.

Mrs. Nielsen came to this country from England, and we doubt to the point of disbelief if she could get an audience in that bomb-ridden land today who would sit with patience and listen to her utterances. We fail to see where the voters of North Battleford made much of a contribution when they sent her as their representative to our House of Commons.

Where Do The Goods Go?

Two stores in Arkona were robbed on a recent night. Arkona is a pleasant little village through which one would pass if using No. 7 Highway on the road to Sarnia. It is certainly not the place at which one would look with the expectation of seeing crime, violence or robbery.

In some ways it was like a robbery we had in Peterborough recently where a furnishings store was entered and a large quantity of stock was taken away. In Fuller Bros. store in Arkona we read "they took their entire stocks of high-grade silk stockings, overcoats, fancy sweaters, ties, ladies' and men's jackets and windbreakers, prints, men's shoes and woollen underwear." Mr. Fuller was certain the robbers knew their business as they selected only the best goods in the store.

So the same question comes to the surface again; just the same one as we had right here in Peterborough. What is to be done with the goods after the stealing takes place? Certainly no thief could be so foolish as to have such an assortment of goods as was taken from Arkona hanging around his house. He would hardly start making the rounds of friends or relatives and asking if there was anything they desired to select from the loot. Not a bit of it.

The only reasonable conclusion is that there must be a nice ring engaged in this business. Part of it goes out and does the stealing, and the other part makes provision for handling the goods and in some way finding outlet for them so they can be turned into cash when sold to the public.

That supposition or theory makes sense no matter from which angle it is viewed. Such places of disposal would probably be limited to a very few of our larger centres, and if they could be spotted then there would be an end to the business of raiding stores in various parts of the province because there would be no profit and purpose in continuing it.

The Atlantic Is Our Boundary

There are reports that the German warships, the Scharnhorst and Gneisnau are operating in the North Atlantic. They are 26,000-ton vessels and modern, and they have been added to the long list of submarines and long-range bombers.

The reason is to try and starve Britain by making unsafe the 2,500-line beween that country and Canada and United States. There is no purpose to be served in stating that it is a situation which can be easily handled, and that there is no chance of considerable success accompanying the German effort.

Hitler knows well enough that Britain is sure to receive increased assistance from United States and Canada. Knows too there is but one way for much or most of it to reach Britain, and that is by crossing the wide expanse of the Atlantic.

It may be claimed that British sea power can attend to this newest threat, but it is well to remember that we have been officially informed that the British fleet is right now spread out "awfully thin," because there are extensive operations in the Mediterranean as well as in the home waters and the Atlantic.

It will call for a deal of patient looking and searching to come to grips with the German raiders because they are speedy vessels and they will not give battle to anything which looks formidable. Their business is to skulk around and destroy cargo vessels with insufficient gun strength. It goes to show, if any proof is needed, that we are at war with an enemy which overlooks no chances for bringing about our downfall. And if we have not yet realized to the full that we are at war then the battle of the Atlantic, which bounds us on the East, should cause a sudden and complete awakening.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Prime Minister King, on the 62nd birthday of Hon. R. B. Hanson, wished him many happy returns of the day. Although he did not say so we take it Mr. King meant as leader of the Opposition.

One authority on such matters says he always doubts whether the early robins reported as being seen at this time of year are robins at all. His guess is that they are pine grosbeak.

An Indian is dead at the Six Nations Reserve near Caledonia at the age of 102, and it is said he could speak the language of six different tribes. Most of us consider we do fairly well when we speak English with a fair degree of accuracy.

When the Ontario Brotherhood of Threshermen met in Peterborough one speaker said, in referring to fires at threshings, that friction originating from mortgages was believed to have caused some of the fires. No one need feel embarrassed because he mentioned no names.

TOO GREAT

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I fear when I went off to school, I worked on quite a simple rule, our problems were quite small; they dealt with dollars and with cents, and they were simple measurements, the totals then were small.

¶ We figured what a farmer got, the price of all the things he bought, when he had sold his hay; we reckoned tea and calico, and of the goods he had to show, and what he had to pay.

¶ The sums of money that we knew, were built of dollars that were few, and none of them were large; we reckoned everything in cash, from hay and oats to hocks and hash, and nothing could we charge.

¶ That's why I'm somewhat lost today, when things move in gigantic way, at least it does seem so; they speak of millions now with ease, and what it means if brains I squeeze, I really do not know.

¶ And they take billions in their stride, it makes them swell with worldly pride, impressive I admit; I write these figures in a book, and at them I may gaze and look, but they don't seem to fit.

¶ I guess that when I went to school, they taught a simple sort of rule, for things were humble then; I cannot comprehend today, the figures I meet on my way—I stumble over them.

Where To Look For Needed Men In War Industry

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON. — Uncle Sam's office of production management recently launched its campaign to get all available defence workers listed with the United States employment service, more with a view to maximum plant activity than for the actual craftsmen's benefit.

Wm. S. Knudsen

At any rate, it was output that Production Chief William S. Knudsen unquestionably had in mind. Maybe Co - Chief Sidney Hillman, who particularly represents labor in the O.P.M. set-up, was think considerably of the registration system's obvious advantages from the standpoint of the workingman also. It promises to be an excellent thing for 'em in the long run, anyhow.

The scheme is to get all unemployed workers on the list; likewise to get on to it all workers employed in non-defensive industries who have, incidentally, the necessary skills, of various sorts, to make them useful, by changing jobs, in defensive ones.

Of course, each registrant's place of residence, as well as his name, will be recorded. Thus, if a defence manufacturer at Podunk, for instance, needs men and applies to the U.S. employment service for them, the service will assign them to him from his own immediate neighborhood. He won't have to scout about the country for them and they won't have to travel perhaps long distances to report to him for duty.

This will count materially. It's worse than a bother for a newly hired employee to have to transport himself and his family from one place to another and re-settle in a strange neighborhood. It's a near-impossibility frequently at present.

WHERE TO LIVE

RIGHT where he's been living for quite a while, a workingman usually has a home—rented quite likely, but he's in it and can stay there. But he may not be able to find one at some defence centre that he's just trying to move into; such centres are frightfully over-crowded under existing circumstances.

I know personally of a workingman in Washington, where he had a job and a passably comfortable domicile. Washington's crowded to the point of suffocation, too, but this chap was already installed and in no danger of being evicted to make room for some later arrival.

Well, he heard that he could make more money at Norfolk, Va. Defence work there is fairly perishing for fresh hands, the bird referred to was tecanically equipped for certain required tasks; so he visited Norfolk to apply for a billet.

He found that, with overtime, he could earn $14 daily, which was highly satisfactory. Then he began to look for bed and board. Soon he discovered that the best he could do was at the rate of $17 weekly. That doesn't seem to be excessive on a $14 daily wage basis. However, while the board was okay, the bed was in one room with seven others—and he has a wife and three children. He couldn't find accommodations for that outfit in Norfolk under about twice $14 daily. Naturally, he returned to his job in Washington.

To be sure, the government's building houses as fast as it can, for war workers, but it hasn't got them yet. That's why O.P.M. is so anxious to avoid enforced migration of defence - making availables. There's no room for them where they're needed.

Eligibles don't register directly with the U.S. employment service. They register with the state employment exchanges, but the latter are affiliated with the U.S. service and turn their lists in to it.

O.P.M.'s clamor for registrations, then, at today's juncture, is to facilitate defensive production, and the howl for workers is due to gain volume as the program progresses. As yet, the famine for craftsmen is only local, as at places like Norfolk, but it's a safe bet that it'll become national and a deal more acute not more than comparatively a few week hence.

AFTER THE WAR—

ULTIMATELY, though, the war and defence activity will peter out; the jobs they are providing will peter out by the millions also, and Uncle Sam will have unemployment on his hands again wholesale.

But this next time he'll have a complete list of all workers in front of him, by name and address. It won't be like the last time, when there was an unlimited amount of uncertainty about it. And the unemployed, individual by individual, will be in a position to say to Uncle Samuel, "You know just who we are. We WANT JOBS, and no fooling about it." And it will be darned hard for him to disregard them.

Neither will it be very easy for Uncle Sam to get out from under by abolishing his national employment service, as only an emergency organization. The workers will be apt to tell him to keep it going, as a permanency, and he'll be hard put to it not to do so.

• They Live Under Bombs

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir,—The following letter may be of interest to Devonians living in Peterborough. Being one myself I know every place mentioned in the letter. The letter was written to my sister, but she gave me permission to use it because up to date no mention has been made in any newspaper of the bombing of this southwestern city. —Blanche A. Draper, 226 Brock St.

21 Well Street, Exeter,
Devonshire, England.

Dear Gladys:—

At last I am answering your letter which you wrote to mother. She is with me now, the house where she lived with my brother and his wife was bombed, in fact it was the worst raid we have had in Exeter, the place shook and no wonder. It was a mine bomb and it exploded quite near my brother's house at Heavitree. I believe there were nearly 200 people homeless at the time, but I think some have gone back to their homes as they have been repaired. Some of course were completely wrecked and too far gone. These people have been found homes.

I went and fetched my mother, we were phoned to ask us if we could manage to put her up, she had to spend the night up at St. David's institute with other homeless. They were most kind up there. The women's voluntary services cater for the homeless and really they do their job well.

It was a pitiful sight to see the very old, and the children in their little nighties playing with their dolls and teddy bears. You see it happened just as most folks were getting into bed, at least the old and the very young people. It was a terrifying experience for my mother at her age. (She is over seventy-five.) She had just got into bed when they heard a terrible explosion and with it the ceiling came down on my mother, she was injured about the arm and leg and of course shaken up. I am glad to say she is much better now. We had several air raid alerts in Exeter and about four air raids. One night we heard Jerry up over the city and a whistling bomb passed over this part of the city (St. James St.) and exploded in the Bath Road, killing four brothers from 4 years of age to 14 years. The mother was in a terrible state. The Mayor of Exeter attended the funeral. The bomb destroyed the house so completely, it was as if the house had been cut clean away from other houses....You might remember Alexandria Terrace in the Bath Road. It was a group of houses just beyond, leading into Pinhoe Road, well at the same time an incendiary bomb fell on a house in Bath Road. It was the home of Nurse Marbles. I don't know if you nremember her. Next door to her is a shop which my aunt, Mrs. Kitson, kept, all the back of my aunt's house was demolished and Nurse Marble had to be pulled out of the debris....You will remember the 'Belmont Pleasure Grounds' well it is exactly opposite. You know the rope-maker Heins. My aunt's shop was next to it, of course the front part is still standing but she cannot live there so she and my uncle have gone to live with a daughter in Kendall Buildings, Bath Road. It has been a terrible experience. The road was closed for two days because Jerry dropped a lot of delayed action bombs, these have to be handled by experienced men. Sometimes the air raid sirens go several times a day. The children run home from school, the adults take cover in air raid shelters if they hear Jerry overhead. We can tell the German planes, they sound so heavy.

One night they were over the city all night, nuisance raids they call them. This is done to keep us awake. We have been very lucky in this city as a couple of towns in the west have had a terrible time. My brother Harry has been working in Bristol on war work and he tells us when he comes home for a few days, what an awful time they have been having there, but there! It's no use grumbling, our city is full of Londoners, women and children and Bristol children too, in fact we are full up. The thing is the kids are so good, they bear up well under the strain. It is for them we feel sorry. No seaside trips, no Christmas trees or parties, everything we see and hear is war. How thankful we shall all be when it is over. We cannot get used to the black-out. It is dreary and to be out in it is dangerous. How nice it must be to be in Canada. Things are getting very dear and we are rationed, but still manage to keep smiling. We would rather die than be ruled by the Germans.

Every night we think of our airmen and sailors risking their lives for us. We pray that God will soon end all this war with its suffering and waste of life.

I am sending some newspaper cuttings and will write where it is. The church that was bombed was Clyst St. George. Last week Exmouth had a raid in Chapel street. I hope this letter will reach you with the news. Don't forget us in your prayers and thoughts, we know that God will protect us, so goodnight, and may God bless you all. I remain,

Yours sincerely,
KATE SPITTLE.

A Bit of Nonsense

Price of Science

The landlady noticed with unfeigned dismay that her new lodger's fire consumed more coal than she had been accustomed to provide for it. She mentioned the fact.

"Oh, yes," explained the ingenious young man. "You see I always place coal on the fire in such a way that the grain is perpendicula.—that is, running up and down. It makes a much better fire—nothing like a little science, you know."

The unimpressed landlady spoke in a hard voice that almost stopped the lodger's watch: "I always charge sixpence extra for scientific gents."

"Am I the only girl you've ever kissed?" demanded the pert young girl.

"Well—er—no," blurted her latest find, "but—"

Unfortunate

The final session of a musical competition was drawing to a close when the secretary, perturbed at the non-arrival of a number of the trophies, approached the chairman and informed him of the predicament.

Summoning his chauffeur, the chairman gave him instructions to drive home and ask the butler to give him half-a-dozen cups "off the sideboard."

The cups were duly delivered and the presentation of prizes proceeded according to program.

The conductor of the winning band was handed a beautiful trophy; another was presented to the winning tenor. When the leading soprano received her cup, however, she glanced at the inscription and fell in a faint. The inscription read: "Open competition for the best pig in the show."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Then Pilate therefore took Jesus and scourged him.

And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe.

And said: Hail, king of the Jews! and they smote him with their hands.

Pilate therefore went forth again and saith unto them, Behold I bring him forth to you that ye may know I find no fault in him.

Then came Jesus forth wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them: Behold the man!

When the chief priests and officers saw him, they cried out saying: Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them: Take ye him and crucify him, for I find no fault in him.—John 19: 1-6.

There is nothing new about the position or office of executor; it dates back to ancient times. Its standards of conduct and its duties have been gradually hammered out by experience down the centuries and embodied in the law. A trust company is simply a new type of executor that has been evolved during the last hundred years to meet the new and more complicated conditions of our industrial age—the problems of modern taxation and modern investment. For the one-man capacity of the individual executor it substitutes the advantages of a permanent organization: the systematic records, the multiple business contacts, the group judgment of trained officers. Norwegian Ship Meets Sub On One Trip, And Raiders On Other

NORFOLK, Va., Mar. 26—(AP).—Crewmen of the 2,936-ton Norwegian freighter Hada County reported on arrival here on Monday that her voyage in convoy to Britain was marked by a brush with submarines and that surface raiders dispersed the convoy on the return voyage to America.

The Hada County, operated under the direction of the British Admiralty, was in a convoy of 45 ships England-bound when submarines attacked in the North Atlantic, the seamen said. The submarines were driven off or sunk by guardian destroyers.

"We are certain at least one of the submarines were sunk," one member said. "We passed within 50 yards of a huge spot of grease on the ocean surface. We saw a huge bubbling mass, as if a ship was trying to come up to the surface and could not make it.

"We were told that all three of the U-boats were sunk.

On the voyage home, he said, none on the Hada County saw any raiders, but a wireless order was given to break line.

"A German airplane flew over our ship and the steward fired at it with a rifle. It dropped several bombs, but they fell a hundred feet away and only caused our ship to shake ....It did not come back.

"This plane, we thought, was released by one of the raiders."

The seaman said he did not know how many ships in the convoy were sunk "but we know that many got away."

After breaking convoy, the Hada County made for Norfolk.

The seaman said the attack by surface raiders on the convoy's voyage to America occurred about three days out of an English port.

Captain N. Hourno, master of the freighter, was said to have made a report to the British Government. He declined comment here.

Millbrook's W.A. Honors Kidd Family

MILLBROOK, Mar. 26—(ENS)—A large number of guests attended the progressive crokinole party held in the basement of St. Andrew's Church on Friday evening under the auspices of the Woman's Association. Chinese checkers were in readiness for those who did not care for crokinole, and prize-winners were Mary Dawson and Jack Kidd for high score, and Esther Armstrong and Billy Smith for low standing.

The highlight of the evening was reached after the games were concluded, when Mrs. F. A. Kidd, with her daughter Miss Phyllis, and two sons Kenneth of Peterborough and Jack, were invited to the platform by the pastor, Rev. A. L. Sisco, and presented with a handsome walnut dinner wagon, as a token of esteem from the whole church before they leave early next month for their new home in Peterborough.

The appreciative address was read by Percy Stinson, representing the Church Board, and the gifts presented by W. Fred Fallis, superintendent of the Sunday School, and Gordon Might, president of the Young People"s Union, in both of which organizations the young folk of the family have been particularly active, dependable and useful.

The address was signed by Mr. Stinson, representing the Session and Board of Stewards; W. F. Fallis and oBard of Stewards; Mr. Stinlis, for the Sunday School; Gordon Might, for the Y.P.U.; Mrs. P. I. Bentley, for the Woman's Association; Mrs. A. L. Sisco, for the Women's Missionary Society, the Mission Circle and the Mission Band.

Previous to the presentation, Ken Kidd had been asked to lead in a sing-song, with Phyllis at the piano, this feature of his term of office as recreational convener in the local Y.P.U. having been efficiently carried out.

The minister, Rev. A. L. Sisco, B. D., offered prayer, after Ken had voiced the family's appreciation of the gift, and the kind words which had been its accompaniment.

Yugoslav's Delay Gave Britain Time To Move In

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

WASHINGTON, March 26—(AP).—Events are moving fast in the Balkans and the world may soon know whether Germany and Britain are to come to grips there.

News that Yugoslavia has submitting to Nazi demands that she align herself with the Axis Balkan bloc synchronizes with rumors that the Germans are already in motion across Bulgaria to strike at Greece through the Struma Valley gateway. It suggests that the onslaught may have been timed in Berlin to coincide with actual signature by Yugoslavia of the three-power Axis pact.

Even so, the probable pattern of a Balkan war and its possible effect on the trends of the broader British-Axis fight are still unclear. That depends on many unknown factors, including the degree of Yugoslav co-operation under impending new relationships with the Axis.

It also depends greatly on what British forces have actually been based in Greece in the more than three weeks since popular opposition in Yugoslavia to any tie with the Axis precipitated a Cabinet crisis and delayed fulfilment of German diplomatic expectations. That loss of time in cementing Yugoslavia into the Axis framework as at least a passive partner could prove costly to Germany.

Russians Are Irked.

It has apparently assured stiff Greek-British resistance to any German drive and probably barred the German armies from using the best route of attack on Greece, the Vardar River Valley. The report of German troops movements in Bulgaria pictures Nazi legions as rolling massively toward the far more difficult Struma Valley gateway between Bulgaria and Greece.

If hostilities are restricted to that front, Greek-British hopes of balking a German drive at Salonika for some time or even of breaking its force have some logical basis. The terrain and the season of the year are ill suited for German blitzkrieg technique. It is also certain that powerful units of the Royal Air Force are standing by at Greek bases to pounce on German communication lines in the Bulgarian mountains—and upon Rumanian oil wells.

Increasing Russian resentment over Germany's Balkan push is also apparent. It is reflected in Turkish announcement that Soviet Russia has pledged her "full and comprehensive neutrality" in the event Turkey is attacked. Balkan observers picture its real meaning as assuring Turkey of Russian aid short of war if she is attacked.

From Belgrade it is reported on diplomatic authority that Moscow has already cut off Germany from Russian oil. What that flow has actually amounted to under various Berlin-Moscow deals has never been certain. It may not represent so serious a supply failure as to bring Germany and Russia to an open break.

It does serve to indicate, however, a Russian belief that oil is Hitler's most sensitive and vulnerable war nerve. And it cannot be doubted that his prime source of supply in Rumania will be a major target for British air forces striking from Greek bases if war develops between Germany and the Anglo-Greek allies.

This much is certain: If a German thrust at Salonika is launched via the Struma Valley, and can be beaten off by the Allies, it will greatly affect Turkish and possibly Russian action. Even a determined Greek-British stand of any duration might also stir seething Yugoslavia to revolt against the Government committing her to some sort of partnership with the Axis.

THE Admiralty announced today the naval sloop Shoreham had intercepted the 3,516-ton German merchant ship Oder as it tried to escape from Massauu, Red Sea port of Eritrea. The Admiralty did not specify whether the Oder was captured or simply turned back.

Told To Leave U.S.

Another act in one of America's most sensational spy dramas furnished new mystery thrills as Mikhail Gorin, Soviet agent, convicted of espionage, was released on probation by a federal judge as Los Angeles and ordered to leave the country within 48 hours. On Gorin's release, it was hinted by Federal Judge Ralph S. Jenney, hinge delicate and important negotiations between the U.S. and Soviet Russia.

QUAFFERS TROUNCE DOMINIONS

Bees Are Tied With Losers For 2nd Place

Quaffers added another game to their first place margin by trouncing Dominions 59-37 in the concluding game of the Senior City Basketball League schedule at the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday night. Dominions lost a change of earning undisputed possession of second place and a spot in the finals with Quaffers by losing and finished up in a tie with Bees for the second slot. Bees and Dominions will play a sudden death game to determine who will meet Quaffers in the final.

Quaffers built up a 37-17 lead in the first half and then held Dominions to a 22-all deadlock in the last period to win convincingly in a bitterly fought, fast battle. It was closer than the score would indicate most of the way with loose defensive play spelling Dominions' doom. Both teams turned in sensational shooting at times, while at other stages each missed tries from close in. The winners had a much better shooting average, and the steady defensive play of Turner and McIntyre plus some nice passing by the forwards was the story, with Dominions battling all the way, but poor shooting and ragged defensive play held them back. Both teams travelled at top speed all the way, with play getting rough at times, with the winners holding a decided edge in the opening half and if anything Dominions having the margin in the final twenty minutes.

The winners counted three of their four free throws and Dominions counted three for five.

Ofensive Standout.

Joe Stewart was the offensive standout for the winners with 33 markers, with McIntyre and Turner prominent on the defence. Csumrik and Ferguson led the winners on the attack with Grose a star defensively.

The teams:

Dominions 37—Ferguson 17, Grose 2, Gardner 8, Csumrik 10, Wolstenholme.

Quaffers 59 — McPherson 8, Dougherty 10, Stewart 33, Turner 2, McIntyre 6.

Referee—Pete McArthur.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The Peterborough curlers were urged by Ray P. Best the other night to give youth a chance to learn the game. By the same token a similar appeal could be made in behalf of youngsters in all lines of sport. At few stages in Peterborough's history has there been such a lack of leadership for young athletes as exists at the present time and the result is bound to be disastrous for sport generally. During the past winter, for example the only opportunity for 'teen age hockey players was provided by the South-End League. The Public School League did its part, of course, for the younger boys but for the kids who have graduated from the primary schools facilities for organized hockey have been few and far between this winter. The Church League folded up; the City League failed to function and with those two organizations out of the picture only the South-End League remained to fill the gap and furnish a chance for at least some of the kids who wanted to play hockey to do so.

* * * * * *

Obviously we cannot allow hockey to drift along like that and expect to develop senior players. There must be more leagues, and more leaders. The need of the hour is for men who will take an interest in young players and who are willing to devote some of their time and money to helping them along. Here is a golden chance for some of the city's service clubs to step into the breach and as their contribution to community welfare sponsor young teams and more than that take a real interest in young athletes. There is a wonderful opportunity for constructive work along that line in Peterborough and until it is acted upon the local situation will continue to be disturbing.

* * * * * *

What we have said about hockey applies also to other sports and particularly to baseball. Here on the eve of a new season we face the fact that there is not a junior player in sight who is ready to step up into senior ball and make good. There was a time when this city was making a specialty of developing 'teen age champion ball clubs. There was no lack of young players in those days. There were enough to keep the Central Ontario League club well supplied and still leave plenty to make local intermediate clubs formidable entries in that division. Today the picture is completely changed. Outside of Herb Ralph, there has been nobody in the last few years who would take a chance in handling minor teams. The result is the source of senior players is completed dried up. There are no players on the horizon and a senior ball club could not be fielded here this season without importing four or five players at least.

* * * * * *

Juveniles Bow Out

Peterborough's last hockey hope bowed out Monday night in the defeat of the juvenile squad at the hands of a big and fast Regiopolis College team in Kingston. However the youngsters have had a good, albeit an unusual season. They have been the first Peterborough team in any division of organized hockey who went through a whole season without playing a game at home. For reasons of economy the juveniles were forced to use the Lakefield rink as their home cushion. The young Petes swept through their group and playoffs without a loss, then swamped Haliburton in the first round of the provincial playgrounds and finally have been ousted themselves by the powerful Kingston collegians. However, the local entry was justified for it gave a bunch of good kids experience in outside competition and uncovered a number of youngsters who will be heard from later on.

* * * * * *

Saturday night will be a gala occasion for the Peterborough Badminton Club. The Kingston Club will be guests of the local organization on that occasion, returning a visit paid by the Peterborough players some weeks ago and preparations are being made for an enjoyable affair. The games including singles, doubles and mixed doubles events, will be staged in the market hall courts on Saturday evening. The visitors will be entertained by the local club at Walkerfield House during their visit. The Peterborough club which has had a good season is preparing for the club championships which will be staged next month and promise to furnish the keenest kind of competition before the winners are decided.

* * * * * *

Peterborough's Collegiate senior basketball squad will journey to Toronto Friday night to compete for the senior Ossa championship. Coach Bamforth's boys who have shown constant improvement all season culminating in a decisive defeat of the strong Bowmanville team on their own floor will be drawn against the Niagara Peninsula winners while the Belleville Collegiate will play the Georgian Bay representatives in the other semi-final bracket. Saturday the two winners of these preliminary rounds will meet.

Leafs Sail Out In Front

The Boston Bruins who lost only one game in three months before last Saturday have dropped two in a row since then and are now a game behind the Toronto Leafs in the battle for the Stanley Cup. Last night the Leafs not only defeated the Ross men but routed them. The final count was 7 to 2 and the Boston machine had engine trouble long before the last period was over. Syl Apps returned to the club after a long absence with a bad knee and got as warm a welcome as Wendell Willkie. He proceeded to show how valuable he is to the Leafs by scoring three goals and assisting in a fourth. Boston started without Bill Cowley and although Bobby Bauer tried to help his club he was obviously in difficulties and finally gave it up at the end of the second period. The Bruins managed to go in front twice in the early stages but when Toronto finally took the lead the Boston team collapsed completely and from then on they were a well-beaten outfit. The clubs meet again in Toronto Thursday night and the Leafs right now are in the pilot's seat.

* * * * * *

Two N.H.L. clubs dropped out of competition for the season as the result of last night's games. The New York Rangers, last year's Stanley Cup champions, failed to weather the first round, the old Detroit jinx throwing them for a total loss. In a bitter third game in Detroit last night the New Yorkers were trimmed 3 to 2 and it was curtains for them, the Red Wings winning the round 2 games to 1 and we imagine both Boston and Leafs were delighted to hear it. The Rangers would have been tougher in the finals than Jack Adams' club. Chicago Black Hawks squeezed the battling Canadiens out last night winning the third game 3 to 2 in a game that was in doubt until the last whistle. Canadiens tied up the score at 2-2 with two quick goals in the second period but Curly Dahlstrom potted the winner for Chicago in the final session and the Hawks protected their slender margin effectively until the finish.

* * * * * *

Detroit and Black Hawks will now clash in the semi-final round to decide which will meet the Boston-Leafs winner in the final clash for the Stanley mug. Most sport commentators pick the close-to-the-vest Detroiters as sure-fire finalists but there is nothing so uncertain as the annual series for the pro hockey honors. A Peterborough fan who saw the first Boston-Leaf game in Boston last Thursday night said that the Leafs were more widely outplayed than the 3 to 0 score indicated. And yet last night that same Leaf team handed a 7 to 2 trimming to the Bruins.

* * * * * *

Sporting Chili Con Cadre: After the Westclox girls had defeated Quaker Aces last Friday night two lilies were received by the losers the following morning with a card marked "J. H. Vernor." Now they have discovered that some practical joker sent the flowers using the name of the Westclox executive....Kingston Combines received a rude jolt last night when Owen Sound defeated them 8 to 2. Still the Petes defeated the Kingston team 11 to 3 once this season and where are they now?....During the interval between the second and third periods at Toronto last night the scorer was persuaded to give Nick Metz two assists not previously registered. As Ralph Allen puts it, Metz is the only player in the history of the game to score two points while the ice was being flooded.

Oshawa Juniors Whip St. Kitts 8-5 In Opener

OSHAWA, March 26 (Special).—Oshawa Bees opened their portion of the O.H.A. Junior B final round-robin series here last night with a convincing 8-5 win over St. Catharines Mason's Saints. McBrien, Andy McMullen and Davies, as a line, sparked the Oshawa offensive and provided a marked edge over the visitors. The Saints fought back gamely all the way and scored two goals in a final desperate drive in the last period, but failed to show the class of the local boys.

Some Ball Camp Training Notes

(By The Associated Press).

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — John Podgajny, the rookie right-hander of whom the Phillies expect a great deal this year, has been sent back to Philadelphia to have his tonsils removed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — St. Louis Cardinals, who break camp tomorrow, are wondering what's happened to their sluggers. In yesterday's 3-1 triumph over Cleveland they produced only three hits—none by Sluggers Johnny Mize, Terry Moore or Enos Slaughter.

ANAHEIM, Calif.—Bill Beckman's performances in the Grapefruit League have given every indication that he is pointing for a role as starting pitcher. His hurling was the only saving feature of yesterday's 9-6 defeat by the White Sox, as he turned in a flawless job over the last three innings.

ONTARIO, Calif.—Lou Stringer, fancy-fielding rookie shortstop of the Chicago Cubs, is attracting attention as a hitter. His average for exhibition games is above .400 and he got two hits, including a homer with the bases loaded, as the Cubs beat Pittsburg yesterday.

MIAMI, Fla.—Clydell Castleman, who apparently was ticketed for Jersey City, seems likely to stick with the New York Giants and the chances are that Jim Lynn will be shipped away instead. Castleman gave a neat pitching performance against the Phillies yesterday while Lynn was touched for five straight hits and four runs that lost the game.

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox is enthusiastic over the showing of Orval Grove, big right hander up from Oklahoma City. Specializing in a sinker ball, Grove gave only two hits, two walks and no runs in the last three innings against the Athletics yesterday.

TOMAHAWK DUTCH?

NEW YORK—(CP). — Another tradition goes—ethnologists say the tomahawk as a combination axe and pipe was brought to America by early Dutch and copied by Indians.

SYL APPS PAVES WAY FOR LEAF 7 TO 2 PASTING OF THE BRUINS

Boston Slumps With Cowley On Injury List

TORONTO, March 26 — (CP). — Their aspirations temporarily blasted by a man just risen from the injury bench, the bruised Bruins today glanced along the same Casualty Row to gain encouragement from the hope that Bill Cowley may return to aid in their fight for the Stanley Cup.

The National Hockey League's scoring champion was on the sidelines with a damaged knee last night as Syl Apps stepped from hospital to lead Toronto Maple Leafs to a 7-2 triumph over the Bruins. The victory gave the Leafs a two to one edge in the best-of-seven semi-final cup series.

On the sidelines for a month due to a knee injury, Apps led a blistering Toronto attack, scoring three goals and helping Nick Metz in another. The fact that the Toronto captain's leg stood up under pressure, established the Leafs as favorites for the next game here Thursday.

The Bruins were a dejected lot after the trouncing—the worst they have absorbed this season—but Coach Cooney Weiland expressed confidence that if Cowley can return to action for the series, the Bruins will finish on top. As mournful as the rest, Cowley himself wasn't sure that he would be ready for Thursday's game.

Leafs Pull Up Twice

A crowd of 13,825 fans saw the Leafs come from behind twice and set the stage for ponderous Bucko McDonald to fire the winning counter in the second period. Defenceman Des Smith of Boston was in the penalty box when McDonald's long shot glanced off Dit Clapper's leg into the Bruins' net.

Weiland argued that the penalty was "cheap" and Smith claimed he didn't "even touch" Billy Taylor, the man he was charged with tripping. Said Smith: "It's the third penalty I've had like that since the start of the series and two of them have been on Taylor, who pulled phoney falls both times."

In the Toronto dressing room Manager Conn Smythe predicted that the Leafs would win again Thursday, and go on to take the series. He had words of praise for all his charges, particularly Sweeney Schriner who sank two goals and Nick Metz who made plays for three markers besides the one he scored.

Smythe said that the turning point in the game was the five minutes of withering hockey that preceded McDonald's pay-off shot. "We knew they couldn't beat us at that type of hockey as we had three lines to their two—they can't win without Cowley when we're at full strength."

Milt Schmidt converted Flash Hollet's rebound in the first period to put the Bruins in front, but before the session ended, Schriner tied the count. A fluky goal from the stick of Herbie Gain gave the Bruins the lead again early in the second period. The puck rolled under Broda's leg as the goalie sat on the ice.

The Leafs charged back and within two minutes Apps had scored his first goal to again put the Leafs on even terms. From then on the Leafs were unstoppable and they were in front 4-2 when the second period closed. All three third-period goals were on breakaways from Boston gang attacks.

Behind The Scene With The Toronto Maple Leafs

Arriving back in Toronto for third game of the best four out of seven series, Toronto Maple Leafs immediately retired to Maple Leaf Gardens to prepare a warm welcome for Boston Bruins. Nick Metz is pictured giving his skates the once over to be sure that they are fit and ready, while Sylvanus Apps signs his autograph for some enthusiastic fans. Out with injuries, Apps made his first appearance of the series at Toronto Tuesday night and scored three goals.

Canadiens Fade By Lone Goal To Black Hawks

CHICAGO, March 26—(CP). — (CP).—Hopeful of retreading the steps of Chicago's destiny team of 1938, the Black Hawks looked to new worlds today in their Stanley Cup hunt, while Montreal Canadiens, beaten by the odd goal in three games, headed wearily homeward to break up camp.

The outcome of the whole series was decided in the last period of the third game here last night. For two games and two periods the teams were even, but Cully Dahlstrom, Minneapolis-born centre, scored the 11th goal of the series to give the Hawks the deciding, 3-2 victory.

The record of another Chicago team gave the Hawks confidence for their next best-of-three series against Detroit Red Wings, who meanwhile eliminated New York Rangers at Detroit. It was Bill Stewart's Black Hawks of 1937-38 who also finished fifth in season's points and battled their way to the Stanley Cup.

Lovers 2-1 in the first game at Chicago, Canadiens bounced back Saturday in Montreal to take a 4-3 decision after 34 minutes extra play in a vicious game. It forced a deciding match, but the advantage was Chicago's by virtue of their home-ice choice.

A Near Comeback

At one time it looked as if the Canadiens would do it. They spotted the Hawks a two-goal lead in the first two frames and then wiped both out late in the second frame in a brilliant drive that saw Joe Benoit, three-goal hero of the second game, and Winger Ray Getliffe both score within 21 seconds.

It was just 3:31 minutes after the start of the final period, however, that Joe Papike and George Allen sent Dahlstrom right in on Goalie Bert Gardiner and Dahlstrom made no mistake. The Habitants fought back in the remaining 14 minutes and twice Getliffe and Toe Blake had the tying goals on their sticks but Goalie Lo Presti both times turned in phenomenal saves.

It was the great goal-work of Lo Presti that proved the Canadiens' stumbling block all through the game, even the series.

Only late in the second frame did the Canadiens puncture Lo Presti. Blake and Johnny Quilty set up Benoit for their first counter at 18.37 and 21 seconds later Getliffe took Murph Chamberlain's pass to tie the score but the Chicago goalie was unbeatable from then on.

Off From Speeds To New Gadgets

LONDON, Mar. 26 — (CP).—Sir Malcolm Campbell has turned his talent or speed to the benefit of the British armored car forces.

The 56-year-old Briton whose "Bluebird" motor boats, and automobiles have been setting records for 30 years, has designed a new type of armored car and has turned out a number of inventions, one of which has been accepted by the British Army.

Sir Malcolm stored his speedy cars and boats shortly after Great Britain went to war in September, 1939. He refused a promotion from his present captaincy, instead organizing and commanding a motorcycle company.

From that he moved into the laboratory, and for several months has been spending long hours in experimental work.

"All my life my hobby has been speed," he said. "I've always worked with speed motor boats and cars. Now I find myself absorbed with entirely different automotive problems and I am pleased that my experiments have proved of some value."

Whether Sir Malcolm's experiments also include work on England's fast motor patrol boats was not disclosed. Officially, his work is termed "military secret."

But if he should be, he might make those patrol boats hard to catch. Shortly before the war started, Sir Malcolm skittered his Bluebird over the waters of Lake Coniston in England at 141.74 miles an hour. Present patrol boats do possibly half that.

Wings Win Right To Meet Hawks Oust Rangers 3-2

DETROIT, Mar. 26—(CP).—The Stanley Cup, time-battered emblem of world hockey supremacy, will rest in a new city when the 1940-41 National Hockey League season comes to its close.

New York Rangers, although playing the brand of hockey with which they wound up the regular season in a blaze of glory, were no match for an inspired Detroit Red Wings team last night in the third and deciding game of their best-of-three preliminary Cup playoff series. Detroit won the game 3-2 and the right to meet Chicago Black Hawks, who eliminated Montreal Canadiens in the semi-final round.

Loser of the first game here last Thursday 2-1, the Rangers went all-out—as they did in winning the second game of the series in New York on Sunday 3-1—to try to overcome an early Detroit lead and force overtime play. They came close nine seconds before the end of the third period when Neil Colville scored their second goal on a pass from Alf Pike.

Spectacular saves by Johnny Mowers, brilliant rookie goalie, kept the Rangers from pulling the game out of the fire. At that, they kept on firing until the last and had the Wings in hot water numerous times. The game ended in a display of tempers during which Lynn Patrick, Ranger wingman, drew a match penalty, and Ranger defenceman Art Coulter was given a misconduct penalty.

Jennings Starts It.

The Wings scored twice in the first period and made the outcome certain with another counter midway of the final period. Bill Jennings opened the scoring at 11:36 when he knocked a 20-foot rebound shot past Goalie Davie Kerr. Kerr had checked a sizzling shot from Don Grosso and on the rebound he didn't have a chance.

Kilby Macdonald deadlocked the count at 15:25 when his drive from a face-off at the Red Wing line struck Mowers' arm and bounded into the net. A "golf drive" by Jack Stewart with 12 seconds of the first period remaining sent the Wings into the lead to stay. Stewart let go from 45 feet out and the puck, which Kerr tried to ward off with a kick, struck the goalie's pads and dropped into the cage.

The Rangers had Phil Watson in the penalty box for slashing when Syd Howe intercepted Otto Heller's pass along the boards in the third period and leisurely passed to Mud Bruneteau for the game-clinching goal. Colville ended the scoring with the New Yorkers fighting desperately but futilely to tie the count.

Until the last period, not a penalty was called. Then in the final 10 minutes of play the game blew wide open. Protesting a double penalty to Jimmy Orlando and Pike, banished for cross-checking and slashing, players of both teams crowded around Referee Bill Stewart. Patrick was banished for protesting too vociferously and in a rumpus about the penalty box Coulter drew his misconduct penalty.

In losing the crucial contest, the Rangers were unable to break the jinx held over them in Detroit. In 10 games in two seasons in the Olympia, they have been able to win only one.

Hopes To Pitch His 200th Win

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Mar. 26—(CP). — Charles Henry Root, 42, goes into his 21st year in organized baseball and his 15th with the Chicago Cubs this season, aiming to reach and pass the 200-mark goal of league victories.

The likeable veteran needs but seven wins to reach 200, a feat achieved by few pitchers. He will be given every opportunity to garner those victories.

"I plan to use Root as a starting pitcher this year, and it'll be up to him," said Manager Jimmy Wilson during the Cub's training period at Santa Catalina Island.

Charlie Root is ready for the test. He's been headed for the shelf several times, but he's still in there chunking that ball.

Sea Losses Ease As U.K. Swaps Blow For Blow

LONDON, March 26—(CP). — An Admiralty announcement today showed a drop in Britain's sea losses for the second successive week, while she returns blow for blow in the battle of the Atlantic.

Twenty-three British and allied merchantmen totalling 71,770 tons were lost in the sea war in the week ended March 16, the Admiralty said. Of the vessels 17 were British totalling 60,670 tons and six were allied, totalling 11,103 tons.

This compared with total losses of 96,812 tons the previous week and 141,314 tons the week before that.

The authorities declared that in the same period Britain's own naval and air raiders were sinking almost three tons of Axis ships for every four tons Britain and her allies lost.

Compared with the announced total of 410,000 tons lost to allied and neutral shipping in the five weeks up to March 16, Axis losses in that period were 300,000 tons.

This announcement gave no details of how many Axis ships had been sunk, but came at a time when Britain had been reporting increasing successes in bomb raids on shipping along the continental coast.

They Must Have Trade

Although German and Italian merchant fleets have been swept from the Atlantic, coastal trade is regarded as vital to the Axis war economy.

Experts here say the Axis must have full use of continental waterways supplementing rail routes to feed raw materials and arms to its industries and armies.

Much of Britain's bombing strength has been concentrated in raids upon shipping and rail centres, despite growing popular demand for all-out bombing of Berlin.

The Daily Express, newspaper of Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production, today reported an "immense public clamor" in letters to it for a persistent bombing of the Nazi capital.

The press rejoiced over the Sunday night bombing of Berlin, and air correspondents said British raids would grow heavier as more and more new bombers and planes from the United States came into operation.

Millbrook Reeve Opposes Scrapping Line

(By Staff Reporter)

MILLBROOK, March 26. — Railway officials have been doing nothing to meet the bus, car, and truck competition but have sat back, and when traffic falls off, they reduce the service until a line is of little value, then they apply for permission to discontinue it.

In these words, Reeve W. E. Ball, of Millbrook summed up the events leading up to the proposal to discontinue the C.N.R. line between Millbrook and Port Hope, and the mail, express and passenger service between Millbrook and Peterborough.

"If this portion of the line is abandoned it will only be a short time until the entire line will be discontinued" Mr. Ball said.

He went on to point out that at the present time the railways are enjoying an increased revenue, and during wartime is certainly not the proper time to start cutting down on rail facilities.

"If this line is cut out, Millbrook will be practically isolated and removal of the mail and express service will have a serious effect on the business of the village. Property values will go down too, and I have always maintained that a railway performs a national service and no village should be deprived of that service."

Will Hold Meeting

It was learned at Millbrook that the regular meeting of the Council is not until April 7th but the councillors are giving consideration to the holding of a special meeting to discuss this situation. Plans include seeking the assistance of C. Mercer, M.P.P., and also that of the Federal member.

Reeve Ball mentioned that the St. Lawrence Waterway was now assured and with this project completed the Port Hope harbor facilities would be available to the big industries at Peterborough, which could ship direct either way

"This is an important factor at the present time because of industrial expansion, and it further emphasizes the need for retaining this main line connection between Peterborough and Port Hope," he said.

Cavan Also Opposed

Henry A. Fallis, a member of the Cavan Council, added his voice to the chorus of protest against discontinuing any of the railway services into Millbrook. "This is a rich farming community and it needs the existing rail facilities. If the railway services are reduced it will gradually isolate the village and will be the beginning of the end. It is imperative that small places have proper railway connections or otherwise their chances of expanding are reduced."

Campbellcroft village about four miles west of Bewdley will be isolated if the rail service is discontinued and consequently will suffer the most. The train service provides a mail service over an area of more than 300 square mile, and many farmers use the train to get into Port Hope and back. There is a large grain elevator at the village, owned by J. A. Dewart, and operated by Mr. Waddell.

Trent River News

Gordon Whiddon, B.A., of Toronto took charge of the United Church service on Sunday afternoon.

The higher temperature and warm sunshine over the week-end proved most beneficial, taking away considerable snow. Patches of grass can be seen in many places, water is running freely along the roads, and Highway 30 through to Havelock is bare. The main channel on both sides of the big bridge is flowing free of ice, but the river is frozen solid from shore to shore up by the old dock, and trappers will be delayed in their work this year.

Jim Doupe of Oshawa was a week-end visitor at his home, and with Mrs. Doupe and family were Saturday visitors with Mrs. Doupe's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Brown of Stanwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ellis and son Ronnie of Peterborough were Sunday visitors with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Ellis.

Aircraftsman Carl Ellis of Toronto was a week-end visitor at the parental home.

Ted Chaplin, who has been employed at Ottawa for a few weeks, was a week-end visitor at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. V. Chaplin.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Carnrite were week-end visitors with the former's mother, Mrs. Robert Carnrite.

Jack Cranham of Peterborough was a visitor at Cedar Isle on Sunday.

Representative Robert F. Rich of Pennsylvania, during House approval of the $7,000,000,000 appropriation to implement the Lend-Lease bill, asked the House to grant him $5,000,000 to go to Germany and "get" Hitler. He declared he could then muster "ten red-blooded Americans" to carry out the project.

Halifax Disease Charge Denied

HALIFAX, March 26 — (CP). — Hon. Dr. F. R. Davis, Minister of Health told Nova Scotia Legislature yesterday the statement that Halifax is a "hell-hole of infection" is grossly exaggerated and unfair."

(The New York Times on Sunday published a special despatch from Boston saying a Harvard University medical mission which studied epidemics here recently had found the city a "hell-hole of infection.")

Dr. Davis answering a question from Opposition Leader L. W. Fraser said he was awaiting the arrival here of Dr. J. H. Mue[illegible], head of the Harvard group before making a detailed statement. "Inasmuch as the report was based on a purported interview with some member of the Harvard medical group, they should be given a chance to explain," the Minister said.

He declared Dr. Mueller had been in touch with officials here by telephone since publication of the story and had wanted to give a statement "to the satisfaction of himself, the Harvard group and the citizens of Halifax in general."

Three Children Have Near Call

KINGSTON, March 26 (Special). —Three children narrowly escaped death near their home at Forest Mills, northeast of here, yesterday, when the car in which they were riding plunged down a steep embankment to the ice on the Salmon River.

Lymm Leavee was driving the vehicle containing his two children and Betty McFarland when the car stalled as he pulled to the side of the road to pass a load of hay. The car apparently was left in reverse gear, for when Leavee cranked it the vehicle shot backward through the railing and started rolling down the bank. It rolled over twice before coming to rest three feet from open water.

Although the car was badly damaged, the children were shaken up only and were removed through the windows.

Mel, one of three brothers on active service has been in England with an Eastern Ontario Regiment for many months and his parents have learned that recently he was assigned to a boxing instructor's course. He is now qualified to teach army boxing and help run army fights.

BREAKS ARM TWICE

The month of March is a jinx for Allan Gay, principal of the Havelock Public School. Four years ago when he was attending the Normal School in this city he fell on Benson avenue on the ice and fractured his right wrist. Three weeks ago, while walking home from school at Havelock, he went into a spin again on the ice and broke the same arm. He still has it in a sling.

AN OPPORTUNIST

George street in the early evening is not the best place in the world to stage a necking party, but a soldier thinks otherwise. Last evening while hundreds of window shoppers and theatre-goers were on the street, a soldier and his girl friend who incidentally looked very young, were sitting in the front seat of a car in front of the Fashion Craft shop. They were billing, cooing in fine style, totally indifferent to grins of passersby.

CAMP ENTERTAINERS

Most of the members of the staff and the men in training at the military camp attended a concert given last night in the main hall by "The Entertainers.'" Adjutant Buckley was chairman, and those assisting included Mrs. Al Spenceley in vocal numbers; Miss Celia Foster, songs; Frank Biddle, comic songs and recitations; Lenore Gordon, James Gosselin and Regina DeCarlo; tap dancing; Jim Sharpe, Yorkshire dialetic; Geoffrey Cridland, trumpet solos; Mickey Foster, saxophone solos; Mrs. D. Quinlan, piano numbers; and Mrs. E. M. Foster accompanist and director.

City Council To Discuss Housing

Women Divided On Idea Of Jury Service

As the bill authorizing woman jurors is before the Provincial Legislature, an Examiner reporter has interviewed several Peterborough women in an effort to discover the reaction on the part of women in various walks of life to the idea of jury duty for themselves. One consistent fact has been noted, all canvassed were definitely in either one camp or the other, none were undecided. Some of the answers obtained follow.

Dr. Lorna Cotton Thomas, women's leader, spoke in sympathy with the movement, and said "Citizenship knows no sex distinction, all have similar responsibility in a democracy, and women should be willing to face that responsibility." In addition she explained that it would no doubt be unpleasant to find oneself in such a position, but women should be prepared to suffer the unpleasantness attending, and, if called, serve on juries.

Favors Idea

Another who is in favor of the passing of the bill is Mrs. C. M. Scott. When asked for her views, Mrs. Scott said, "Women should be ready to carry the responsibilities, as well as enjoy the fruits of democracy. There are many cases, particularly where domestic problems are to be decided, where a clear-thinking and unprejudiced woman's opinion would be invaluable. Women are taking their place in the Ministry of the Church and on municipal boards, and they should also be qualified and helpful in serving on a jury panel."

Mrs. Max Swanston, when asked the question, turned to woman's lack of contact with a sometimes hard world, and said that she did not believe the average woman could be said to be qualified to judge the majority of cases. Perhaps in the case of some professional woman, there might be exceptions, but for the most part, women are not in a position to arbitrate when hardened characters are to be dealt with, and for these reasons Mrs. Swanston is opposed to the idea.

Gertrude Hamilton, secretary, is opposed to the serving of women on jury panels, because "It is a man's job." Even though privileges are accorded women in the direction of a franchise, jury duty places itself in a little different category. Although women have taken places amongst men in business and numerous civic positions, jury duty is one thing from which almost all would shrink.

In the opposite trend, Mrs. E. Wand, a housewife, claims that since women are "more sympathetic, more businesslike while in conference, and more sincere, than men" they should be allowed to serve on juries. Women also delve deeper into situations than do men, and though some would be of no use what-so-ever, many would prove to be invaluable. On the whole, Mrs. Wand continued, women would make better jurors than do men, that is "public minded women."

Miss L. Hurley, 260 Hunter street, went on record as favoring the project, in that "A jury with women on it might be better than one composed completely of men. "In some cases, women might have an insight not in man's possession, and for that reason, and in the end of justice, juries might well benefit if women were to serve on them.

Not Necessary

"There are some jobs in which it is not necessary for women to take a part, and I feel that jury duty is one of them." These were the words of Mrs. John Cridland, well known conservative worker, when asked her views on the subject. She said she felt that while women should be prepared to play their part in national and provincial affairs, concern could not but be felt over the possibility of women, as such, expecting to be shielded from some cases and some situations which might well arise in the courtroom.

Jail Officials Are Named By The Sheriff

The special meeting of the county council Tuesday clarified the fact that jail officials are to be appointed by the sheriff, "subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council who shall fix the salaries of every jail officer, which shall be paid by the county or city as the case may be."

In other words final approval of appointments is retained by the provincial government, and the county and city pay the salaries.

The question of authority to make appointments was raised recenty in county circles when William Buchanan of Norwood, took the place of Gordon F. Fry, who resigned in January as turnkey to join a branch of the Canadian army.

As to the personality and reputation of Mr. Buchanan, Reeve Ferguson of Norwood said: "No one can say a thing against him," and Reeve Robert Martin of Dummer, added: "You can't beat him as a man."

Sheriff Attended.

The council, requested F. J. A. Hall, acting sheriff, to attend the afternoon session, and tell them how Mr. Buchanan was appointed.

"I appointed him," Mr. Hall said, "He came to me with a recommendation from Mr. Elliott for the position of assistant turnkey. We had great difficulty getting a man for this temporary job. It might have been some better if it were to be permanent, but there is a scarcity of men anyway and Mr. Buchanan is giving very fair satisfaction. He is lame in one leg, but we couldn't get a man at less than $25 a week the first time."

Deputy-reeve Archibald — "Did Mr. Bristow, an ex-policeman, apply?"

Mr. Hall—"Yes he came to see me."

Mr. Archibald—"He was a policeman or 16 or 20 years, but he did not get any consideration."

Mr. Buchanan was engaged at $25 a week and provided his own living quarters in the city. When the apartment in the Court House is vacant Mr. Buchanan was to get $20 a week and the apartment.

Salary of $800 a Year.

It was said that Mr. Fry's salary was $800 a year and free dwelling place.

Reeve Mann asked Mr. Hall whether he would recommend that Mr. Buchanan's salary be changed to the sum Mr. Fry received.

"Unfortunately the Toronto government can appoint men and we have got to do the paying," Mr. Mann said. His motion recommending the reduction of the Buchanan salary to $800 a year and free house was seconded by Reeve N. Lean, and carried.

Mr. Hall said he would send the recommendation on to the government.

Provincial Matter.

At one stage of the discussion Reeve Tanner of Lakefield proposed a resolution suggesting that the appointment was entirely a matter for the provincial government to deal with, and that the calling of the special session of the council was going beyond its authority in this instance.

Mr. Archibald reported that Mrs. G. F. Fry had agreed to vacate her quarters in the Court House at the end of this week. She is to receive a month's salary for her husband, $66, less a month's rent, $25.

Reeve Tanner said that if it was the sheriff's duty to look after the details of jail appointments he should carry it out, and not have the council butting into an affair which was clearly set out in the Municipal Act.

"The city of Peterborough has a say in this," Mr. Tanner pointed out. "It is not wholly a county affair, and that is one reason why the Attorney-General's department has the say as to what salaries should be paid."

Second Offender Is Given Fine Of $50

A Douro man who pleaded guilty in police court this morning to having been drunk yesterday and who admitted a previous conviction for the same offence earlier this month asked the magistrate to be allowed to go. "I have my place to look after," he told the court."

"Practically everybody who comes before me wants to be allowed to go," said Magistrate Langley. "Unfortunately for them I have my duty to do and I am not able to let them go. As a second offender the accused was fined $50 and costs or a month in jail.

Home On Leave

Petty Officer Tom McDonald, H.M.C.S. Prince Robert is home on 21 days leave after six months of patrol work in the Pacific. He is looking fit and brought souvenirs from every port he visited. He lives at 554 Sherbrooke street and was formerly employed as a machinist in the C.G.E.

Peterboro Boys Serving On Pacific Patrol

Petty Officer Tom McDonald, 554 Sherbrooke street, home on leave after six months sea patrol in the H.M.S. Prince Robert, didn't know there was a winter until he reached Canada a short time ago.

His boat has been on a tropic cruise, doing blockade work and patrol work along the west coast of South America as far south as the Horn, and even over to Suva, capital city of the Fiji Islands, north of New Zealand.

The ship narrowly escaped the worst hurricane in the history of the Fiji Islands since 1910 and when they docked at Suva harbor, they found two large Norwegian freighters high and dry on the beach where they had been hurled by the force of the hurricane. The native villages of straw huts, took a real beating and on several of the islands entire villages were laid waste. Trees were uprooted all over the place, but the modern city of Suva stood the blow well and except for uprooted trees no damage of any account was done.

Pacific Was Peaceful

The Pacific is a peaceful spot, as this boat failed to run across any raiders, or enemy submarines, but they stopped several boats, none of which turned out to be blockade runners.

There was only one unusual incident and this took place off the coast of Chile, when a power winch broke, causing severe head injuries to Seaman Brown, a native of Saskatchewan. This man is still in the hospital at Valparaiso, Chile.

The English people at Suva arranged a big dance for the crew of the ship when it docked at Suva and when they were leaving another big party was staged. Besides this the men were taken on a tour of the native villages, and McDonald brought home a suitcase full of curios, not only from the Fiji islands, but from many South American ports.

Coral Samples

His samples of coral are beautiful specimens, one in particular of a delicate rose pink shade, which his mother intends to have made into a radio lamp. He has a leather cushion cover from Chile, a coin bracelet from Lima, Peru, coins from all of the west coast republics, a Spanish calendar, and snapshots galore showing the native Fijis.

The ship covered more than 60,000 miles in the six months of cruising and when it arrived in port there were three inches of barnacles on the hull. One day a flying fish zoomed out of the water and landed on the ship's deck. It was about 12 inches long and very slender with wing like fins on each side. There were many large schools of porpoises swimming past, and sharks and whales were seen often.

Tommy McDonald was formerly employed in the C.G.E. as a machinist and enlisted last July. He is 19 years of age. With him on the Prince Robert are two other Peterborough boys, Jack Carney who left here ten years ago and has been employed on coastal boats off British Columbia and Leading Steward Gordon Hardie, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hardie, Weller street, who is also home on leave.

Rev. Dr. P. J. Kelly Is Honored By Parish Of St. Peter's On Eve Of Departure To Cobourg

To Rev. P. J. Kelly, LL.D., rector of St. Peter's Cathedral for the last five years, the members of the parish last night expressed a grateful and literal adieu—to God—at a meeting in St. Alphonsus Lyceum on the eve of his departure for Cobourg to continue his ministry in charge of the parish of St. Michael.

On behalf of the congregation John R. Corkery read an address of appreciation and farewell, and John G. McCarney presented Rev. Dr. Kelly with a cheque.

The spirit of this occasion of parting and remembrance was amplified by other gifts from societies of the Cathedral. Addresses were read from the Catholic Women's League by Miss Lillian Hurley, the Catholic Junior League by Robert Baldwin and the Sodality by Miss Helen Ross, and their respective gifts were a reading table and chair presented by Miss Mary Clancy; a chair by Edward Prete; and a lamp presented by Miss Mary Lonergan.

Other presentations previously made were as follows: an electric clock from the members of the Altar Society; a tri-light lamp from the pupils of St. Peter's High School; a set of eight flat silverware by the pupils of St. Peter's School and St. Mary's Convent; and a golf bag from the members of the Study Club conducted by Rev. Dr. Kelly.

The chairman of last night's meeting was V. J. McElderry, K.C.

"We are assembled here tonight to honor one whom we are very sorry to lose," said Mr. McElderry in his introductory remarks as chairman. "The purpose of this gathering is to express our appreciation of the priestly qualities of Father Kelly and of his fulfillment of priestly duties in this parish during the last five years. It is one of those things which we often take too much for granted, but this evening we are not taking it for granted, although no words of our can adequately thank Father Kelly for the manner in which he has performed his duties as parish priest of St. Peter's, and to tell him how much we regret that he is leaving us. We wish to express our desire for him that he may have a long life of happiness in his future home.

And that word reminds us that when we use the word happiness there intrudes the thought of the terrible struggle in which our world is engaged. There can be no happiness for any one, certainly for no Christian until the enemies we are contending with are finally defeated. If it were thinkable that our arms do not prevail, Christianity will be stamped out as it has been in Germany and Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. But, that is subject to God's will, and Christianity is not going to be stamped out. Happiness is going to return to the world as we know it. We are fighting a crusade as in the old days of Merrie England when its soldiers of the Cross wrested the Holy Sepulchre from the Saracens, and just as the arms of Christians prevailed in those day so they are going to prevail in these days of our own time."

Congregation's Address

The congregational address read by Mr. Corkery opened on a note of regret in the transfer of Rev. Father Kelly to the parish of Cobourg, and continued, in part, as follows: "By your ordination to the holy priesthood you were set apart from men. In accordance with the wisdom of the holy church you were exhorted to go among men but not to become one of them. Just how far you have lived this separated and secluded life and still succeeded in making the influence of your sacerdotal office felt by all men is told in the

Muskrat Season To Start End Of Month

Word has been received from the Department of Game and Fisheries that the open season for muskrat trapping south of No. 7 Highway will open on March 29.

No date has been set for opening of the season north of No. 7, but as a general rule the department waits for weather data from the overseers in the district to guide them in setting this date. At the present time all rivers, lakes, streams and ponds both north and south of Peterborough city are frozen solid. During the past few days some water has been noticed on top of the ice, but this is from the melting snow.

Muskrats usually stay in their houses until the ice starts to break away from the shores of the lakes and rivers, but often in warm weather they are seen scampering across the snow and ice in search of food.

The season south of No. 7 opened last year about the same time, and so far the department has not stated the length of the season. This, too, is in line with their general policy as the number of rats taken depends to a great extent on weather conditions, and in the event of cold weather hanging on an extension of the season can be easily arranged.

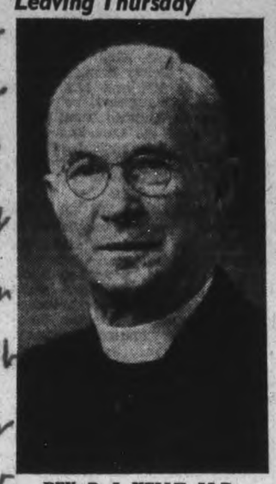
Wounded Overseas

Pte. James I. Welch, Toronto Scottish, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Welch, 523 Sherbourne street who is listed as wounded by enemy action somewhere in England. His mother received official notice of the injury on Tuesday afternoon and the telegram indicated he had delayed shock, believed to have followed a bomb explosion. The message did not indicate that his condition was serious.

Leaving Thursday



REV. P. J. KELLY, LL.D.

Gifts of remembrance were presented to the departing rector of St. Peter's Cathedral last night as he leaves for the parish of St. Michael, Cobourg. A native of Peterborough, Dr. Kelly has been in charge of eight parishes during his priesthood. His story of his "journeyings" in the course of his ministry was an interesting odyssey, including reception into an Indian tribe.

Girl Contributed 500 Coppers To War Victims

There is no slackening in the number of donations to the Peterborough District Fund for British War Victims and to-day's contributions put the total twenty dollars closer to the fifth $500.

Down in the Structural Steel Department of the C.G.E. they had a box and employees who broke a certain rule had to pay a fine. Fred (Champ) Clark was named custodian of the box and perhaps nothing more should be said about this venture, but if anyone wishes to quiz Mr. Clark, perhaps they will hear an interesting tale. At any rate the fund is $5.15 richer.

Grades 2, 3 and 5 of the Immaculate Conception School were not satisfied with the big donation made by the school some time ago, so they chipped in their pennies and nickels and a total of five dollars was turned in to the fund.

Marjorie Mackness saved up 500 coppers and turned them in today, and two juniors, one so small she had to be lifted up to the Examiner counter, Joan and Ethel Parton, contributed a cartwheel each, which in other words is two silver dollars.

D. D. C. Dawe donated the tickets being used to raffle off the crochet spread donated by Mrs. Mortimer, and the Peterborough Printing Company handed over without charge the tickets on two dolls' houses. These two dolls' houses are on display in the store window on Charlotte street, operated by Elcombe and Grottick and they were donated to the Fund by Paul and Gried Elcombe and Gertrude Grottick. Tickets are a dime apiece.

The old maestro, Frank Rozelle, who could sell the stingiest man in the world two tickets when he only wanted one, is now doing his bit for the Fund. Frank has taken over some books of tickets on the canoe and is selling them on George street. This boat is now on display in Grafton's window and was donated by J. B. O'Dette and Sons.

Mayor Hamilton Summons Special Meeting

Contracts for public liability insurance and the collection of garbage will probably be the main business for a special meeting of the council called by Mayor Hamilton for Thursday evening, but questions of rents and housing accommodation are also likely to be considered.

Some rumors and murmurs about increasing rentals in this city have been heard lately, but whether the intervention of a rent control commissioner is required is not definitely known at the city hall. A communication has been received from Ottawa intimating that an enquiry may be arranged for Peterborough if it is believed to be needed.

Information has already been published that this city has been allotted three hundred pre-fabricated houses, and Mayor Hamilton said this afternoon he was unable to express any opinion as to what the council's decision might be in regard to this proposal.

"I don't want any one to think that I am opposed to this idea of pre-fabricated houses," His Worship remarked to the Examiner. "My mind is quite open on that question. I can say this that the council of the last two or three years has been rather proud of the extent of the building of houses in this city by people who wanted homes for themselves. Practically all of them are a good type of house, well built and permanent, and I know that is the type of house we would like to see built this year. If another hundred of them are built this season, that would be a decided asset to the city.

"However, we may have to consider the need of the pre-fabricated house for any emergency demand that may arise within the next few months. I don't know how long they would be good for, but you could not call them permanent dwellings in the same sense as the brick houses which have been constructed here during the last few years."

Pte. J. I. Welch Is Wounded

Pte. James I. Welch, of a Central Ontario regiment, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Welch, 523 Sherbourne Street, is reported to be wounded as a result of enemy action in England.

The wire received by his mother late Tuesday afternoon from Ottawa reads as follows: "Sincerely regret to inform you that Pte. James I. Welch, officially reported wounded slight, delayed, shock, further information follows when received."

From the telegram it would appear that Welch suffered shock when a bomb exploded and then carried on for some time, finally collapsing from the effect of the explosion. The message does not indicate that he is seriously hurt.

Welch was employed at the De Laval Company and was one of the first to enlist from this city. He was accepted during the latter part of September, 1939, and went to England in December of the same year. His father, who formerly conducted a plumbing shop in this city, is employed at Trenton airport.

A letter received by Welch's mother early in March revealed that he had burned his leg and foot in an accident and was in the hospital for three weeks of February. He is 25 years of age.

Woman In British Columbia Is Astounded At Service Given On Ordering Pattern

A little more than a month ago, Mrs. C. Gallagher of Park Street sent some papers to her mother, Mrs. E. E. Cox, of New Westminster, B.C. One of the papers contained a pattern which took the fancy of another former Peterborough woman, Mrs. C. P. Taber, who decided to have one for herself. She wrote the Examiner, and was astounded at the response.

"I got such a thrill out of the way my name and address were typed on the envelope containing the pattern," writes Mrs. Taber. "It included my maiden name in full...I wondered if it were someone who remembered me, perhaps an old George Street choir pal now in the Examiner who was interested enough to do that."

The letter continues, telling that several former Peterborough families now live in New Westminster, three ladies are associated, who used to sit "side by side in Brock Street rink at home." They are Mrs. William Nelson (Laura Turner), Mrs. Gordon Zoellner (Blanche Hart) and myself, formerly Mabel Chastity. The copies of the Examiner which go to her town, "are passed around from one to another until they are almost worn out, and although the familiar names are becoming fewer (I left in 1911) I have been back twice to renew old acquaintances."

W.M.S. Plans Easter Thankoffering Meeting

The first vice-president, Mrs. H. Alton, presided at the March meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Mark St. church in the absence of the president, Mrs. E. W. Rowland. After her opening prayer, Mrs. Alton read a beautiful poem on prayer. Sentence prayers for "our home, our church and our country" were offered by Mrs. Moore and the vice-president. The chief item of business was the planning of an Easter thankoffering meeting to be held in April, with an invitation extended to affiliated societies. Mrs. Alton presented a report of the concert held by the baby band this month, at which the sum of $18 was raised. After the singing of hymn, "O Worship the King," Mrs. Tinker, leader of Group C, read a paper on "Unselfishness, selfishness, loneliness and Friendship." Meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Hands Are First Line Of Defence

Dark and handsome — that's the way your nails will look this spring when they're at their smartest. It's new, it's fun, it's sophisticated, to wear them polished in dark-as-night tone with the sparkle of black jet.

Especially smart with black, this shade is good too with greens, blues, yellows. And it's definitely the polish shade to wear when you're "out sparkling." Sequins and paillettes, clip clusters and great splashes of costume jewelry, are adding sparkle this spring to everything we wear. With them, you need a deep, dark finger color—not a glaring red to add a too-competing sparkle of its own.

Applying Polish

Here are commands to help keep your fingers high in fashion rating: Use a base first and two coats of polish over it for really high lustre.

Dip fingertips in cold water after each coat, to "harden" polish before the next coat is applied.

Take that "minute to relax" just after polish has gone on. Polish lasts so much longer after a thorough drying—and you'll last longer if you take a minute or two to relax now and then.

If you have time to change your polish almost every day, keep five or six shades on tap to carry out special costume color schemes. If you haven't the time wear a clear rose or red that will point up any color scheme.

Sleep, Nature's Best Beauty Aid

Beauty and health experts agree that good sleeping habits make for clear, unlined skin, sparkling eyes, a more scintillating personality and a general feeling of well-being. Almost every adult should average between seven and eight hours of sleep each night, they insist. And these should be hours of deep, really restful sleep.

If possible, sleep without a pillow. Don't be a Spartan about this, however. The important thing is that you be comfortable. Sheets should be long enough to stay tucked. All bed covers should be aired every morning, the mattress turned over once a week and the pillows, minus their cases, left in the sunshine for an hour or two once a week. This may sound like a lot of trouble, but surely not too much to make really comfortable the place where you spend eight hours out of every 24, or, roughly, about a third of your life.

DO YOU KNOW . . .

A pillow case should measure two inches more than the distance around the pillow and at least six inches longer than the pillow after hemming.

This has for basic pattern a wall of bricks printed on the silk and upon them appear posters in brilliant colors which say "We shall not Flag or Fail," "Keep it Dark," and "Dig for Victory."

....That urged by a fervent patriotic desire to participate in Canada's war effort, the women of the congregations of the various United Churches are putting forth every effor in the Government's sale of War Savings Certificates.

....Many of them are following the church's plan, which has the slogan, "A Loan to My Country and a Gift to My Church." Through this plan it is possible to buy War Savings, thus helping Canada, and by earmarking them to the church they become its property at the end of seven and one half years.

FASHIONS

If you wear a larger size you'll welcome the comfort and becomingness of this new house frock. The panel front and easy fitting sleeves add to its practicality for every day wear. Made in crisp cotton with dainty white collar and ruffle trim it is a perfect dress to wear about the house as well as to market. A tie belt finishes the waist without cutting the flattering line of the slimming panel. Use this pattern to make a smart street frock, too. Plain or printed rayon crepe gives a completely dressed up air to this basically chic style.

Style No. 2796 is designed for sizes 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Sizes 42 requires 3¼ yards of 39-inch fabric with ⅝ yard of contrasting and 2½ yards of ruffling.

MAJOR projects of a humane, public or community character should promise outstanding success with gratifications, fulfillments of lofty ideals and aspirations, judging by the very interesting chain of astral figures. All pertaining to groups of a fraternal, political, diplomatic or welfare objective should flourish and be placed on enduring and lucrative foundations.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of rich rewards for service and fidelity to public or group interests, whether humanitarian, educational, political or fraternal order. All community interests should thrive under unusual stimuli.

A child born on this day should have many excellent talents and graces with intellectual and cultural ideals sustained by sane and solid principles which may place it securely in public appreciation.

Suds Bath For Woollens

This season's woollen sports wear is bright and gay. True flower shades shine as brightly on the skating pond and ski trails as in any summer garden. Most of these bright wools are beautifully tubbable. Unless special cleaning instructions are indicated, general rules for washing woollen materials should apply. Wash each color separately in mild, lukewarm suds. Work quickly. Douse garment in the suds several times, but do not rub on a board. Better results are obtained by using a second suds bath the same temperature as the first. Then rinse in at least three clear lukewarm rinses, squeezing, not wringing, out the water. Roll in a thick turkish towel to absorb excess water. If the article is small and does not require pressing, spread and dry on a flat surface. Do not dry near direct heat nor in freezing temperatures.

Madrigal Singers Present Usually Fine Programme

A peak of perfection that justifies the acclaim the Madrigal Singers and their well-known conductor, Dorothy Allan Park, have won for themselves in their own and other cities was reached Tuesday evening when this noted chorus of women's voices wove a glorious tapestry of song that, in the opinion of many, was one of the most superb and finished performance yet presented by this talented group. Comforting many a heart that has gone heavy these anxious days was the outpouring of emotion that only matchless song can express, and one felt a new surging of hope inspired by the sheer beauty of the matchless cadences, a challenge in the freshness, buoyancy and spiritual quality of the eloquent voices.

Assisting in this concert, which aroused in Peterborough music-lovers an even deeper appreciation for the musical accomplishments of a group of singers capable of making an enviable name for themselves throughout the province, were duo-pianists, Gordon Hallett and Clifford Poole of Toronto, whose teamwork was smooth and sympathetic, their sense of rhythm sure, their tone gorgeous. In addition, there were violin parts played by Stanley Northrop and R. Cecil Searles that added a final touch of perfection to the two madrigal offerings, "A Kiss I Begg'd" (John Gamble) and Edward Elgar's lovely "Fly, Singing Bird." Piano accompaniments were again by Harry Northrop, and again were expertly helpful and delightful.

The singers, lovely to look upon in pastel shaded gowns reminiscent of the first flowers of spring, were grouped in semi-circle around their leader, a graceful figure in simple white. They opened their Madrigals on the charming note of Thomas Arne's "Which is the Properest Day to Sing?" and in response to repeated applause added several sparking encores to an already colorful program. The performance was so rich in things beautiful that it seems ungracious to particularize. However, there was unusually warm audience re-action to the blithe and lyrical "In the Merry Month of May," and bursts of applause for the sixteenth century poem, "Ah! the Sighes that come fro' my Heart" (Anon), in which the forty or so voices blended in exquisite harmony, echoing away finally in an ecstasy of sound. In the eighteenth century air, "Golden Slumbers Kiss Your Eyes," one could think only of angel voices as the several groups, sopranos, contraltos, mezzos, were blended together in vocal beauty.

In the last group were heard a lilting rendition of Elgar's "Fly, Singing Bird"; the hushed and effective "Music, when Soft Voices Die," and in rollicking contrast, the amusing Gloucestershire folk song, "An Old Man Came Courting Me." Encores included a Scottish song with words by Robert Burns, "Ranting, Roving Robin"; "As Torrents in Summer" (Elgar), and the Irish folk tune, "A Celtic Lullaby." All the emotions of a nation at war were apparent in the closing three verses of God Save the King, sung with a fervence and reverence that touched the audience as nothing else could.

The two guest artists chose three Bach numbers in which to converse pianistically on their first appearance. Particularly in the composition "In Thee is Joy" did there seem to be a musical exchange of brave and beautiful ideas. In the second group were two-tone pictures, "Dance of the Miller" and "The Confession of a Sinner," in which skilled expressive technique was displayed. Franz Liszt' "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" was splendidly done, but it was in one of the encores, Benjamin's piquant "Jamaican Rumba" that these gifted pianists really hit their stride, leaving the audience begging for more.

The concert was held in the Collegiate Auditorum, and admirers of the Madrigal Singers from a number of outside points were noted in the audience.

Irwin-Crowe Wedding Is First In Carmel Church Up 54 Years

WARSAW, March 26 (ENS) — The first wedding to take place in Carmel church since it was built 52 years ago took place on Saturday afternoon, when Ross W. Irwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Irwin, Bobcaygeon, and Miss Norma Blanche Crowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Crowe, Clarina, Dummer, were married

The bride's wedding dress was of white embossed marquisette, finger tip veil, matching gloves and shoes, and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The matron of honor, Mrs. Joseph Skelton of Oshawa, wore a floor length gown of powder blue sheer, with blue hat and white accessories, and carried rose pink carnations. Mr. Oscar Irwin, Toronto, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Leslie Crowe.

The wedding march was played by Mr. Alvin Drain.

A reception afterwards was held at the bride's home, with Mrs. McNaughton, aunt of the bride, pouring tea. Waiters were Miss Marjorie Irwin, Miss Mary Crowe and Mr. Leslie Crowe.

The happy couple left on a motor trip to Toronto and points west; the bride travelling in a rose dress and matching accessories.

Those present from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Irwin, Mr. and Mrs. Bowen, Miss Marjorie Irwin and Mr. Wilburt Irwin, all of Bobcaygeon; Mr. Oscar Irwin, Toronto; Mrs. Joseph Skelton, Oshawa, and Mr. and Mrs. McNaughton, Peterborough.

Beauty Attracts Men, No Matter What Critics Say. Idea of Returning to the Laws of Eighteenth Century Will Never Get Far in Public Opinion.

A man who highly disapproves of the way the modern woman dresses wants to start a crusade for the re-enactment of the old English law of 1170, which decreed that: "Whosoever shall entice into the bonds of matrimony any male subject of Her Majesty by means of rouge, white paint, Spanish cotton, steel corsets, crinoline, high-heel shoes or false hips shall be prosecuted for witchcraft and the marriage declared null and void." Needless to say, a Bill to Deflate Feminine Pulchritude and Bring Women Back to Normalcy would have scant support in these days, when women possess the ballot and would vote en masse against any law that sought to put a crimp in their charms and thereby reduce their matrimonial chances, because men demand that women shall be easy on the eyes. There was a time when a woman was even as God made her, poor thing, and there was nothing she could do about it except devote her life to good works and being an example of the Christian virtues. If she was born with a shiny nose, stringy hair, a pallid complexion if she developed buck teeth and a lumpy figure as she grew older, there was no help for her. She just had to sit on the sidelines and grit her molars and watch her more fortunate sisters march by to the altar. But now, thanks to a merciful providence and the beauty shop—which deserves to be ranked among the major blessings of civilization—no woman need be as homely as she is. Feather beds can turn themselves into stringbeans at will. Lanky locks can be metamorphosed into ambrosial curls by a simple turn of the wrists. Sallow cheeks can grow roses at will and, presto, Plain Jane has become Glamorous Jeanne. And if this be witchcraft, make the most of it, and be glad of it.

Of course, many men honestly believe that what they admire is the natural woman, not the synthetic, made-up creatures with whom they are forced to consort. They are violently opposed to the use of paint and powder and almost, but not quite, ready to swear that the lips that touch lipstick shall never touch mine.

Theoretically they are strong for sensible dress in women. High-necked, red flannel underwear that will keep them warm in Winter; big, flat-heeled, roomy, comfortable shoes, and simple, well-made hats that will last three or four years, instead of all these crazy hairdos and flummery and sleazy stuff that they wear, and that kills them off in their early 80s.

No paints and Spanish cotton and steel corsets and false hips and high heels for them! But did you ever see men crowding around the woman who represented their ideal of naturalness?

Did you ever see one of them marrying the catch of the season? Isn't it little Goldilocks who entangles men in her curls? Isn't it the high-heeled satin slippers, not the No. 9 brogues, that have always walked over men? Yea, verily.

Undoubtedly the hard-boiled and unromantic old realists, who sought to protect their fellowmen from feminine wiles by passing a law prohibiting women from adorning themselves, knew what they were about. For there is a witchcraft in beauty, and women have always woven their spells about men with silken scarfs and flashing jewels and swishing skirts and putting perfume behind their ears.

Nor should men be criticized for this. Surely it is only common prudence for a man who knows that he is probably going to have to look at the same face across the breakfast table for the next 35 to 40 years to pick out one that he can contemplate with pleasure.

Also, it makes for stability of marriage for a man to have a living picture on his walls instead of a chromo, for as long as he is proud of his wife and likes to show her off there is no danger of his eyes getting to roaming.

Maybe the wife is no original masterpiece. Maybe her complexion comes out of the drug-store and her teeth are hers only by right of purchase. Maybe her hair is phony and her lissom figure due to her foundation garment, and her reputation for beauty really rests on her clothes.

It doesn't matter. How a woman achieves good looks is her own trade secret that she doesn't have to tell even her husband. Moreover, her good looks do not fade as the natural beauty's do. They last as long as the beauty shop does.

So let's be thankful for the Spanish cotton and the steel corsets and the permanent waves and all the rest of it that make so many homely women handsome.

Home and School Association News

PRINCE OF WALES SCHOOL

Speaking on subject of "Christian Education in the Home and in the School," Rev. C. C. Boyter addressed the March meeting of Prince of Wales Home and School Association. He outlined the course of religious instruction given from nine to nine-thirty in the schools one day each week, which is undenominational, with various ministers assigned to instruction. All individuals have equal rights in matters of religion, he said, and the primary right to educate the child along lines of religion belongs to parents. Instruction in the school must be purely voluntary, although the study of the Bible, Rev. Boyter maintains, offers a fine opportunity for education, filled as it is with valuable world history and the best in literature.

Mrs. S. S. Harrison, president, was in the chair for the meeting. A report of the Home and School Council meeting was given by Mrs. V. E. R. Zufelt.

A brief musical program included piano selections by Betty Fountain and Teddy Collins, and vocal solos by Mrs. Norman Hughes, with Mrs. H. G. Lewis at the piano.

CHAPTER 1

BEATRICE HUNTINGTON DAVENPORT was 20 years old. She had a shining, dark brown mink coat. She had a shining, black limousine. She had a chauffeur to drive it from one night club to another, from New York to Newport and down to the pier when she went off for a cruise.

She had a big white house on Indian Creek, in Miami Beach, Florida. She had a 10-room apartment here in New York, or Park Avenue, where three maids did nothing but wait on Beatrice. She had four room-size closets full of evening dresses, sports clothes, lounging pajamas, costume ensembles. There were racks full of shoes and shelves of hats.

She had a barrel of junk jewelry; an antique silver case that contained two diamond bracelets, a matched pearl necklace, half a dozen wrist watches and pin watches, a ruby and platinum brooch that separated into a pair of clips and a huge, square emerald ring.

Beatrice Huntington Davenport had stocks and bonds and real estate. And she had an immense, sprawling store that extended in a solid square from Fifth Avenue to Sixth. It was eight stories high, crammed to the doors with exactly the same sort of things Beatrice had at home—diamond bracelets and evening dresses, sofas and silver foxes, silk stockings and suede handbags.

Beatrice Huntington Davenport had, too, a trust company with huge, chased-bronze doors and acres of polished mahogany desks at which important looking men in conservative business suits sat—presumably managing the stocks and the bonds and real estate.

She had a tight-lipped man whose pictures appeared sometimes in the columns of morning newspapers (but she had never bothered to meet him herself) whom the trust company had appointed as general superintendent of the department store. Only this morning she'd seen his narrowed eyes looking out at her from the paper. "The Man Behind Huntington's" read the caption. Beatrice smiled.

The man behind Huntington's had always been—and was now, in his jealously laid down policies and far-sighted provisions—her grandfather, Michael Kingan Huntington.

Grandpa had founded Huntington's. He started by peddling pins and needles and shoelaces from a pack on his back. Then came a little store on Grand street. Cutting prices and indulging in practices

New Law Forbids Trustees Selling To Board

TORONTO, March 26—In introducing an amendment to the School Act in the Legislature yesterday, Hon. Harry Nixon, stated he was doing it owing to the absence of the Minister of Education, Hon. Duncan McArthur. Mr. Nixon stated that Mr. McArthur is so ill that there is considerable doubt if he will be able to attend during the present session.

One amendment states that when pupils leave a school to work in war industries or to enlist, their absence shall not be taken into account in calculating Provincial grants.

In the past a school trustee who is a merchant or a bookseller was permitted to sell books and other materials to the school, but a new section forbids this. The provision of the general law, which forbids an elected representative to have dealings with the body of which he is a member, will apply in future.

The minimum salary of a teacher in a rural school whereby the board may secure a township grant is raised from $500 to $600.

Township school trustees are to be allowed a mileage of 7 cents, provided they do not attend more than eight meetings a year.

MORE ABOUT—

long line of accomplishments which you, in your five years with us, effected, not for yourself, but for God and Holy Mother the Church. As pastor and healer of souls you moved among all, without discrimination, dispensing the sweet balm of the sacraments, and proferring your own wise and friendly counsel. On the material side of our parish life, you have been able, by administrative economy and good business acumen, to reduce our financial indebtedness considerably.

Not the least noteworthy of your achievements in Peterborough, dear Father, has been your active and sustained interests in civic affairs and all things pertaining thereto. By your several public utterances, always well received, and by your associations with charitable and philanthropic endeavors you have taught us that next to being a thorough-going Catholic, one should be a good citizen.

Nor was the field of education left unnoticed by your liberal concern in things. Rather it was enhanced by your own studious example and your efforts to instil a love of higher education in the hearts and minds of our children. On this point we are not unmindful of, but indeed proud, because of the honor bestowed upon you by the University of Ottawa a few years ago when that institution conferred upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

In bidding you a fond farewell, we promise that memory shall never efface the recollection of your priestly zeal, your kind and friendly spirit and delightful and infectious vein of humor which ran in your being.

More than this, too, we promise you a continuous remembrance in our prayers to the end that God may continue to visit you with His graces and blessings and that aided by them you may yet achieve greater things for Him, for His Holy Church, and for the salvation of souls.

This gift which we ask you to accept is all too inadequate to express our affection to you, dear Father, and our best wishes for continued success. May it, though, be a meagre but fond remembrance of your devoted friends of St. Peter's Cathedral."

Dr. Kelly's Reply

In replying to the several addresses and acknowledging the gifts which had been presented to him, Rev. Dr. Kelly said he was grateful to everyone "for your charitable views of myself. It would be conceit if I were to take credit for what has been done at the Cathedral in the last five years."

Passing to reminiscence of his successive pastorates, Dr. Kelly touched his memories with characteristic humor. He recalled that after his ordination he had suggested to the late Bishop R. A. O'Connor that he might be sent into the missionary field in the northern section of the old diocese of Peterborough because he seemed stronger than another young priest whose ordination took place at the same time.

"During those fourteen months I think I remember most clearly their two long winters. And one day a man was passing in front of the church. It was very cold, and his nose was entirely white. I told him to rub snow on it, and afterward to go into the church because it was not so warm in the house. And after he had rubbed out the frostbite he said to me, "Thank you, Father, I hope to do the same for you some day."

Reca'ls Havelock

Father Kelly said he was recalled to Peterborough for a time, and then began his journeying. "This is my eighth charge, and so one who has been in eight parishes comes to feel at least that he is a good substitute, like the fellow on the ball team who can be used behind the bat or in the field or on the bases. I was at Wooler for six months, and was then sent to Norwood and Havelock. I shall always remember those railwaymen at Havelock. I like to think of one occasion when I was invited to ride in the caboose, for the experience, from Havelock to Smith's Falls, but as the railwayman had a reputation as being a fast driver I decided not to accept that invitation."

Dr. Kelly's next charge was at Parry Sound, a pastorate with sixteen little communities to be visited, and on his leaving there the Indians of the place took him into their band and gave him an Indian name. "And when I got into Germany in the last war a woman asked me if all the Canadians were white men like myself, because she thought they were mostly Indians in our country. I did not tell them that I was probably the only one of them then in Germany who could boast of having an Indian name."

"And when I got back from Germany, Bishop O'Brien said to me, "Well you have had a grand holiday." Just think of that.

Next at Victoria Road I was introduced to rural life and learned to milk a cow. I had no plan in all this travelling about; just to do God's will, and not wanting any particular parish. I was able to build the first church in honor of Blessed Margaret Mary and to pay for it on the day of her canonization. I also dedicated the chapel in the residence of Sir William Mackenzie.

His Stay At Hastings

Dr. Kelly's next transfer was to Hastings, a delightful parish in which he hoped he could settle down. But four years later Bishop Dennis O'Connor remarked one day in Peterborough, "What about coming up here?" Really, I had cautiously tried to anticipate anything like that by remarking to the Bishop one day that it was a foolish thing to put old men in charge of big parishes; they should be younger men, I said, but his answer was that they always had good assistants. I always did, until I came to Peterborough, and here I had excellent ones. When I came to the Cathedral I said to Bishop O'Connor that whatever the results it was all his fault, but we got along pretty well in Peterborough. God has His own way of doing things. It is not because so-and-so plants and another waters, but it is the One who gives the plant growth that counts."

Dr. Kelly concluded with a reference to Cobourg where he expected in a few years to see ocean liners passing up and down the lake. "I have often felt that if there was any place in the diocese to which I should like to go it was Cobourg. The priest is always elevated by the people of his congregation and not by his own work. You can't stand on air. The people are the foundation, and it is by their co-operation that he gets his elevation."

Social Kindness

"In leaving St. Peter's and Peterborough I wish to say that I have received a great many kindnesses. It is a habit of mine to walk a great deal. You might be surprised to know the number of persons who would stop their cars and invite me to hop in and let them give me a lift. It was always a pleasant experience, showing a kindly and thoughtful spirit. I wish to thank the congregation of St. Peter's and the young priests who have been my assistants."

Dr. Kelly also expressed his gratitude to the support he had received from Bishop O'Connor, and also the members of the school board. "It is a remarkably efficient board. In the five years I never heard a complaint of careless expenditure. They have just one purpose, that the children shall get the best education which can be reasonably expected."

The program included several vocal solos by Miss Ross and Miss Phyllis Cowie, and concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

Bombs Rain On London, But London Can Still Be Gay

Youngest daughter of Britain's Prime Minister, Mary Churchill, refused to let an air raid warning spoil her enjoyment of the Queen Charlotte debutantes' ball. These pictures show her as she indulged in a merry Churchill laugh, adjusted an earring and powdered her nose. Miss Churchill is one of the dozens of London girls whose official debuts were cancelled by the war. Proceeds of this ball went to provide hospital care for the wives of men on active service.

Unhappy Partner a Hint to Get Dance Diagrams

Girls Will Avoid Him!

"Can I bear it?" she thinks, as he fox-trots all over her feet. And her unhappy look tells other smart girls to avoid him like the plague!

If he'd only learn his steps really well, find out how to lead! Many a former stumbler has learned by practise — with diagrams showing him the steps for each dance.

Counting 1 AND 2, (1) step forward diagonally on left foot, (AND) quickly close right foot up to left, (2) step forward on left foot. Now repeat, starting with right foot.

To lead properly—girls, are you listening, too?—remember that the man relaxes his right arm in stepping forward, then indicates any change of direction by a turn of his shoulders or a pressure of his hand.

Know a few points like these and your partners look proud instead of sorry to dance with you!

Our 32-page booklet explains technique of graceful dancing, gives clear diagrams and instructions for fox-trot, waltz, slow fox-trot, Conga, tango, rumba and shag. Basic steps, variations.

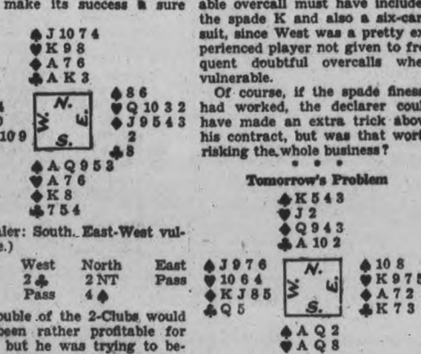
Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOME COURSE IN NEW BALLROOM DANCES to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT "PURE VELVET"

"THEY EITHER gain you a trick, or they fail to gain you a trick, but they can't lose one," said a fair player the other day in explaining finesses to a neophyte. But the very next hand proved the fallacy of that. Following it resulted in the defeat of an otherwise air-tight contract. The plain fact is that plenty of finesses entail a risk of your entire enterprise, whereas refusal of them might make its success a sure thing.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

A double of the 2-Clubs would have been rather profitable for North, but he was trying to become declarer, although he had four spades for his partner. South finally got the contract anyway, and then proceeded to lose it by his inexperience.

West led the club Q to dummy's A, and the declarer proceeded immediately to his fatal mistake. He led the spade J and finessed it to West's K. The club 9 was returned to the K and East ruffed with his spade 8. This set the contract because there was no way to avoid a loser in clubs and one in hearts.

All that South had to do to make his contract was to play to the spade A immediately after winning the club lead, and then another spade, which would have made the defenders trumpless. A more experienced declarer would have reckoned that West's vulnerable overcall must have included the spade K and also a six-card suit, since West was a pretty experienced player not given to frequent doubtful overcalls when vulnerable.

Of course, if the spade finesse had worked, the declarer could have made an extra trick above his contract, but was that worth risking the whole business?

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

If South opens this deal with 1-Club, what response by North is best calculated to fit the various possible holdings his partner might possess?

which made his competitors choke, Grandfather had seen the little store on Grand street grow into an Emporium on Fourteenth—and at last into this imposing Huntington's which was a New York landmark.

Lastly, Beatrice Huntington Davenport had Mr. Curtis Weeming, who was small and bald and 73 years old. Mr. Weeming was given to rubbing his hands and bleating piteously. Mr. Weeming—theoretically—managed Beatrice.

RIGHT now, in his office on the 45th floor of a skyscraper on Rockefeller Plaza, Mr. Curtis Weeming was wringing—not rubbing—his dry little hands. Mr. Curtis Weeming was pleading, "But Miss Davenport, this is incredible! Miss Davenport, I must protest! Miss Davenport, I simply cannot allow—"

He took a deep breath. "Miss Davenport, your grandfather would not have approved!" This was the most solemn sentiment Mr. Weeming could possibly utter. "I worked for your grandfather for 30 years, I knew his mind as no one else could possibly—and I am certain—"

"Nuts, Mr. Weeming!" said Beatrice Huntington Davenport. She sat in a brown leather chair, with her slim silken knees crossed. The mink coat was carelessly thrown back. A cunningly contrived toque knot of mink perched on her golden curls, and her red lips smiled. "You tell those armor-clad knights behind those chromium grilles in that trust company to pay that check—and pay it now! Clarence must have those polo ponies. This delay is silly!"

Clarence, you see, was her fiance. The rest of his name was Fernando di Grandezzi. Clarence was dark, and tall, and fascinating.

Clarence not only had to have these polo ponies, but he had also acquired, in the last few weeks, a long and speedy racing car; a cigaret case the twin of the one in Beatrice's handbag; and some dozens of custom tailored suits about which Mr. Weeming was still debating. Had Beatrice actually ordered these for Clarence—or had Clarence ordered them for Beatrice?

Mr. Weeming knew that Beatrice saw nothing unusual about the gifts of cars and airplanes. But clothes? He wriggled uncertainly. He had no way of knowing Clarence's superb delicacy. No way of visualizing the suave, finished manner in which Clarence indicated his latest needs. All Mr. Weeming knew was that Beatrice paid for things. Casually, matter-of-factly, constantly.

Another thing Mr. Weeming didn't know was that any girl to whom Clarence was likely to be engaged would have automatically supplied the same things. Because, otherwise Clarence wouldn't be engaged to marry her. Beatrice understood that. It didn't matter.

TWO months ago, Beatrice had first laid eyes on Clarence. He was so different from the men she'd always known! He had manners, for one thing. He kissed her hand. He bowed from the waist. He had an accent—slight, and husky, and Continental. Also, Clarence was a realist. He did not, as the sons of grandfather's business associates, take for granted the fact that money was an evil—that one must be apologetic about mentioning it, about spending it.

Nor did Clarence resemble those other men she knew — the ones who were poor but proud and worked very hard at blueprints so they might eventually build bridges; or grubbed along in some dingy office, so that some day they'd be a third vice president. No. Clarence said, with engaging frivolity, "A million dollars, theese is not saved out of a pittance, eh? What I could earn, it would be pathetic. Me, I prefer visiting. My hostesses have invariably been so lovely! How was it, I did not see you in Hawaii?"

The Frothinghams had just returned from Hawaii, where Clarence had been their house guest. Beatrice knew that Clarence was supposed to be the property of Mimi Frothingham. So she said, "I wasn't there, but I'm here now."

And his black eyes looked down into hers while they danced. Mimi Frothingham frowned, from the side lines. And two hours later, Mimi Frothingham was searching for Clarence in a fury. But Beatrice and Clarence were in a silver airliner. Flying to Havana. To see a horse race. To play roulette. To become engaged to be married.

The magnificent emerald in Beatrice's jewel case was Clarence's, actually. "To sell it—how foolish!" he explained. "A family heirloom—we are of the Pazzi, you understand—the stone has a history, a lineage. But for a betrothal ring—what an investment!"

LEARNING of her engagement, Mr. Curtis Weeming had done everything but weep. He went all the way to Florida when she returned from Havana, to falter, "This isn't wise, Miss Davenport." He was a man who always grimly did his duty. "Your grandfather always made it perfectly clear what sort of man he expected you to marry. He warned me to be firm on that point! He wanted you to marry a business man. A man who could conserve, even increase, the Huntington estate."

"But, it's the Davenport estate now. Besides, he should have put that in his will."

"Your grandfather always said positively you had enough of his blood to be practical!" wailed Mr. Weeming. "Oh, Miss Davenport, when I remember how he used to say, 'She's got my chin! She's no weakling, that girl. No pretty-boy's going to flim-flam her—she won't go marrying any counts or duke and figure in any divorce suits'—"

His voice broke, Michael Huntington had not only been his best friend, but his idol, as well. "You must realize, Beatrice, that you need a husband who will be able to take over the reins of management after—er—" He looked at her beseechingly. After he was gone—

But Beatrice said, "Pooh! You'll be here, lecturing on thrift to my grandchildren, you old fake!"

Mr. Weeming's long and doleful countenance became even more dolorous. "I—er—I'm certain you—you have not given all the facts much thought. If you continue in this manner, Beatrice—if you insist on marrying this—this Clarence—your grandchildren may not—er—may not be possessed of very much of this world's goods for me to manage!"

Beatrice laughed outright. "That will be just dandy! Grandfather always said it will be more fun to be poor. Made a man of him. He said there was no percentage in never having any battles to fight. Bred the spine right out of the best families. Remember?"

Mr. Weeming thought of Clarence, whose grandchildren these would be, too, and shuddered.

Now, in the office high above Rockefeller Plaza, he was shuddering again. Beatrice was blazing away about that check. He said, "This is a tremendous expenditure. Totally unnecessary. Unjustified. An investment that is not only extreme, but that deteriorates half an hour after you have made it. What could be realized on a string of polo ponies should you er—decide to liquidate?"

"Nuts!" said Beatrice again. "Now look here. Clarence called me from Westbury, upset because those ponies were not in their stalls. Will you please see that my check is honored at once?"

She drew herself up, shrugging into the mink coat, and Mr. Weeming thought suddenly that for all its feminine roundness, her grandfather had been right about her chin. It was, indeed, alarmingly reminiscent of old Mike's. "I'm becoming seriously annoyed with you, Mr. Weeming."

NEW YORK, Mar. 26 — (CP). — The National Broadcasting Company Monday night its Athens commentator, Peter Tompkins, apparently had been prevented by censorship from making a scheduled broadcast from the Greek capital.

NBC said Tompkins was not cut off the air, but apparently had been prevented from speaking after saying "Hello, New York." NBC announced cancellation of the scheduled talk as apparently due to censorship difficulties.

Plan Building Armed Ships On Great Lakes

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—The United States announced yesterday an agreement with Canada which permits both nations to build and arm naval vessels in Great Lakes shipbuilding plants.

Climaxing negotiations in progress for nearly two years, the two countries agreed on a new interpretation of the Rush-Bagot treaty of 1817 governing naval operations and armaments in the Great Lakes area.

The agreement followed a new accord sent ot Congress last week for an immediate start on the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway and power development.

This was urged as an immediate defence project to provide additional Hydro-Elecric power and open the Great Lakes shipbuilding facilities for construction of both naval and cargo ocean-going craft.

Under the new shipbuilding arrangement, warships may be built in the Great Lakes area with full armaments but the latter must be placed "in such condition as to be incapable of immediate use while the vesels remain in the Great Lakes."

Four Conditions.

These four conditions were laid down in the agreement for all naval construction in that area:

1. The vessels are not intended for service on the Great Lakes.

2. Prior to start of construction, each Government must furnish the other with full information concerning any vessel to be constructed at Great Lakes ports.

3. The armaments of the vessels must be placed in such condition as to be incapable of immediate use while the vessels remain in the Great Lakes.

In broadening the more than century-old agreement to permit construction and arming of naval vessels in the Great Lakes area, the Canadian Government pointed out the desirability of equipping the vessels with armaments while in Great Lakes yards because of congestion in Atlantic seaboard shipyards.

Canada declared it is desirable to have the vessels "in the most complete form practicable while still on the Great Lakes," explaining that this might involve "equipment with gun mounts and with guns which would be so dismantled as to be incapable of immediate use so long as the vessels remained in the Great Lakes."

The two Governments decided that instead of revising the 1817 agreement, they would broaden it to meet special problems through concurrence in interpretation.

The State Department in announcing the agreement released an exchange of correspondence between the two Governments dating back to June 9, 1939.

Set Seal On Bond Of Friendship

With a hearty handclasp, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and Wendell Willkie further cemented the bond of unity and friendship between two great democratic nations when they met for dinner in Toronto. Willkie was driven to the club by Gordon F. Perry, who acted as his host throughout the day. The U.S. Ambassador of goodwill also chatted with Sir William Mulock and Premier Hepburn. The latter shook hands with Premier King and the two statesmen enjoyed a cordial conversation.

Billion Tax Levy

appropriation — the largest single money bill ever before the House of Commons—could be obtained by a compulsory, interest-free loan levied upon those able to subscribe.

The New Democracy group, first through its leader, John Blackmore, and later through Victor Quelch, member for Acadia, offered subamendments which would empower the government to have the Bank of Canada issue, without interest, whatever amounts were necessary apart from that obtained through taxation and sale of war savings certificates.

The sub-amendments were in conflict with rules of the House and were out of order, as was Mr. Coldwell's first motion. But when the bill was up for third reading Mr. Coldwell moved a second amendment which stood the test of procedure rules.

Move Is Lost 167 to Eight

This amendment, which left the word "compulsory" but provided for interest-free loans to be "levied" on those able to subscribe, was subject of the first division of the House since the present session resumed Feb. 17.

It was defeated by a vote of 167 to eight. Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity North Battleford) voted with seven C.C.F. members against the combined government, Conservative and New Demomracy groups.

On the main motion to give the bill third reading there was no demand for a division, although there were a few shouts of "nay."

Shortly before the bill passed Prime Minister Mackenzie King made a statement in which he replied to criticism that Canada's war effort was not all it should be—particularly from those who might think Canada was not doing as much as the United States was being asked to do under terms of the lend-lease bill for aid to Britain.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East) joined with Mr. Coldwell in the latter's efforts to obtain approval of the idea of a compulsory, interest free loan.

Mr. MacInnis assured the House his group was convinced every effort should be made to achieve victory over the present enemies of democracy and would not oppose the appropriation.

But to say that "we are all making sacrifices and that we are all in the front line" was, to use the language of the street, "all hooey."

He told of an elderly Regina woman who had an income of $20 a month and pledged to buy one war savings certificate a month at the sacrifice of one meal a day. On the other side of the picture Mr. MacInnis placed a newspaper account of a man in Vancouver building a $100,000 home with 15 bedrooms, game rooms in the basement and many luxuries.

"Disgraceful Examples"

"If the sacrifice made by the old lady in Regina was a gracious one, the lack of sacrifice on the part of the man building this home is a disgraceful example at a time when we are all said to be in the front line," Mr. MacInnis declared.

Finance Minister Ilsley said that while the latest proposed amendment by Mr. Coldwell left out the word "compulsory" it would have that effect because "if we were to attempt to borrow $1,300,000,000 or even a small part of that sum without agreeing to pay interest we would not get the money on a voluntary basis."

It would not be possible to have voluntary, interest-paying loans and compulsory, interest-free loans at the same time, Mr. Ilsley said.

"The effect of announcing that a substantial sum of money was going to be levied from the people by way of forced loan would be that it would be practically useless for us to appeal for voluntary loans because all the enthusiasm, all that spirit of democratic co-operation to which we appeal, and appeal very successfully, would dry up," he added.

"Only for raising money but not for people to fight," Mr. MacInnis interjected.

"I do not want to be dragged off my line of argument," Mr. Ilsley commented, and Mr. MacInnis retorted:

"That is not dragging you off; it is setting you right."

Then Mr. Ilsley said the temptation was too great and he would drop his line of argument to deal with Mr. MacInnis' comment of men and money.

Limited Call On Men

"It is true that we have conscription of men in this country, but... to a very limited extent," he said. "The conscription of human beings is far less than the percentage of conscription of wealth."

Taxation was now proceeding at the rate of $900,000,000 a year and would be at the rate of "something over $1,00,000,000" in the next fiscal year.

That, the minister said, "is real conscription of wealth because there is no obligation to repay," and he added:

"We have one of the most steeply graduated systems of taxation in the world, much more so in the higher incomes than has been the case in the United Kingdom all through the years."

The minister gave figures showing the amounts payable in certain income brackets. A person in British Columbia drawing $20,000 a year would pay $8,895 in dominion and provincial taxes. In the same province a man drawing $500,000 would pay $492,230.

"To honorable gentlemen who think we are running this government for the benefit of the rich I would recommend a perusal of that table," the minister said after giving other figures.

"I am a little surprised," he commented later, "at this group (the C.C.F.) which is so strong on freedom and liberty rushing so quickly to compulsion in this very important matter."

He declared an announcement that people were to be compelled to lend their money to the government would mean a rush to withdraw savings and consequent hoarding of currency or hoarding of goods.

70 p.c. Of Cheese Expected From Ontario

TORONTO, March 25.—(CP)—Ontario is expected to produce 70 per cent. of the 112,000,000 pounds of cheese Canada has guaranteed to export to the United Kingdom this year, according to C. E. Lackner, head of the Dairy Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

"Britain will get the 112,000,000 pounds—even though we might have to go a little short on our own supply," said Mr. Lackner. Whether there would be a home shortage or not "depends on the weather as much as anything," he explained.

"Canada will have to produce 152,000,000 to meet home and export demand for 1941," said Mr. Lackner. The Ontario producer will get approximately three cents more per pound this year than he got last year, he added. Government subsidy accounts for most of this.

Halifax Seeks

Establishment of a new international order could not be accomplished by one nation, the ambassador declared. As far as Britain was concerned, "we for our part are prepared to join hands with any state which genuinely seeks the peace and prosperity of the world."

Th British commonwealth of nations "has taught us that nations differing greatly in numbers and wealth, in race and social structure, can yet freely associate together.

"What has been possible for them is not impossible for others and the British commonwealth, by the quality of its resolution, is the bastion of world defence to-day may well, by its geographical dispersion, become the bridge of greater world unity to-morrow."

Lord Halifax touched on the "steady drawing together of the thought" of the United States and Britain and "as the struggle has grown more intense, reason and conscience have combined to make us both realize even more clearly the dark menace of things that are equally precious to your country and mine."

army, on the same comparative basis, since Canada has 250,000.

Stepping in 18 Months

He continued:

"It is only 18 months since we entered the war. Yet, in that year and a half, our armed forces have grown to the point where today, in the three services, there are a quarter of a million men on active service. I might add that this figure does not include 175,000 additional men enrolled in the reserve army, who are subject to call for the defence of Canada.

"A Canadian Army Corps, Canadian destroyers, and Canadian air squadrons are sharing in the defence of Britain. Our navy and our air force are doing their part to keep open the vital sea lanes of the North Atlantic. Canadian garrisons in Iceland, Newfoundland and the West Indies are on guard in the outposts of this continent. Canadian engineers are strengthening the defences of Gibraltar.

"In recent months we have also sent overseas hundreds of radio mechanics for vital defence duties with the Royal Air Force.

"The Canadian navy, which had only 15 ships when war broke out now has over 180.

"Nearly 60 military training camps are distributed across the country. In these camps, the soldiers in our active army, and the young men called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act to prepare them for the defence of Canada, are now training side by side.

"Some 90 establishments of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan are already in operation. In addition, facilities are being provided for the training schools of the Royal Air Force under the jurisdiction of Canada's Air Ministry.

"It is for the maintenance and expansion of this military program that the present appropriation is being voted. The Minister of Finance (Hon. J. L. Ilsley) has already told the House that he expects the appropriation to be exceeded, and that his best estimate at present is that, in the next fiscal year, Canad's direct war effort will cost the Canadian people $1,450,000,000."

Canada Paying Shot.

Canada is paying the entire cost of three air squadrons already in Britain, Mr. King said.

"But as Canada is bearing the major portion of the cost of the British commonwealth air training plan, the United Kingdom, on its part, will maintain in the field Canadian pilots and airmen graduated from the plan.

"What I have said up to the present relates to Canada's outright national contribution as a belligerent. It is being paid for in full by the Canadian people.

"It is not something that has been leased to Britain. It is not something that is being lent to Britain. It is a direct contribution by Canada to the cause of freedom."

In common with the United States, Mr. King said, Canada is an arsenal of democracy. Since the war began the British and Canadians governments have undertaken capital advances of over $380,000,000 for the expansion and equipment of Canadian industry: New plants have been built; old plants extended to make the complex instruments of war, many of which were never before made in this country.

"We have every right to take pride in our industrial expansion Canadian labor and Canadian industry have responded splendidly.

"We have been building an aircraft industry from the ground up. We have already built over 50 small naval vessels and more are being built. We are turning out motor transport vehicles at the rate of hundreds a day.

Production Ever Widening.

"We are producing universal carriers, Bren and Colt Browning machine guns, trench mortars, bombs for aircraft, great quantities of shells and ammunition, a wide range of chemicals, electrical apparatus and radio equipment, many other types of essential manufactured goods, large quantities of base metals and alloys, and an increased output of steel.

"We will shortly begin to produce field guns, and before the year ends naval guns, anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns and Lee Enfield rifles. The production of tanks and of cargo vessels is already under way. Plans are also being made to build destroyers in Canada."

Mr. King said that the expansion of production already had been reflected in the absorption of between 330,000 and 350,000 additional men in industrial employment since the outbreak of war. The armed forces and industry will make additional demands estimated at over 300,000 men in the coming year.

Big Munition Contribution

"Perhaps the best illustration I can give of the magnitude of the indirect contribution by Canada to the war is to say that, over and above what is being appropriated for our direct war effort, we expect, during the next 12 months, to send to Britain approximately $1,500,000,000 worth of munitions of war, raw materials and agricultural products," the Prime Minister said.

"Britain, of course, cannot herself find all the necessary dollars with which to pay for her enormous purchase of Canadian products. For the new fiscal year, Britain's deficit in her balance of payments with Canada is now estimated at over $1,150,000,000.

"Canada must provide Britain with the Canadian dollars to meet this deficit, either by purchasing Canadian securities now held in Britain or by the accumulation of Sterling balances.

"In this connection, it may interest the House to know that from September 15, 1939, to the end of February this year, the United Kingdom's deficit with Canada amounted to approximately $737,000,000.

"Of this deficit, Canada provided 45 per cent by the repatriation of securities and 21 per cent by the accumulation of sterling balances in London, while only 34 per cent was met by the transfer of gold.

"During the six months' period ending Feb. 28 last, Britain's deficit with us was $359,000,000 and Canada financed the whole of that deficit except for $65,000,000 which was covered by gold shipments. Since the early part of December, no gold has been received from the United Kingdom...

All For Payment

"I wish, however, to emphasize the fact that whatever gold, or United States exchange, Britain makes available to Canada is for one purpose only, and that purpose is to enable Canada to make payments to the United States for war purchases.

"The gold, or its equivalent, assists Canada in meeting our exchange deficit with the United States, but it does not decrease by one dollar the net amount which must be raised from the Canadian people in taxes and loans.

"To meet the total burden upon the Canadian people of our direct war effort and our indirect effort in the form of financial assistance to the United Kingdom during the next fiscal year will, according to the best estimates which can now be made, require almost 44 per cent of our national income."

An 80-Foot Dive

Toronto, March 26 (CP)

A VIGOROUS blow with a hatchet gave Bobby Mackien, 14, of Toronto, a prolonged icy bath late yesterday when he broke the key block in an ice pack and the resultant flood swept him, totally submerged, 80 feet through a culvert.

With Kenneth Harkness, 13, he was playing on ice floes jammed against the culvert under his home street in North York township. When he chopped the ice, the whole pack rushed into the underground channel and the torrent sucked him in. Young Harkness, up to his neck in water, tried to grab him but was unsuccessful.

He climbed out and summoned asistance. Michael McLauchlin, Toronto, ran down the gully where the culvert emerged and caught Bobby after he shot out of the pipe, face downwards. The boy was revived by artificial respiration and taken home.

Bill Is Signed By F.D.R. Aboard Yacht

Vast Aid Fund Begins Mushrooming Munition Industry

ABOARD U.S.S. XENSON AT SEA, March 27.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, aboard the yacht Potomac on a fishing-vacation cruise, signed the $7,000,000,000 British aid appropriations bill at 11:50 a.m. EDT today.

His action makes the huge fund immediately available to establish the United States as the "arsenal" of nations fighting aggression.

Accentuating the record-breaking speed with which Congress voted the money, the Bill was sent by airplane to the President's yacht cruising in Florida waters a few hours after legislative action was completed Tuesday. Bad weather, however, delayed delivery until today.

Even before the signature made the measure final, defence officials were bending to the task of chanelling the funds into America's mushrooming munitions industry.

In its broad outlines, the Bill earmarked the fund in the following categories and amounts:

$1,343,000,000 for ordnance, armor and ammunition; $2,054,000,000 for such vitally-needed weapons as bombing and pursuit planes; $362,000,000 for tanks, armored cars and other motor vehicles; $629,000,000 for ships and all types of water craft; $752,000,000 for new plant facilities needed to turn out the materials; $200,000,000 for repairing British war vessels and other defence equipment; $1,350,000,000 for agricultural, industrial and other commodities, including such things as cotton and tobacco and $260,000,000 for miscellaneous military equipment and supplies.

E-Boats Whipped

London, March 27 (CP)

BRITAIN'S preoccupation with the battle of the Atlantic has not diminished her vigilance over the sea routes of the North Sea.

An Admiralty communique last night disclosed that British naval vessels escorting convoys in that sea had repulsed a series of night attacks by German torpedo boats, probably destroying several of them.

A German aircraft attacking another North Sea convoy was shot down by the destroyer Versatile, the plane receivng a hit full "in the nose" from the ship's guns.

British Troops Take Key City Of Eritrea

CAIRO, Egypt, March 27.—(AP).— British troops have entered Cheren, key city of Eritrea, it was officially announced to-night.

It was also announced that British forces had entered Harar, walled city 25 miles from the all-important Addis Ababa-Jibuti railway in Ethiopia.

Cheren, strongest point of Italian resistance in East Africa, had been under siege by British forces for weeks, defended by 35,000 Italian troops.

This mountain town dominates the railroad running to Asmara, the Eritrea capital 42 miles to the southwest.

Asmara and Massaua, Eritrea's only big seaport, are the next objectives of the British drive through this oldest of Italy's East African colonies.

Canada Pledges To Protect Newfoundland

LONDON, March 27—(CP Cable).—Protection of Newfoundland is established as an "integral feature" of Canada's defence scheme in a protocol clarifying the application of the Anglo-American bases agreement to Canada's eastern neighbor.

At 10 Downing Street Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner; L. B. Pearson of Canada House, and Commodore L. W. Murray of the Royal Canadian Navy signed a document guaranteeing Canadian interest in the protection of Britain's oldest colony.

The agreement between the United States and Great Britain governing the leasing of defence bases in the western hemisphere also was signed.

The document to which Canada was a party is regarded as a powerful demonstration of Canadian-American goodwill, and United States recognition of Canada's place in th northern part of the continent.

The Canadians, who had attended the negotiations leading up to the conclusion of the general basis agreement, signed the protocol in the Cabinet room while cameras recorded the scene.

Jap, Nazi Use English In Plot Talk

Ribbentrop Explains Tongue Allowable With Intimate Friend

BERLIN, March 27—(AP).—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka of Japan called on Hitler today and they were reported to have engaged in "thorough-going conversations" covering questions confronting the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis.

The Japanese saw Hitler after conferring for several hours with Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, which an official announcement said produced "full understanding on all problems of the three-power pact."

Ribbentrop spoke in English, in contrast to his use of German in his talk with Sumner Welles, United States Undersecretary of State, on the latter's visit here in March, 1940.

The explanation was that, in the case of an intimate friend, one can use English even in wartime.

When it was pointed out that Ribbentrop declined to address Mr. Welles in English, an authorized source rejoined: "One can hardly claim Mr. Welles as a special friend."

Last Minute News

OTTAWA—It was announced here this afternoon that J. F. R. Douglas of Campbellford had been named census administrator for Northumberland; Ronald B. Baxter of Port Hope for Durham; Robert Bristol of Madoc for Hastings-Peterborough; Col. Roscoe Vanderwater of Foxboro for Hastings South; A. A. McClellan of Peterborough city for Peterborough West; George L. Edmunds of Oshawa for Ontario County, and Charles E. Williams of Lindsay for Victoria riding.

NEW YORK — (AP). — The National Broadcasting Company announced it heard the German radio to-day call "particular attention to a statement which it claimed had been issued to-day by the official Yugoslav news agency, Avala, stating that this coup d'etat is a purely internal affair and will have no bearing upon the foreign policy of the Yugoslav Government."

MACLEOD, Alta, March 27—(CP).—The second graduation class of No. 7 service flying training school at this southwestern Alberta town received their wings yesterday.

Predicts New Regime Will Repudiate Its Axis Agreement

LONDON, March 27—(CP).—Prime Minister Churchill predicted today that the new Yugoslav Government would repudiate the country's past with the Axis.

"Though I don't know what will happen and one cannot be sure of anything," he said, "I believe that it is reasonable to expect that we shall have a government in Yugoslavia which will repudiate the pact signed the day before yesterday and will be ready to defend the honor and frontiers of Yugoslavia against aggression."

Mr. Churchill spoke at a Trades Union Congress luncheon for John Winant, the United States Ambassador.

He said, "It was breaking all of our hearts to see the gallant Serbian and Yugoslav people signing away their souls over the counter by weak and cowardly rulers to those who once they had them in their grip would have shaken the life and independence out of them."

"I rejoiced when I heard just an hour before this luncheon that a revolution had taken place in Belgrade and that the Ministers who signed this pact had been arrested," the Prime Minister added.

End Nearer Than Expected?

"This is the time when we may have good hope of the result of this war. The final result is perhaps distant, but it may be much nearer than we suppose. You can't tell...

"I remember (in the last war) at the Ministry of Munitions being told that we were running short of this and that...but we went on and in the end the only thing we ran short of was Huns.

"One fine morning we went down to our offices to get on with the work of preparing for the campaign of 1919 and found they had all surrendered."

Mr. Churchill said that if the new Yugoslav Government repudiated the Axis pact Britain would recognize that government and continued that "Great Britain will give all the aid in her power to those who are defending their native lands, the Greeks, the Turks if they are attacked."

"We will give all the aid we can," he went on. "We are not as strong as we shall be when the plants have delivered their fruit, when the great factories have produced weapons, but still we get stronger every day. "We will give all the aid we can to those who are fighting to defend their freedom and their native land, and I am quite sure that the President of the United States will be actuated by the same generous feelings of sustaining those who are fighting to be free and according to the laws and constitution of the United States—and after all, as a great democratic leader he must move with the whole march of the nation—I am sure his sympathies and aid will also be extended in full measure to the Serbian people."

An Idea of Unity.

He said that Mr. Winant would get from today's meeting "a renewed sense of the true unity of this ancient land and of our resolve to march forward in harmony with the great American democracy until the barriers are broken and the path forward is clear again.

"It is a great pleasure to see Mr. Winant among us. It gives us the feeling that all President Roosevelt's men give me, that they would be shot stone dead rather than see this (Britain's) cause be let down."

A Royal Visit

Somewhere in England, March 27 (CP Cable)

BUGLES blared and a pipe band wailed a military welcome today as the King and Queen paid their first visit to the Canadian 2nd Division.

Everywhere the royal couple went during their six-hour tour thousands of Canadians broke their lines and circled the visitors, cheering them with tin hats hoisted on their rifles and waved wildly in the air.

The King took the cheers at the salute and the Queen smiled her thanks. Calls were made on every unit in the division by Their Majesties, who were accompanied by Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, general officer commanding the division, several colonels, and the divisional general staff.

Not Running Out On Fiancee Soldier Claims

LONDON, Ont., March 27—(CP).—Crown Counsel Norman Newton started cross-examination of gunner James B. McGuffin today at the active army soldier's murder trial. He is charged with shooting to death Charles Kennedy and George (Red) Stonehouse in a hotel beverage room February 24.

McGuffin said he was home in London on leave between Christmas and New Year's.

"Did you try to see Elva Saundercock at that time?" the Crown asked.

"Yes, I did. I saw her uptown but she was busy and I didn't have time to talk to her."

Miss Saundercock testified previously that in mid-February she obtained a court order against McGuffin naming him the father of her unborn child and providing for payments.

The Crown produced a letter dated November 28, 1940, and asked: "Wasn't that the last time you wrote to the girl?"

"I think I wrote later."

"Would you deny Miss Saundercock's evidence that it was the last letter you wrote her?"

"No I wouldn't."

Didn't Go To See Her

"After you had learned of her pregnancy, you wrote her in November but didn't go to see her when you went home on leave?"

"That's right."

"I suggest you were trying to avoid her, instead of trying to marry her, as you told the jury yesterday," pressed the Crown.

"That's not right," half-shouted McGuffin.

Mr. Justice Keiller Mackay asked McGuffin why he spent six days in Toronto before coming to London on his last leave in February.

"I don't know why I did," he replied.

"Had you any doubts you were the father of the girl's child?"

"Yes," was the answer.

Recalling defence evidence of one of McGuffin's army friends, Mr. Newton asked: "And he told you that this girl, at the age of 14, was the subject of an attack by her father"?

"Yes—but I didn't hold that against her."

"After seducing her, you were just trying to run out on the poor girl to make a cowardly attempt to avoid your responsibility?"

Declares Yugoslavia Has Found Soul In Her Revolution

LONDON, March 27—(CP).—Prime Minister Churchill declared today Yugoslavia has "found its soul" in "revolution" in Belgrade.

The Prime Minister, addressing a meeting of the Conservative Party Central Committee, declared:

"At this moment I have great news for you and the whole country.

"Early this morning the Yugoslav nation found its soul.

"A revolution has taken place in Belgrade and the ministers who but yesterday signed away the honor and the freedom of their country are reported to be under arrest.

"This patriotic movement arises from the wrath of a valiant and warlike race who had their country betrayed by the weakness of their rulers and the foul intrigues of the

"We may therefore cherish the hope—I speak of course only on information that has reached me—that a Yugoslav government will be formed worthy to defend the freedom and integrity of their country.

"Such a government in its brave endeavor will receive from the British Empire, and I doubt not in its own way from the United States, all possible aid and succor.

"The British Empire and its Allies will make common cause with the Yugoslav nation and we will continue to march and strive together until complete victory is won."

Then Mr. Churchill spoke of the Battle of the Atlantic and assured his listeners that "before many months are passed I shall be able to declare to you that it has been decisively won."

Some British Victories

The prime minister told the meeting that since the "dark hours" when the German Panzer divisions swept into France, Britain had scored "a series of notable victories."

"First of all there was the frustration of Hitler's invasion plan by the brilliant exploits of the Royal Air Force.

"Secondly, frustration of his attempt to cow and terrorize the civil population of this country by ruthless air bombing.

"Thirdly, we have the destruction of Italian power and empire in Africa by our armies there....

"But there is another supreme event more blessed than victories, namely the rising of the spirit of the great American nation and its ever more intimate association with the common cause.

"Much of that has been accomplished by the sentiments aroused in American breasts at the spectacle of courage and devotion shown by the

Washington Wires Congratulations On Courageous Step

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27—(AP).—The United States sent congratulations to-day to the new Yugoslavian Government and noted that President Roosevelt was empowered to assist nations seeking to preserve their independence.

LONDON, Mar. 27 — (CP). — Rumors circulated in London to-day that the first act of a new government reported to have been formed in Yugoslavia by King Peter II. and General Dusun Simovic was to reject Yugoslav adherence to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis.

Full British Aid.

LONDON, Mar. 27 — (CP). — Britain will back the new Yugoslav Government with her Navy, Army and Air Force to lay open the right flank of the German thrust into the Balkans, a reliable source declared to-day.

This statement followed upon Prime Minister Churchill's prediction that the revolt-torn Balkan kingdom would repudiate her pact with the Axis and his announcement that, in such an eventuality, Britain would recognize the new Belgrade regime.

The Prime Minister's promise to "make common cause" with the Yugoslavs was regarded as a direct move to make them Allies.

Great News in London.

LONDON, Mar. 27 — (CP Cable). —Britons got their biggest uplift today since Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell smashed the Italians in Libya when news of the Yugoslav coup d'etat reached London.

"It has tremendous strategic and moral effects," commented an extremely reliable source. He explained he meant the Vardar River, gateway to Greece, would be barred and Italy's eastern flank threatened.

While King Peter has taken over the administration of the country, Gen. Dusan Simovic, a Serb, is regarded as the strong man behind the scenes. He has been Chief of the General Staff, is now Commander of the Serbian Aviation Corps, and hitherto has remained aloof from politics.

Whether the move occurred so suddenly as to prevent Germany moving in columns to "restore order," it is difficult to say. Significantly, however, King Peter said in his proclamation that the army and navy already were carrying out his orders.

Queen Mother Marie, widow of the assassinated King Alexander, is in England and possibly will broadcast a rallying call to her son's subjects.

Blood Flows In Riots; Nation Rallies Behind Young Ruler

BUDAPEST, Hungary, March 27 — (AP) —Seventeen-year-old King Peter II of Yugoslavia took the helm in Yugoslavia today in a popular surge of disapproval of Tuesday's pact with the Axis and swore in a government to defend the country's independence after a night of rioting and bloody demonstrations.

Regent Prince Paul, who approved the Axis pact, was reported to have fled to Greece with his wife, Princess Olga of Greece, and the government of Premier Fragisa Cvetkovic, who went to Vienna to sign the agreement with Hitler, was overthrown.

Reports from Belgrade said Cvetkovic and Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic, who also had an important role in the pact signing, and most of the members of the overthrown cabinet were under arrest.

Gen. Dusan Simovic, chief of Yugoslav's air corps, took over as premier and formed a cabinet.

All Elements In Cabinet

The government represents all elements of the Yugoslav population. The Croat leader, Vladimir Macek, retains his former post as vice premier.

Informed quarters said it was a military coup d'etat in effect, although only Simovic and War Minister Ilic are active army officers. Many others in the new government are reserve officers who saw service in the 1914-18 war against Germany, Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria.

Reports from Belgrade picture crowds swarming into the streets immediately after they heard of the change of government. Flags and bunting were broken out and building decorated.

Newspapers brought out special editions carrying the King's proclamations in large type on their front pages, together with pictures of the UNITED STATES Ambassador John Winant said today the outcome of the war will "decide the future of labor, industry and democracy" for generations.

Speaking to the British Employers Confederation and Trades Union Congress, he said the "strength of an understanding leadership" in Britain was "making itself felt more and more day by day," and would bring "total victory."

Japs Arrest Missionaries

15 Britons, Americans Held For Aiding Chinese In Korea

TOKYO, March 27.—(AP).—Fifteen persons, some of them British and at least eight and perhaps 10 Americans, were reported under arrest in Korea to-day on charges of campaigning against Japan's war in China.

The Japanese foreign office assured United States Embassy Secretary H. M. Benninghoff, who presented a protest on behalf of Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, that a prompt and thorough investigation would be made.

Most of those said to have been arrested were believed to be missionaries.

Initial advices from Keijo named only four persons being held, listing them either as Presbyterian or North Presbyterian missionaries.

They were: Dr. D. S. Lowe, Miss Alice M. Betts, Herbert P. Blair and Otta De Camp. (The dispatch gave no home addresses).

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi quoted an announcement by the Korean Governor as saying the missionaries "under the dogmatic delusion that the holy war Japan is waging in China is a war of imperialistic aggression....have been skilfully inoculating with anti-war propaganda many ignorant Korean christians."

TORONTO, March 27.—(CP).—Authorities of the Presbyterian church in Canada said to-day that as far as they knew none of the missionaries reported arrested in Korea were Canadians.

OSHAWA, Ont., March 27 (CP)—The strike at the Robson Leather Company factory, which involves 250 workers, continued today with strikers peacefully picketing the plant.

The company issued a statement yesterday declaring the strike illegal.

Rescue Family from Slavery

Widow Held Year On Island—Charge Sharecropper Kidnapper

POPLARVILLE, Miss., March 27—(AP).—A Mississippi sharecropper and his wife were held incommunicado in jail here today as State and Federal officers investigated the strange story of a 33-year-old mother that she and her four children were kept in virtual servitude for more than a year on an island.

The case came to light last night with the filing of kidnap charges against Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Walker, middle-aged sharecroppers of Pearl River county, Mississippi, after officers had rescued Mrs. Cora Lee Davis and three of her children from Cow Island on the Mississippi River in Tennessee.

Mrs. Davis, officers said, was in Columbia, Miss., about 25 miles northwest of here, recovering from the birth of her fifth child in a Memphis hospital about two weeks ago. The Davis children also were in Columbia.

The story as recounted by Sheriff M. J. Foxworth of Marion county, Miss., and his deputy, Henry Counts, from statements of Mrs. Davis and her 16-year-old son, Adolph, follows:

Shortly after her husband, a works progress administration worker, died in July, 1939, Mrs. Davis and her children were forced to move into the nearby Walker home under threat of death.

After moving to Simpson county, near Mendenhall, Miss., the Walkers were ordered into court by Chancellor Ben Stevens on charges of abusing the Davis children, but the entire group fled to Cow Island.

For more than a year, the Davies were kept on the island in virtual slavery, the officers charged, until Adolph was able to make his escape when Walker took his mother to a Memphis hospital several weeks ago.

The youth made his way to Baton Rouge, La., where he told officers of his family's plight.

A group of officers from Tennessee and Mississippi went to Cow Island Tuesday. The Davis and Walker families were brought to South Mississippi, where Sheriff Enoch Seal, of Pearl River county, lodge the kidnapping charges.

2 Heroes In Otter Disaster

Rating Saves 3 Numbed Pals, Officer Another

HALIFAX, March 27—(CP).—An officer aboard one of the rescue boats and a rating from the flaming Canadian patrol boat Otter emerged as the heroes of the disaster when chilled survivors recovered sufficiently to tell of their experiences.

The officer was aboard a small naval vessel which managed to save four men. While the rescue efforts were going on he dove into the cold Atlantic to keep a struggling sailor afloat until a line could be thrown.

The rating saved three lives before allowing himself to be dragged from the icy waters to the security and warmth of the rescue vessel. He caught the ropes thrown him from the boat, and wrapped them around

Nineteen Canucks Drowned When Craft Takes Fire While On Patrol In Atlantic

Lifeboat Is Swamped, Rescue Vessels Pick Up 22 Others

HALIFAX, March 27 —(CP)— Forced from their flame-swept ship into a furious sea, 19 men of H.M.C.S. Otter were added today—with the patrol vessel they manned—to the toll the Royal Canadian Navy has paid to war.

Twenty-two others of the trim Otter, a peacetime yacht converted to fighting use, were saved when their companions perished in the Atlantic yesterday after the Otter had burst ablaze suddenly as she went about a routine patrol just off Halifax.

A merchant ship and another war vessel, jockeying in seas so turbulent that lifeboats were overturned and smashed, took the survivors out of the icy water. A tanker—anonymous, like the other rescue ships—provided a windbreak with her hull as the other two manoeuvred among the drifting flotsam for survivors.

Two officers and 17 men died, all apparently after they had left the ship as she burned from bow to stern and after one of their two lifeboats had been capsized by the fury of the wind and wave. The official announcement from naval services headquarters last night said they had "drowned or died of shock and exposure."

Skipper Among Rescued

Saved were two officers and 20 men. They included Lieut. Denis S. Mossman of Halifax, in charge of the little vessel when the fire started up as she bobbed in the swells off Sambro Light, at the southwestern extremity of this harbor.

In demonstrations in the capital and provinces crowds carried British and Russian flags and shouted, "Long live Britain and Russia! Down with Germany and Italy!"

Students marched with linked arms and sang patriotic and nationalistic songs. Many were arrested.

Many persons were killed and wounded in the demonstrations throughout the night, Belgrade reports said. Fourteen were said to have been killed in Banjaluka.

Rioting took place in the main streets of Belgrade all night.

The Belgrade radio broadcast an appeal to army garrisons throughout the kingdom to support the new king and government and help to preserve order.

At the same time all reserve officers were ordered to report to their garrisons at once.

(The cabinet was reconstituted only Monday after the resignation of two anti-Axis ministers who refused to approve Yugoslav adherence to the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo alliance. The new cabient approved the Axis affailation and Yugoslavia became a junior partner in ceremonies at Vienna Tuesday.)

Telephone communications with Belgrade were cut.

Last reports received direct from Belgrade last night told of continued rioting and disorders throughout the country in protest against the Government's action in allying the nation with the Axis powers last Tuesday in Vienna.

In many places, the rioters shouted cries of 'Long Live King Peter" and loudly denounced the Regency Council and the Cabinet they charged with selling out to the Axis.

The Regency Council is headed by Prince Paul, son of the King's late great-uncle, and includes Dr. Riskia Stankovitch and Dr. Ivo Perovitch.

The War Today

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Popular discontent at the action of the Yugoslav council of regents headed by Prince Paul and of the puppet cabinet it established after a search for pawns was reported today to have resulted in overthrow of the government, resignation of the regents and establishment on the throne of the young King Peter, not yet 18 years old.

Hardly had word of these events filtered to the outside world despite suspended communication facilities than Prime Minister Churchill promised the aid of the British Empire in any move the Yugoslavs might make to shake off the yoke Germany has been trying to fasten about them.

The events in Yugoslavia were too fresh and incompletely developed to permit interpretations that would be much more than guesses. They suggested these possibilities, however, aside from the obvious unpopularity of the Germans in the country:—

The Yugoslav oppositionists probably acted with an eye to British aid.

They may have come to an understanding with Turkey and, perhaps, also with Russia, as the latter is reported feeling none too contented with the German southeasterly drive.

The reported Russian assurance that she would not attack Turkey should the latter feel bound to protect her interests may so have strengthened the confidence of the Turkish government as to cause it to assist the Yugoslav insurrectionists.

The Yugoslav revolutionaries were believed also to have acted in part through knowledge that British efforts on behalf of Greece are on a large and formidable scale and through belief that they will succeed.

Should the new Yugoslav government send its army of 1,000,000 men into the field against Germany it would measurably increase the chance of a joint Balkan victory over Italy and Germany.

Throngs Cheer Boy Ruler.

LONDON, Mar. 27 — (CP). — Reuters News Agency reported hearing to-day an announcement of the Belgrade radio that young King Peter had received a loyalty pledge from the Association of Reserve Officers.

"All officers of the Reserve await your call with great enthusiasm," the officers' pledge said.

A Reuters despatch from Belgrade said that thousands gathered outside the palace of the Patriarch of the Serbian Orthodox Church and cheered wildly for King Peter after an address by the Patriarch in which he said:

"At this decisive moment, when the history, honor and glory of the Serbian people have been imperilled, there has appeared a bright star of destiny—young King Peter II., to safeguard with his people their history, honor and glory.

"Serbs, rally round your young King and watch over him. The Church is with you as always."

"The members of the Regency Council have appreciated the correctness of the reasons for my action, and immediately resigned at their own accord.

"My royal army and the navy have at once placed themselves at my disposal and are already carrying out my orders....

"I have charged Lt.-Gen. Simovic with the formation of a new government.

"With trust in God and the future of Yugoslavia I appeal to all citizens and all authorities of the country to fulfil their duties to king and country.

WASHINGTON, March 27—(AP). —Germany's action in extending her proclaimed war zone to waters off Greenland seems more of a defiant gesture against the United States aid-to-Britain policy than a realistic move.

Inclusion of Iceland in the German blockade area on the theory that it is being used as a transshipment base, where Britain-bound cargoes are relayed from American to British merchantmen, does not make sense. Yet it is the explanation offered in Berlin.

Officials in Washington deny that United States ships have been going to Iceland. Moreover, the absence

Opposition Raps Farm Policy In Hot Debate

OTTAWA, Mar. 27 — (CP). — An Eastern and a Western Conservative have united in the House of Commons in an attack upon the Government's farm policy with a motion which—if adopted — would mean defeat of the Government and a general election.

Yesterday afternoon Mark Senn (Con. Haldimand) and E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle) moved an amendment to the formal motion to go into supply on agriculture estimates. The amendment, amounting to a motion of want of confidence in the present administration, specifically asked for price parity between farm and other products.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner, in a spirited reply, declared that everything the mover and seconder of the amendment said should be done was being done in principle.

He said no one would dispute the declaration that farmers were having a difficult time and had been in difficulties for 10 years, but conditions were improving.

A feature of the debate was an allegation by Mr. Perley that big, mill-controlled bakeries were in a "racket" and that bread should be no more than seven cents a loaf. He said the Government should investigate these bakeries.

Mr. Senn proposed the amendment in a speech which began just before the adjournment hour March 5 but could not be completed until the supply motion was reached again yesterday.

Predicts New Regime

The Prime Minister said it is a "striking thing" that the country's strongest organization of capital and labor had united to welcome Mr. Winant.

"It is explained by the high tradition which the ambassador of the United States has always held. It is explained also by the gravity of the struggle in which we are engaged, but most of all it is explained by your especial personality and the services you have rendered to the joint movements of labor and industry throughout the world.

"We have not asked a great deal of labor but the trade union movement has willingly agreed in this war to the temporary suspension of privileges which it had taken generations to win. Those privileges have, as it were, been handed over to the custdy and keeping of the state for the common purpose.

"Without that we should not be able to produce, under the severe conditions of the enemy's fire, the enormous output of munitions of all kinds which is needed if we are to let our soldiers, sailors and airmen meet the enemy on even terms of equipment."

Some War Aims.

Again turning to war aims, Mr. Churchill said he was "a bit shy" of defining them, but he said victory "may render possible an advance towards greater and broader social unity and justice that could otherwise have been achieved in peacetime in a score of years."

"I might say that our aim will be to build a society in which there will be wealth and culture, but where wealth shall not prey on the commonwealth nor culture degenerate into class and pride.

"We are at war and although one must thankfully admit that we have had good fortune and success in the last six or eight months we must also expect heavy weather and reverses. We do not expect that the war should be one-sided. We expect heavy blows that we will bear with fortitude and repay with vigor."

The spirit sometime tempts me to rejoice, and I do not doubt that there may be others who may have experienced passing sensations. But we must restrain these emotions. We must see things in their true proportion. We must put aside anything which hampers us in the speedy accomplishment of our common purpose. Moreover, I do not believe that partianship will benefit after the war is over those who indulge in it while the war is going on.

The Nation WE'l Judge

The country will judge partisans —men and women—in every sphere of life, in every part of the Island, not by any partisan remarks or rejoinders they made but by the contributions they will have made to the common victory. There is the honorable congregation in which we may all strive as parties or individuals to win the prize, and therefore the guidance I offer to the Conservative party as its leader is that we keep our party organization in good order by associating it at every point with the national action upon the victory of the great cause we serve.

It is because of the interest of national unity that I have foreborn to produce a catalogue of war aims or peace aims. Everyone knows what we are fighting about, but if you try to set forth in a catalogue what will be the exact settlement of affairs in a period which is unforeseeable you will find that the moment you leave the area of pious platitude you will descend into the arena of heated controversy and that would militate against efforts which we are making and we could not, in justice to our country, take such a step.

Gilbert La Bine Gives Radium To Aid Britain

OTTAWA, March 27. — Three grams of radium, valued at approximately $75,000 have been donated directly to Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of British Airplane Production by Gilbert LaBine, president of Eldorado Mines, Toronto. This will be sufficient of the precious substance to provide luminous dials for 5,000 planes.

The Eldorado Mines, owners of a great pitchblende deposit in the Northwest Territories, have a refinery at Port Hope, where radium is brought to its finished state. In addition to Mr. LaBine's generous three-gram gift further quantities of this substance are being sold to the British Government for use on airplane instruments.

Radium, brought to a powdered state at the Port Hope refinery, is shipped to Ottawa for final testing before being sent to Britain.

Painted on the instruments of an airplane it glows luminously on the darkest nights permitting the pilot of a fighter or bomber to read the dials in the cockpit.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

John E. Davey Cobourg Man Passes In West

ROSENEATH, Mar. 27—(ENS). — Mrs. Mary Macklin has received word of the death of her brother John E. Davey, recently at Carberry, Manitoba, following a lingering heart ailment.

Mr. Davey, who was well known throughout this district, was born born at Delebole, Cornwall, England, April 13, 1865. He came to Canada in 1871. In Cobourg he learned the carriage trade and cabinetmaking. He moved to Carberry in 1889, where he was an undertaker.

He was married at Brockport, N. Y., in 1901, to Mary Ann Oakley, who predeceased her husband eleven months ago.

Mr. Davey took an active part in civic affairs and served several terms on the Carberry Town Council. He was a member of the United Church, the I.O.F., A.O.U.W. and A.F. and A.M.

Surviving are one son Floyd of Carberry, and of a family of eleven brothers and sisters but four remain, Mrs. J. McQueen and Harry Davey of Toronto, Mrs. Mary Macklin, Fenella, and George Davey of Medicine hat.

The funeral service was held at Carberry United Church, with Rev. A. A. Boone conducting. Interment was made in Carberry Cemetery, with the last Masonic rites performed by the local lodge.

Hatcheries Report Chicks In Demand

COBOURG, Mar. 27 — (ENS). — Hatcherymen in the county report fairly brisk demand for baby chicks. Rail and truck movement of apples continues light and the demand is generally dull. Fairly large holdings of McIntosh still to be moved, but good Spies are becoming scarce. Potato growers are of the opinion that the potato acreage will be reduced this year.

Peru expects its gold production this year to break all records.

Soldier Jumps From Train Near Brighton

COBOURG, March 27 — (By a Staff Reporter).—Hiding somewhere in Eastern Ontario today is a soldier, a member of the Queen's Own from Toronto, who is determined he will not return to his post of duty.

The soldier staged a daring escape on Wednesday at noon when he was being taken back to the unit headquarters somewhere in Eastern Canada. A sergeant and corporal had picked the soldier up in Toronto, on a charge of desertion and were escorting him back on the C.N.R. train that passes through Cobourg at noon. When the train was about half a mile east of the town and travelling fast, the alleged deserter leaped from the moving coach and escaped. The two escorting N.C.O.'s had to travel on to Brighton because the train was travelling at a speed that made jumping off a hazardous effort.

They returned to Cobourg shortly after noon and enlisted the aid of Chief Constable Carey and members of the Provincial and Mounted Police in the search for their prisoner. At noon today no trace had been found of the man, and in the town it is believed that he must have suffered injury when he made his escape.

Toronto Concert Party Is Heard In Cobourg

COBOURG, Mar. 27 — (ENS). — The concert party of the Walmer Road Baptist Church, Toronto, gave a program of music and readings to a capacity audience in the Baptist Church, King Street, on Tuesday evening. It was a rare treat for the music-lovers of the town, and much enjoyed by the large audience. The high quality of the singing and the violin solos was exceptional, and the quartette was unusually fine, especially in the numbers "God So Loved the World" by Stainer, and "God is a Spirit" by Bennett.

Willkie Address Splendid Tourist Appeal

BEWDLEY, March 27—(By Staff Reporter).—Don Sidey, of Bewdley, a member of the Northumberland and Durham Fish and Game Association, said today that Wendell Willkie's speech in Toronto recently was the finest tourist appeal sent to Americans during the past two years.

"It was first hand information from one American to the others, and it told the story of how Canadians feel, and told also of the fine treatment which Americans can expect when they come over to spend their holidays in Canada," Mr. Sidey said.

He also mentioned that Willkie's reception was a grand example of international goodwill, and could not fail to impress the Americans on the closeness of the two peoples.

Sincere Friendship

"During the presidential election last year Americans were keen to learn how Canadians felt toward both Willkie and Roosevelt, and when they read of the royal reception that was tendered the runner-up in the last presidential election, it is bound to convince them of the sincere friendship that we in this country have for them."

Mr. Sidey along with Robert Holdaway of Bewdley accompanied Joseph Thorne, the president of the Northumberland and Durham Fish and Game Association when he attended the special meeting in Toronto, at which members of conservation organizations were invited to discuss open seasons for fishing with the special committee appointed by the Legislature.

June 20th Opening

This association is definitely in favor of an earlier opening of the maskinonge season, preferably June 20, but they do not want the season shortened. Their argument is that many Americans and Canadian fishermen and women like to fish in the late fall when the weeds are not so numerous, and Mr. Sidey scoffs at the suggestion that most of the big muskies are caught late in the fall.

"On the whole there are as many large muskies caught during other times of the season, than in the late fall, as a muskie will hit a bait anytime he feels like it. I have seen fish weighing more than 30 pounds caught in the middle of July and August."

Discussing the earlier opening of the muskie season he remarked that if Canada can get six or seven million dollars extra in American funds by opening the season ten days earlier, then the action is justified because we are at war and need the foreign exchange.

This same argument has been advanced by Charlie Kingan, president of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, and everything indicates the Department of Game and Fisheries will decide to set the opening date for maskinonge fishing on about June 21.

Port Hope Man Buys Belleville Hotel

PORT HOPE, March 27 (ENS).—Belleville gained a new hotel proprietor today in the person of Paul Haggis, former restaurant owner and proprietor of the St. Lawrence Hotel in Port Hope. He has purchased the Canadian Hotel in Belleville and assumed charge there today.

More familiarly known as Paul to his many friends, Mr. Haggis came to Port Hope in 1926 and opened a confectionery store. His last venture prior to re-opening the St. Lawrence Hotel was to make the Royal Grill one of the most modernly appointed restaurants on the Lakeshore Highway. It is now controlled by his brothers, Andy and Pete Haggis.

Port Hope Club Captures Deanery Trophy

PORT HOPE, March 27 (ENS)—St. John's Church Men's Club broke a nine-year jinx when they won the F. H. Mason Deanery Carpetball Trophy by defeating the Bowmanville club, 9-7, in the final scheduled game. It was their first championship since the trophy was donated in 1932.

Finishing with 36 points in the league standing, Newcastle was second in the three team loop with 33 points and Bowmanville placed third with 27 points. St. Peter's Church of Cobourg, five times winners of the trophy, failed to enter a team this year, as did St. Mark's Church in Port Hope.

Harry G. Ballard, secretary of the winning club announced the trophy will be presented at a banquet held in Port Hope in the near future. The date of the presentation will be announced later.

Music Study Club Meets In Port Hope

PORT HOPE, March 27 (ENS)—Selections from Canadian and American composers featured the theme of the Music Study Club which met at Seaton Hall Wednesday evening. The convener of the program was Mrs. Fred Douglas, who gave interesting items on the lives of composers.

Piano solos by such famous composers as John Philip Sousa, T. Vandevere, Ethlebert Nevin, Edward McDowell and William Stacey were rendered by Mr. D. Millson, Miss J. Campbell, Miss J. Warburton and Mr. A. H. Snelgrove.

Vocal selections from the works of Dr. Ham, Jeffrey O'Hara, Bertha T. Tamblyn, Laura Lemon, Stephen Foster, H. T. Burleigh, Ethlebert Nevin and Vincent Youman were delightfully sung by Miss R. Low, Miss D. Cheser, Miss M. Cancilla and Mr. G. Bamsey.

Reveries by Oley Speaks and Lullaby by R. W. Gibbs were sung by the chorus group of the Study Club under the direction of Mr. D. Millson.

Prices Are High At The Farm Sale Of Mr. William Gordon

PLAINVILLE, Mar. 27—(ENS). — —William Gordon's auction sale of farm stock and implements on Friday afternoon drew a very large attendance. The sale had been postponed from Tuesday owing to the stormy weather. The prices paid were good, steers selling for $100 each. One team of horses brought $300. John Noble, Coldsprings, was auctioneer.

On Monday evening Plainville School was opened to the friends of the newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Herriott, nee Bernice McKinlay, when over one hundred and fifty came bringing a miscellaneous shower of gifts. A Cobourg orchestra supplied delightful music for dancing.

After lunch Miss Valeda McKinlay read an address to which the groom, on benalf of h's bride, graciously replied. They were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents.

Donald Herriott has gone to Port Hope, where he has accepted a position.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Buttar and Miriam were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Will Moore and tea guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Moore, Port Hope.

Hitler Has Not Struck

There was no joy in Yugoslavia when the country was handed over to the Axis powers. There was every indication in the land that the government had consented to something which the people did not want. That is particularly the case with the Serbs, the one people who always managed to remain above the high water mark of Turkish incursions in past years. They are peasant stock and hard fighters.

Reports coming from Belgrade told about protest meetings and processions, of the police scooping in hundreds; told about school children who went on strike and remained outside singing national songs. It was their one way of making it known that they wanted nothing to do with the Axis. Other developments listed included a rush of young Serbs to the British and Greek legations. They wanted uniforms and arms so they might be sent to the front either with the Greek or British armies.

And right here one wonders what will happen? It is worth looking back a day or so to thumb through the agreement which Yugoslavia signed to come across that section which said that Yugoslavia was to be responsible for the preservation of peace within its own borders and to make certain there was no interference with the plans of the Nazis. Not the exact wording, but that is what was meant.

We would be quite ready to believe the Germans could look ahead a few days and see what would happen when that agreement was signed against the will of so many of the residents. It would not be difficult to see the time when there would be trouble, and when the Nazi schemers would simply say to Yugoslavia: "You cannot keep order so we will have to step in and do it for you." And that of course would place Nazi soldiers on Yugoslavian territory, something not directly provided for in the agreement.

The one question which no one can answer is why Hitler has not struck against Greece and against the British forces there. At the moment Hitler is concerned with the battle of the Atlantic, and he may desire to know how that is going to turn before starting in the Balkans. There can be little doubt that the attitude of United States has given Hitler something new about which to worry. He knows that assistance from United States must for the most part cross the Atlantic, and he knows it will be coming in large measure. It may be he prefers to attend to that and be content in the Balkans with signing new, even if unwilling players on his team. All he has to do is give the sign and the Balkan war is on. Why he has not done it before this is the world's largest centre of conjecture at the moment.

Could Willkie Do It?

Wendell Willkie finds it easy to meet people; he likes to meet them and finds it easy to talk with them. He appears to know just what to say to fit the occasion, and that sort of equipment is a decided asset to the man.

When he went to Montreal he was bent on starting out for the war plants where the French-Canadians are at work. It was scheduled as a tour of inspection, but to Willkie it became a time for visiting with the men, for greeting them singly or having them gather about him in groups. He shook hands and he patted people on the back and he heard "Ca c'est un bon homme," which when turned back to English means he's all right, or he's tops as far as they were concerned—or some such thing.

Our belief is there are few men qualified to do anything like that. The great majority of them couldn't do it no matter how great their effort and how sincere their intentions. Willkie has no high office or national standing which he can use as a springboard to appeal to the people of this country. He is actually a defeated presidential candidate, but he was big enough not to stay in that class.

We have no way of knowing whether he has the same appeal to the workers in his own land as he has in our country, but if he has there is a great job which needs attending to—and at once. The strike which is going on at Bethlehem, Pa., is an ugly looking thing, and for it there does not appear to be sufficient reason. In that enormous and straggling plant, almost five miles long, there are war orders worth a billion dollars. On top of that steel is being called for as never before.

The Steel Workers' Organization Committee (C.I.O.) called the strike when the Employees' Representation Plan began the election of officers and preparations for collective bargaining. The claim is the E.R.P. is company controlled. It is not a strike for better wages, because steel workers are highly paid.

We are not for a moment suggesting that Wendell Willkie should rush into the crowd which is milling around the streets of Bethlehem, or that he should join with the police and state troopers in battling with the picket line, but there is need of such a personality as he possesses some place in that situation. He is fully awake to what this war means and the people at Bethlehem are not. It is tragic beyond words that United States should launch its great program and its great strike at the same time. Willkie might be able to do something there. If he can't—then who can?

Just a Plain Answer

There will be agreement that Prime Minister King made a proper sort of address in the House of Commons when he gave figures showing the size of Canada's war effort, and also when he compared it with what is being done in United States. There was nothing boastful about it, and there was sufficient reason for the comparison with United States figures because during the prolonged debates prior to the passage of the Lend-Lease bill there were several questions asked on that very point. If United States were going in so deep—what were the people of Canada doing?

We know the answer in this country, but apparently many people in United States did not. We are not lending; we are giving.

On the basis of population, according to Mr. King's deductions, United States money expenditure instead of being $7,000,000,000, would call for a war expenditure of $35,000,000,000. In terms of armed forces, of which Canada has 250,000, United States would require an enlistment of 2,750,000 to equal the effort of this country.

We are certain no one will accuse Mr. King of boasting, because whatever defects he may have, a boastful attitude or disposition is not one of them. The statements he made can be regarded merely as direct and plain answer to the points raised at Washington.

Not The Right Answer

The extent to which professional sport keeps on flourishing on this continent does not fit in exactly with the idea of a nation at war. It may be there is need for people to be entertained, and it may be necessary that those who do the entertaining shall be paid at a much higher rate than $1.30 per day, and that they shall be young men in the pink of condition, but there is something about it all which does not add up right to produce the proper answer.

We find it difficult to make sense out of a situation which allows one young man to elect to go in for a remunerative sport while some other young man chucks his job and everything else and considers it his business to be off attending to the affairs of war.

The defect is primarily that we have allowed our young people to make their own decisions apart from the four-month military training period. It is the function of government in such times to come into charge of the entire manpower of the nation, and in no other way can we approach equality of effort.

Thyssen Found It Out

Fritz Thyssen was once the most powerful industrialist in Germany. And the richest. He is the man who came to the conclusion some years ago that he might be able to use Hitler to check democracy and check communism. In fact he was quite sure of his position. He was even an outspoken man in his day, and he wailed loud against the Russians, and finally he felt strong enough to raise his voice against the war because he claimed it could not possibly succeed.

Months ago he found it advisable to get out and he went to Switzerland, but that was too close to the German border, and it would not be difficult to kidnap him. Then he went to Brussels, next to Paris and finally to the Riveria, the soldiers of Germany never far behind. One of the last acts was for France to hand him over to the Germans, and he is now at a concentration camp at Dachau in Bavaria, and it has the reputation of being one of the worst in the country. The prospects of Fritz Thyssen coming out of there alive are not one in a million.

Thyssen could claim, and with truth, that in his day he had done much for Hitler; he had helped him financially; he had given him the advice of a successful man and all that.

But he might better have poured his talents down the sewer and then he would have looked for no returns. He will get nothing from Hitler. In fact his case is so common that it would not be worth mentioning had Thyssen not been such an outstanding German, and had he not built and financed so much of the German war machine.

Hitler does not remember or regard past performances. He has proved that so many time that it can be accepted as fact and policy. He rode into power on the necks of his storm troopers, organized first at Munich by Roehme. When the time came for him to make a decision between the Storm Troopers and the Reischwehr, Hitler did not even hesitate. He arrested the leaders of the Storm Troopers on a morning early in June of 1934 and with no trial or explanation or apology ordered that they be shot at once. There was no question of loyalty, but the Storm Troopers and their leaders had served Hitler's purpose, and he was through with them.

That's where Thyssen is today. He's a dead man just as certainly as though jury had found him guilty and the judge had pronounced sentence.

A Good Man Leaves Town

The various organizations which centre their activity in the parish of St. Peter's Cathedral, met together to tell Rev. P. J. Kelly, LL.D., they regretted his departure. Of course they would say that, and say it because they meant it, and they emphasized the saying by the presentation of more gifts than a man should really take away with him from any community. Looking over the list it does appear Dr. Kelly will be burdened upon his departure.

As rector of St. Peter's Dr. Kelly has had a large parish. If the people there regret his departure—and they do—they feel much the same as many other people in the city who are outside his parish. A great many people have told the departing gentleman the same thing; they did not desire to see him leave the city.

When there was anything of a public nature going on, a dinner gathering or a good address, Father Kelly would be there, and it was always noticed he had plenty of people with whom to talk. In that way he was indeed a man among men.

It is correct to say that Dr. Kelly has never sought anything for himself. A small parish is what we carelessly refer to at times as an "out of the way" place was just as acceptable to him as service in the larger field. One bright spot is his desire to go to Cobourg. He says he has been there and knows something of the town and has always liked it. Cobourg is getting a faithful rector and also a good citizen.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Spring is just starting here, while in South America they are having their days of early fall.

Then there was the report of the chap who was held up by two men when going home the other night. Otherwise he never would have reached home.

The suggestion is now made that cities in Britain should turn on every possible light at night instead of trusting to the blackout, the claim being that the blackout has been somewhat of a failure, while plenty of light might prove confusing to the raiders.

Four young men met at Camp Dix. They were Henry A. Wallace, but he isn't the vice-president of United States; Harry Hopkins, but not the political adviser of President Roosevelt; Joseph P. Kennedy, but not the former ambassador to Britain, and Elmer Davis, but not the news commentator. Call it a coincidence and let it go at that.

SPECKLED HEN

(By A.R.K.)

¶ My speckled hen she wants to cluck, she sits there like a ten-ton truck, she has a point to prove; she picks at me when I go near, she wants to make it very clear, that she's not going to move.

¶ A china egg is all she's got, she sits there so she'll keep it hot, prefers being left alone; she'd sit on door knobs just the same, or take on anything that came, if it was made of stone.

¶ Each year when it comes on to spring, she starts to do that very thing, the settin' gets in her; she wont' lay eggs, and she won't eat, won't get around and use her feet, and I can't make her stir.

¶ I've read of things that one might do, and I have tried out quite a few, but I know when I'm stuck; my speckled hen will have her way, if she waits till the first of May, for she is going to cluck.

¶ There's only one thing I can do, a dozen eggs plus one or two, I know she'll never quit; the family instinct's in her strong, no use in waiting now for long—for she's just bound to sit.

CAP and BELLS . .

By SAMUEL MARCHBANKS

THE other day, as I was looking through a pile of books which were going cheaply in a second-hand bookstore, I found a copy of a book which I used to admire greatly, and which I hoped would revolutionize my life. It was "How To Live On Twenty-Four Hours A Day" by Arnold Bennett, the celebrated British author who died in 1931. Bennett had a remarkable career; he was born in the pottery district of England, near Hanley in Staffordshire, and spent his childhood living the life of that rather depressing locality. He became a solicitor's clerk for a time, but his heart was set on letters, and he soon became assistant, and later full editor of a paper called "Woman." In time he became one of the foremost of living English novelists, and "The Old Wives' Tale" (1908), "The Clayhanger Family" (1925), and "Riceyman Steps" (1923) won him a wide popularity among discriminating readers. But not all his work was on such a high level, and at times he stooped to a kind of writing which was unworthy of his great talents. It was surely in such a lapse that he wrote "How To Live On Twenty-Four Hours A Day."

C & B

The theme of the book was that we all waste a great deal of our time. We spend eight hours in sleep, and perhaps eight hours in work; what becomes of the other eight hours? How much of that time do we waste? The answer is, of course, that we waste most of it, and Bennett undertook to show us how we might salvage that precious time and make our lives infinitely more interesting than they were. The book was a great success and thousands of copies were sold. Was not Arnold Bennett a man of astonishing industry? Had he not made an outstanding success of his life? We hoped that in the magical little book he would impart the secret of that success.

C & B

The regime which Bennett outlined for us was one which would undoubtedly lead to a great measure of mental discipline and perhaps to an increased pleasure in living. That is to say, it would have done so if we had been able to follow it. But the regime was severe and the flesh is weak, and I very much doubt if one per cent of those who bought the book with high hopes profited by its instruction. I know I did not.

C & B

A great part of the wonderful scheme was devoted to training in concentration. The reader was advised to spend the time which was taken up in getting to work in the morning in concentrating on some matter of interest, and in making up his mind what he thought about it. Sound advice, but hard to follow. Most of us suffer from a burden of misinformation and prejudice upon most topics which makes concentration of this sort profitless or impossible. And there is also the discreditable but true consideration that it is very hard to keep one's mind on one subject for half-an-hour, or even for less time. We would all like to concentrate, but we have no heart for the hard work which it involves.

C & B

BENNETT also advised a rigorous control of reading. The paper, he said, must be read as a page of history; its facts were to be carefully compared, its theories and speculations docketed in the mind for future reference, and its editorials read with a keenly critical eye. Also, the paper was to be read quickly; there was to be no cosy dawdling and no mention was made of following the funnies. As for other reading, he recommended an hour and a half of heavy reading each day. This was to be carried out in a studious manner, with no interruptions, but with pencil in hand, ready to make marginal notes or to underscore passages of interest. And by heavy reading Bennett meant heavy. Novels were not allowed; history, biography, science and philosophy were to be the stable fare. He also recommended that reading should be narrowed to a few subjects, so that the reader might become an expert in them. The advice was very edifying and would doubtless have done me a lot of good if I had followed it.

C & B

But there is something in all of us which rebels against this sort of dragooning of the mind. We like to mess about with the newspaper, we like to daydream on the way to the office. We read for fun, and not to be instructed. Some of us are lucky enough to find fund in reading instructive books, but they are a minority. Most of us read in a slip-shod, hit-or-miss fashion, not caring whether we are interrupted, and perhaps not caring whether we finish the book or not. Doubtless it is very deplorable and ignorant of us, but that is the way we are. Personally I doubt very much whether Arnold Bennett lived that way himself. He saw so much of life that he must have spent a good deal of his time sitting in a big chair, gaping. However discouraging it may be to the industrious and however bad an example it may be for the young, it must be admitted that most of us are lazy.

C & B

And yet, considering the matter philosophically, is not laziness an admirable characteristic in a man? Is it not a godlike attribute, a reminiscence of those noble days before the curiosity of our first parents made it necessary for us to work for a living? "In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread" was the divine judgment, and what clearer evidence do we need that God looked upon the necessity to work as a horrible curse? these are solemn thoughts. Perhaps some of my readers may look upon this as a defence of laziness. That is exactly what it is; not half enough is said in defence of those who try to live as we all did before the fall.

MISTAKEN

"No, no, General. The troops are over here!"
—London Illustrated.

• Will Inspect the Gangsters

ON HIS arrival in Moscow, Matsuoka gave an interview. He was going to Berlin and Rome to see the Axis leaders, he said, "because the question of peace and war may depend upon personal acquaintance."

Masuoka is a clever man and he is also a Japanese. As a Japanese, his motive in making that statement was face-saving. He was attempting to neutralize the embarrassing implications of a visit to Berlin by trying to give the impression that not he but Hitler would be in the inferior position. He was going to Berlin to "look Hitler over," so to speaker. As a clever man, Matsuoka's motive was to make his visits personally pleasant. He was serving advance notice on Hitler and Mussolini, but especially on Hitler, that he, Matsuoka, must be accorded every possible honor, must be treated with great respect, must not be brow-beaten, must, in brief, be handled with kid gloves, if Germany and Italy wanted Japanese co-operation.

Unfortunately, if the question of Japan going to war on the side of the Axis depends on personal acquaintance, Japan will probably soon be at war with us. Matsuoka will find that he personally has much in common with the German dictator and also with the Italian dictator. All three of them are frustrated men gone vicious. On the surface they wear different appearances—the crass Mussolini, the brooding Hitler, the too charming Matsuoka — but fundamentally they have much in common. They will understand each other.

But that is more or less beside the point. What is really astonishing is Matsuoka's brazen admission that joining the two European gangsters in making war largely depends on how he himself gets along with them and what he thinks of them on personal acquaintance. That many millions of human beings should be at the mercy of Mr. Matsuoka's taste in fellow gangsters is somehow deeply and horribly shocking to the Occidental democratic mind. But perhaps the Japanese people will not be similarly shocked.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

The Jews answered him, we have a law and by that law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

When Pilate therefore heard that saying he was the more afraid.

And went into the judgment hall and saith unto Jesus: Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

Then said Pilate unto him, speakest thou not to me? knowest not thou that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to release thee?

Jesus answered, Thou couldst have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above; therefore he that delivereth me unto thee hath the greater sin.—John 19.

"You want to be what?" demanded the conductor.

An absent-minded woman had insisted upon being operated on for appendicitis.

Some time after her recovery she turned up at the consulting-room and asked the doctor if he would mind telling her what he had found in her appendix.

"Well," said the doctor, "I may as well admit to you that yours was the most extraordinary case I have ever handled. I never found anything like it in an appendix before. You will hardly believe it, but I found several small hard seeds."

"Oh," said the woman, "that accounts for our having no sweet peas last year. I must have sown the pills."

The Cure

"Did it cure your husband of walking in his sleep when you put the tub of water by the side of his bed?"

"Yes, and it cured me of putting a tub of water by the side of his bed."

Port Hope Scholars Have $3,788 In The Bank

PORT HOPE, March 27.—(ENS).—Though Port Hope public school penny bank deposits for the two month period ending February are less than for the corresponding period of one year ago it is not considered they are saving less but rather that Canada's war effort is benefitting from the purchase of war savings stamps. A total of $3,788.85 is credited the students compared with the sum of $3,952.40 one year ago. Twenty-nine per cent. of the pupils are learning the savings habit by taking advantage of the penny bank system.

"The children of the province have responded magnificently to the recent appeal of the Dominion government for the purchase of war savings stamps and certificates," Ontario Penny Bank Inspector T. R. Littleproud said in a message to the teachers. "The campaign in the schools has yielded very gratifying results. Doubtless many of the children will continue to purchase stamps with a reasonable degree of regularity."

Forming Of St. John's Ambulance Corps In Cobourg Is Now Under Discussion

COBOURG, March 27 — (By a Staff Reporter).—There is a strong possibility that a St. John Ambulance Corps may be formed in Cobourg this Spring after a first aid course is completed.

Officers from Toronto with the aid of Cobourg doctors are planning to hold two courses in first aid work in the near future. One course will be for women who are interested in war work, or who wish to prepare themselves to meet emergencies that may arise at any time. The other course is for men, and the students will for the most part be recruited from industries. Men who are prospective recruits for the reserve or active service units of the Canadian army will also be encouraged to take this course.

Last winter a similar plan was followed and the course plan was well received, attracting several men from the neighboring town of Port Hope as well as Cobourg.

There has never been a branch of the St. John Ambulance Brigade at Cobourg, but with interest in first aid work growing, it is believed that officers from the parent organization in Toronto will take steps to organize a local corps, following completion of the two courses.

KINGSTON COMBINES SHUT OUT OWEN SOUND 7-0

Series Is Now Tied With Win Each

KINGSTON, Ont., March 27. — (CP).— Kingston Combines made amends for their poor start in the O.H.A. Senior "B" finals with a 7-0 shutout over Owen Sound at the Jock Harty arena Wednesday night to tie the series and send the teams to the northern city for games on Friday and Saturday on even terms.

After losing 8-2 Tuesday, the Combines came back last night to get a goal in the first period, another in the second and then pour five more into the nets. The seven goal win more than made up for the six goal loss the night before and it proved the Combines have a royal chance to take the title if they repeat the style of play shown last night.

With Buck Burrows playing a perfect game in goal and his mates giving him much better protection, the Combines actually skated and bumped the high speed Sound squad into submission and in the last frame the visitors were a well beaten club.

Kingston had enough chances to win on Tuesday but tossed them away by erratic shooting, but last night they made the most of their opportunies, although the final result was in doubt until Kingston clicked for two goals to increase its lead to four in the first eight minutes of the last period.

With four goals to the good, the Combines then went out to get even for the beating the night before and did it with a goal to spare.

The teams:

Owen Sound — Goal, Dunne; defence, Bishop and Small; centre, Burlington; wings, B. White and A. Wilson; subs, Bowen, T. White, Williams, King, Smith.

Kingston — Goal, Burrows; defence, J. Neilson and C. Williamson; centre, M. Williamson; wings, R. Neilson and Hepburn; subs, Lane, Hood, Smith, Radley, White, and Roberts.

Referee—Bert Hedges, Toronto.

First Period.

The summary:

Kingston, Lane (M. Williamson) 16:50
Penalties—J. Neilson, Bishop.

Second Period.

Kingston, R. Neilson (M. Williamson) 8:50
Penalties—J. Neilson, Hood and Small, Lane (deferred), Wilson.

Third Period.

Kingston, Smith (Lane) 6:00
Kingston, R. Neilson (M. Williamson) 8:00

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The question of the hour seems to be whether Boston Bruins folded up for the season or just for the night when Leafs defeated them 7 to 2 Tuesday night. The answer should be forthcoming tonight when the N.H.L. champs and the Toronto gang clash in the fourth game of the series. If Boston are as great a club as Manager Art Ross has always declared them to be they should rise to the occasion, throw off the effects of Tuesday night's debacle and be in there battling harder than ever tonight. This is their acid test. If they fail to meet it their chances of taking the Stanley Cup for the second year in succession will have faded into thin air. Coach Weiland declared yesterday that when he realized the ball game was gone the other night he passed the word along to the Boston players to ease up and save their energy for tonight. That may help to explain the collapse of the Bruins in the third period when Toronto ran in three goals without a return.

* * * * * *

Ross's problem tonight will be to bolster up his attacking divisions. It would seem that little help from either Cowley or Bauer can be expected for obviously if one or both start tonight it would be foolish to look for four star rating from them. You simply do not get over injuries of the kind they received last week in a hurry. In the regular season there would be no thought of calling upon them for work tonight but the Bruins are fighting with their backs to the wall and if the Boston management figure that the injured players are in shape to make a contribution toward the success of the team they will be in there, regardless of their injuries. The edge certainly goes to the Leafs who have fifteen players in first-class condition to hurl at the invaders and who have the pep and drive and high morale that comes from a complete triumph such as they registered over the Ross men on Tuesday night.

* * * * * *

Last week this column picked a N.H.L. team composed of players who had been passed over completely by the selectors who named the Canadian Press All-Star first and second teams. Our six were Davy Kerr of the Rangers goal, Seibert of the Black Hawks and Goodfellow of Detroit as the defence pair and Schmidt, Bruins, centre, Gordie Drillion, Leafs, right wing and Syd Howe, Detroit Red Wings, left wing. All of those players have figured in the cup series games and the six have done about as well as any of the players engaged in the annual classic. Kerr only allowed two goals per game in the three played by the Rangers, Goodfellow was a tower of strength to the Red Wings until he hurt his elbow and Seibert's crashing body checks were the biggest factor in knocking the Canadiens out of the running. As for the forwards, Howe figured in the winning goal in both Detroit triumphs, Schmidt has been one of Boston's best, scoring two goals for the Bruins, and Drillon has not done bad by himself for the Leafs.

* * * * * *

The doubleheader in the playoff series of the Ladies' Basketball League in the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium tomorrow night should produce the most thrilling basketball of the season in the gals' loop. The setup in both games has the team which finished on the higher rung in the regular schedule battling for its existence tomorrow night. In the clash for the senior championship Quaker Aces who wound up on the top of the heap are now down a game to the Westclox team and another loss Friday night will eliminate them and give the Clockmakers the championship. On the other hand of course a win for the Aces will make a third game to decide the title necessary. The situation is the same in the series for the junior laurels. The third-place Y Gym team were beaten by the St. John's team, fourth-placers, in the first game of the playoffs last week and they too will be out in the cold unless they can even up the series by stopping the church team tomorrow. The junior title battle will be staged at 8 o'clock and the senior tilt at 9 o'clock.

* * * * * *

The Peterborough junior hockey squad did not succeed in winning their own group this winter but at least they managed to set some kind of a record by finishing over $400 in the red. To get that deep in a three-club group is certainly hitting a new low for the course. The explanation is to be found in a combination of high expenses and decidedly small gate receipts. The Petes juniors never did succeed in selling themselves to the fans during the past season and despite the fact that they managed to get into the group playoffs and run the final round into five games the customers stayed away in droves. It was one of the worst junior seasons in local history, so far as the financial end was concerned.

* * * * * *

On the eve of the first Kingston-Owen Sound game Scribe Bill Walshe of the Kingston Whig-Standard indulged in a little reminiscent ballyhoo about the hockey record of the Limestone City. It's interesting at that so here it is: "Kingston tonight starts a final series with Owen Sound in an effort to bring the thirteenth O.H.A. title to the city, since the provincial organization started championship play in 1895. The Senior O.H.A. crown was captured by Kingston teams in 1895, '96, '97, '99 and 1908. R.M.C. won the intermediate title in 1931. The O.H.A. junior laurels came here in 1904, '10 and '26 and the Junior B honors were captured by a Kingston club in 1938. The Senior B, Intermediate B and Junior C titles, all introduced in the last ten years, have not been won by Kingston although the Combines hope to capture the Senior B this season and their prospects appear good. Kingston teams have been in 22 O.H.A. finals, reaching the championship round for the Senior B honors in 1930, the first season the series was introduced, only to be beaten out by Hamilton. Victory in the present series would extend the honor roll in O.H.A. play for Kingston, which now proudly compares with any community of its size in the province. Only Toronto has a better hockey record in the O.H.A. than Kingston."

* * * * * *

It looks very much as if the saliva test should be applied to the Kingston and Owen Sound hockey teams. Tuesday night the two clubs met at Kingston in the first of a four-of-seven final series for the Senior B championship and the boys from the north won going away by 8 goals to 2. Last night playing on the same ice the Combines defeated Owen Sound 7 to 0 to even the series. Just why the same two teams playing two games on successive nights in the same rink could show such a startling reversal of form is a matter for the experts to decide. One explanation is that twenty-four hours in Kingston is enough to demoralize any man's hockey club. The other is that the Combines have had some inexplicable letdowns all season. They were beaten here 11 to 3 one night and they lost games on their own ice to Whitby and Belleville, two clubs they easily defeated at other times.

There will be plenty of action in the Y.M.C.A. swimming pool Friday night when eight public school swimming teams will battle it out for the Examiner trophy. All six city public schools and Confederation and May's Schools in North Monaghan will be represented by teams and the competition is expected to be decidedly keen. Altogether there will be fifteen events on the card. The winning team will hold the Examiner trophy for a year and in addition there will be crests as individual prizes for swimmers finishing first, second and third in the various competitons. The meet will get under way at 7.30 o'clock and the tadpoles should put on quite a show as they battle for the championship. In addition to the school events Al Marshall will make an attempt to beat the 100-yard breast-stroke record, the professional divers, Chris Hayes and Stew Heffernan will perform and the senior Y swimming club will give an exhibition.

City Five-Pin League Ends Tonight

The pin-boys at Duffus' Alleys will have to do a double shuffle act between 8:30 and 10 o'clock tonight when 60 City League bowlers take the drives to wind up their twenty-two weeks' schedule which commenced last October. The twelve teams which comprise the loop will be out at full strength, each outfit with an eye on the payoff of a substantial amount of prize money which is being handed out all the way down to the last team.

The Kinsmen are matched against Peterborough Lock on 5 and 6 alleys, Tamblyns vs Nationals on 7 and 8, Raine's vs Huffman's on 9 and 10, Green's vs New Centre on 11 and 12, Big Five vs Westclox on 13 and 14 and Grafton's vs Capitols on 15 and 16.

Due to the arrangement of prizes each of the above contests has a money angle attached to it and should be packed full of action. The main attraction of the evening will be the meeting of the first and second place teams, Tamblyn's vs Nationals, the outcome of which will decide the winners of the City League title for the season. A solitary point divides the two outfits at present, Tamblyn's being in the driver's seat with 67 to their credit while the Nationals have posted 66 so far. It is the closest finish for this league in years. Loaded to the hilt with pocket hitters and dead shots on corner pins those two teams can wreck things if they don't get too eager in their efforts to win.

Another issue at stake, and an important one, will be Jack Platt's ability to hold his 243 high average. Playford of Nationals and Firth of Grafton's are hot on his trail with 241 and 240 each. In the high three division it will take a super-human effort to beat "Bud" Weese's 965 rolled last week while Irvin Hanes' long standing 427 single should weather a lot of belting.

MARLBOROS DROP SECOND BATTLE 3-2 TO MONTREAL ROYALS

3 to 2 Drubbing Sees Pair Go To Acheson

TORONTO, March 27 — (CP). — Montreal Royals, who started off their series with Toronto Marlboros only a hop, skip and jump away from the Eastern Senior Amateur Hockey Final, needed only to complete the jump part of the performance today to land in the section's final bracket.

Royals fashioned the first two steps with comparative ease, winning the first game of their best-of-five series 3-1 in Montreal Monday, and then topping the Marlboros 3-2 here last night before 5,000 fans. A victory in the third game in Montreal Saturday night would send Royals into the final against either Sydney Millionaires or Hull Volants, with the Millionaires their likely opponents.

Only in the first period last night did the Montrealers have any trouble coping with Marlboros, who opened this scoring on a goal by Johnny Inglis in the sixth minute of play. Royals scored twice in the second session and then the teams split a pair of goals in the final period.

Odds Drop 6-5

Bettors in the "Bull Ring" at the Maple Leaf Gardens made Royals 15-10 favorites before the game, but shifted the odds to 6-5 in favor of Marlboros after the first period. But the Toronto team wasn't able to uphold this show of confidence.

Ronnie Perowne tied the score in the eighth minute and in the 16th minute Johnny Acheson scored the first of his two goals. Acheson's second period tally came on a definite break when misfortune rapped at Defenceman Bob Copp of Marlboros.

Copp, alone on the defence and with the puck in his possession, stumbled and fell. Jimmy Haggarty of Royals pounced on the puck and passed to Acheson, who had a clear road to Goalie Baz Bastien's net.

Acheson's next score, which proved the winning counter, came while Royals were shorthanded. The winger finished off a play with Russ McConnell, while Defenceman Bill Davies was off on one of his four third period penalties. Davies received five minors in all.

Acheson's second goal came just a minute and 13 seconds from the end of the game. With only 21 seconds remaining George Imlach finished the scoring by whipping a hot 20-footer past Bill Durnan, Royal's netminder, who played last season with the Allan Cup champions, Kirkland Lake Blue Devils.

Land Of The Sky Tourney Starts

ASHEVILLE, N.C., March 27 — (AP).—The $5,000 "Land of the Sky" open golf tournament, a great place for a sick man in its previous two years, will get under way at the Biltmore Forest Country Club course today with at least three prominent candidates to uphold that precedent.

Dick Metz won the first tournament here two years ago while under treatment for the 'flu. Last March it was Ben Hogan, who was considerably below physical and golf course par in setting a new Asheville record of 273 for 72 holes.

This time the "invalids" are Metz again, just recovering from a sinus attack; P.G.A. Champion Byron Nelson, who had an attack of what he feared was appendicitis on his way up here from his Greensboro victory; and Samuel Jackson Snead, the north-south champion. Snead complained of a pain in his chest.

To provide international flavor, there are Snead, who won the Canadian open while on his honeymoon last year; Martin Pose of Argentina who, besides being a champion at home, holds (and probably will for some time to come) the French open crown won in 1939, and Jim Ferrier, who won the last pre-war Australian open and amateur titles and who will take on a pro job next month at Chicago.

Bruins Tossing Cowley Out To Stop Leafs

TORONTO, March 27 — (CP). — Boston statisticians had plenty of figures available today to show why —in their opinion—that it isn't logical that Toronto Maple Leafs can beat the Bruins tonight and take undisputed command of the semi-final series for the Stanley Cup.

To gain a 2-1 lead in games in the round, the Leafs have spanked the National Hockey League champions 5-3 in Boston and on Tuesday night here they won 7-2. It was the first time since last December that the Bruins had lost two

If they win again tonight it would be three in a row and Boston statisticians argue that such proceedings just can't be recorded. To make their contentions more convincing the book-thumbers point to the fact that when the Leafs bumped the Bruins Tuesday night it was the third defeat in the last 35 starts for the Boston club.

The statistical findings didn't worry the Leafs as they realized a win tonight would put them in the driver's seat while a loss would put them back where they started a week ago.

Cowley To Try It

In the ranks of the Boston players the most encouraging news was Manager Art Ross' announcement that Bill Cowley, the team's ace playmaker, will be in action tonight. His knee, injured in the first game which the Bruins won 3-0, Cowley missed the last two fixtures.

Additional good news in the Boston camp was that little Bobby Bauer will be in uniform again.

Return of Cowley caused no alarm in Leaf circles—all the Toronto bosses hoped was that Cowley wouldn't be as effective as their own Syl Apps in his return to action.

Tonight's probably lineups:

Boston:		Toronto:
Brimsek	goal	Broda
Clapper	defence	McDonald
Smith	defence	Hamilton

Wings Favored To Oust Chicago Hawks

DETROIT, Mar. 27 — (CP). — Detroit's Red Wings, confident they will meet the survivor of the Boston-Toronto series in the Stanley Cup finals, were made heavy favorites to take Chicago Black Hawks in the opening game to-night of their best-of-three semi-final round.

The Wings, packed with youthful players, emerged from their opening round in which they triumphed over New York Rangers, last year's Cup holders, with a minimum of injuries. Detroit won from the Patrickmen in a three-game series, capturing two games at home 2-1 and 3-2, while losing in New York 3-1.

Only playing-coach Ebbie Goodfellow, veteran Wing defence star, figures to be out of to-night's opener. While Goodfellow, who has an injured left elbow and who in Tuesday's game against the Rangers here, hurt a knee, may not perform, the Red Wings looked back upon their record with Chicago in the regular season and figured they were safe.

Ebbie may be ready for duty in the second game in Chicago on Sunday night along with Eddie Wares, star young right winger who has been laid up almost three weeks with an injury. In to-night's game rookie Harold Jackson from Indianapolis of the American Hockey League, a Detroit farm, will serve in Goodfellow's place.

The Black Hawks, who advanced to the semi-finals in a series that followed the pattern of the Wings—winning from Montreal Canadiens—with two victories at home and a loss in Montreal, presented little trouble to Detroit over the regular National Hockey League season.

Won Six, Only Lost Two.

The Red Wings won six and lost two games against Chicago, scoring 20 goals to 10 for the Hawks.

Bettors have installed Detroit a 9-5 favorite to win their first game and 7-5 to win the semi-final round. Many hockey men expect a tight series, with probably few goals.

Despite all the good things being said about his Wings, Manager Adams is keeping his finger crossed. "The worst about my team is that it is unpredictable," he said.

Manager Paul Thompson said in Chicago that he hopes to have his injured forwards, Bill Thoms and Bill Carse, available for Sunday night's game. Thoms has a skate cut on his leg and Carse is hampered by a pulled leg muscle.

Probable lineups:

Chicago.		Detroit.
Lo Presti	Goal.	Mowers
Mackay	Defende.	Orlando
Seibert	Defence.	Stewart
Dahlstrom	Centre.	Grosso
Allen	Wing.	Jennings
Papike	Wing.	Abel

Humane Society Annual Set For April 3rd

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Humane Society will be held on Thursday, April 3, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 8 p.m.

All animal lovers are cordially invited to attend and to offer suggestions for the betterment of the work being done locally by the Humane Society. The guest speaker will be Alex Kay, well known local naturalist.

The scope of the society could be greatly enlarged if it had larger revenue. Its only sources of revenue at present are an annual grant of $150 by the City of Peterborough, and an annual tag day, which last May totalled slightly over $400.

It goes without saying that the Humane Society cannot go on employing the services of a full inspector with yearly total revenues of approximately $550.

Need Is Great.

The need for more humane protection of animals has never been greater, and it is hoped that the whole population of the city and district will rally to the support of the society, and lend it generous support when its annual tag day is held on Saturday, May 3.

A good deal of misconception exists regarding the duties of the Humane Society. For instance if an animal is injured on the street and taken to the Humane Society shelter it stands to reason that if there is no identification mark on the animal, the Society Inspector cannot do anything but destroy it in the society's highly efficient electrical disposal chamber, unless it is claimed by the owner, or sold to someone.

There are a great many dogs running at large without any dog tag license and when one is injured it is taken to the Humane Society shelter.

All Dogs Should Be Tagged.

All dog owners could co-operate with the society by not letting their dogs run at large unless they carry a license tag. This would simplify the work of the society and would do away with many misunderstandings which occur from time to time.

A farmer was taken in charge by the police last Saturday, after the condition of the horse he had driven into town and tied up behind the Bank of Montreal on Water street was reported to the police. Chief Newhall got in touch with the president of the Humane Society, as the inspector was laid up at the time. A party who assists the inspector from time to time secured the services of another veterinary surgeon. The case is still pending in court.

RAF Naval Arm Rescues Scores At Sea

LONDON, March 27 — In the stepped-up sea and air warfare that is raging around the coasts of the British Isles, British and enemy airmen and seamen often are saved from death at sea by the vital but little known naval arm of the Royal Air Force.

Off the coasts of Great Britain and Northern Ireland this fleet of small ships works day and night in the face of enemy bombs and machine-gun attacks, mountainous seas, exposure and sometimes sheer monotony.

Under the command of Sir Frederick (Ginger) Bowhill they form a valuable support for every activity of the coastal command. Bomber, fighter and reconnaissance crews rely on them hourly for every service, from refuelling their planes at sea to rescuing balled-out airmen.

Strangely enough, it is practice and not real warfare that calls for "suicide" crews in the personnel of the R.A.F. naval arm. These squads operate armored target boats for bombing practice.

Get Special Pay

Paid special "danger money" to "stay put" while they are bombed, the men look more like automobile racers than seafarers. They wear crash-helmets and ear-plugs, and live aboard in small steel cabins which are part of each ship's three and one-half tons of armor. While R.A.F. planes practicing overhead try to hit them with a rain of 12-pound bombs, the target boats whisk to and fro on a crazy "jitter-bug" course.

The force of the bombs frequently overturns one of these strange craft. The crew then wriggles out, rights its floating target and signals to the airmen to bomb again.

This miniature navy also includes seaplane tenders, flying-boat refuellers each with a capacity of 2,500 gallons of gasoline, bomb scows, trawler and drifter auxiliaries, mooring boats, sailing vessels and fast dinghies.

The refuelling boats are called upon to go out and immediately service every Sunderland, Lerwick, Stranraer or Saro London flying-boat as it returns from coastal patrol.

Better known to the British public, however, because of their spectacular work, are the 63-foot rescue ships propelled by three Napier area-engines of 500 h.p. They have a top speed of 40 m.p.h., which can be maintained for twelve hours or long enough to cover 500 miles. At cruising speed, which is 32 m.p.h., the range is much greater.

Answering radio calls from aircraft far at sea, these fast craft have picked up hundreds of British and enemy airmen and seamen after plane crashes and disasters by mine, bomb and torpedo. Under all sorts of trying conditions, they often have been stranded for days far out in the North Sea or the Atlantic.

A young sub-lieutenant on the rescue ships' English Channel beat recently described German flying-boats cruising up and down the French coast as "disconcerting."

"On a rescue job in the direction of Calais," he said, "one wonders how near they will permit us to approach without taking action. But they mind their own business—which is the same as ours—though they are near enough at times to engage us within a minute or so if they desire."

Press Ontario Use Surplus On Food For U.K.

TORONTO, March 27 — (CP). — Another plea that the Government use its $12,600,000 surplus to buy foodstuffs for Britain was before Ontario Legislature Wednesday. W. B. Reynolds (Con., Leeds) made the suggestion during the budget debate Tuesday, taking the same argument advanced by previous speakerds that such purchases would help Britain and the "hard-pressed" farmers of this country.

The veteran member from Brockville was one of four speakers heard yesterday. George Dunbar (Con., Ottawa South) opposed the construction of four-lane highways during war because such projects drew labor from both the farms and industry.

W. L. Miller (Lib., Algoma-Manitoulin) urged the Department of Land and Forests to grant deeds, instead of yearly licenses of occupation, to those Americans and Canadians who wish to build summer homes on crown lands in the north.

A declaration that magistrates should be above influence was made by E. A. MacGillivray (Lib., Glengarry) when he approved of a bill now under consideration to give permanency to magistrates after they have been in office for two years.

Mr. MacGillivrary said it was "nauseating" to him to have a person approach him for the purpose of "fixing" court charges. The administration of justice should be removed from politics immediately, he declared.

Be Boon To Farmers

Mr. Reynolds said that Premier Hepburn had repeatedly stated he stands for an all-out war effort and he was prepared to give him credit for consistently making available to the Dominion Government numerous public buildings. As a provincial treasurer, the Premier had brought in a financial statement showing a surplus.

"To what better purpose could a portion of this surplus be put than in the purchase of foodstuffs from the hard-pressed farmers for presentation to the heroic people of Great Britain as a free gift from this province," he said.

Mr. Reynolds also urged a reduction in the flat rate of Hydro to rural consumers.

"There are 168 miles of Hydro lines and we have only 1,139 customers," he continued. "If the rate to these rural consumers was reduced to three cents, you would not only have the present consumers using more current, but there would be many new customers who undoubtedly would be then able to afford Hydro service.

"If there was more light at a lesser price, the people would be more content to stay on their farms and goodness knows we need them there," he concluded.

Save Trapped Boy

LONDON, March 27—(CP). — A four-year-old boy who was trapped for three days in his bomb-wrecked home was recovering today in a hospital but was so terrified he could not talk of his experience.

His parents were killed when a bomb demolished a block of flats. Workers clearing up the debris hastened their work after hearing a faint cry. Finally they unearthed a cupboard and within it, unhurt, the boy.

Militia Plans Bingo Night

Peterborough is to see the largest bingo game in the history of the city, and perhaps as large as any in the Dominion. The 4th Field Battery and the Prince of Wales Rangers have decided to hold a bingo game in the Armory on the night of April 5, the proceeds to go to the battery and regimental funds in the proper proportion.

The officers of both units are anxious that the public understand that the funds with which they carry on during a training season, with respect to the entertainment of the men, must be raised by the unit involved. A reasonable amount of recreation is sought for the men by all commanding officers, and, to provide this, funs are necessary.

Good prizes are being procured for the occasion, and bingo winners will not be the only ones to reap the harvest of the prize committee's efforts, for splendid draw prizes are to be offered and all buying tickets, whether at the Armory that night or not, will have a chance.

It is expected, by the members of both units, that the money realized in this direction will be sufficient to see them through the next training season, and plans are being laid making provision for the accommodation of a huge crowd in the building for the event.

Vags And Drunks Terms Cost $7,766 In 1940

Chief Constable Newhall remarked a short time ago that if the county authorities would begin "kicking about the expense" in jail costs of a local group of confirmed drunkards who have a miserable routine of police court appearances followed by terms "on the hill" something out of the ordinary might be done about it.

That is just a general idea which might point more or less hopefully to reformation, enforced useful work, or some other drastic measures to make them useful citizens, especially as the country has need of their help to win the war.

Reeve Melville H. Johnston of North Monaghan read the report of Chief Newhall's statement, clipped it out, and brought it to the attention of the county council Tuesday.

Miss Jennie Batten, county clerk and treasurer, furnished the following pertinent information to the council about prisoner-days at the jail last year and how the cost was apportioned.

The total number of prisoner-days was 6,463 of which 1,499 were days in jail by all the prisoners committed for indictible offenses, and 4,964 were prisoner-days for those who were committed summarily from the magistrate's court for vagrancy and drunkenness and so-called minor offenses in that category of delinquency.

The total cost of prisoner upkeep was $8,878, and the government paid $1,112 for the confinement of those who were sent up for indictible offenses, and the remaining $7,766 was charged to the city and county for vags and drunks, regulars and occasionals, who pass through the police court.

According to Reeve Johnston's report of Chief Newhall's comments the company of regulars has no ambition to work. Some of them, it was said, get a job for a short time, blow the money on booze, and end up with a month in jail. And there is considerable repetition of that waste and inescapable woe.

Nothing was said in this recital of the other "vags" and drunks whom the police often lock up at the police station over night and then turn them loose in the morning. The council heard only the story behind those fact of 4,964 prisoner-days in 1940 that cost the city and county $7,766.

It as suggested that probably similar conditions exist in most of the other communities of this size throughout the province, and the county council is wondering whether the city would be willing to help in "starting something" to correct this unfortunate condition. The phrase "concentration camp" was used in the brief discussion, and also a vague proposal that something could surely be done to reclaim these men, especially at a time when they are simply a total loss to the community and country that needs man power.

A resolution by Reeve Johnston, seconded by Deputy-reeve Archibald, appointed a special committee composed of Reeve Rork Ferguson, Reeve P. J. Mather and Warden Seeney to draft a general resolution urging action by the legislative authorities to check that local cost of $7,766 a year for vagrants and drunks, and that copies of the resolution be sent to other councils asking for their co-operation.

Reeve Ferguson said he understood the number of offenders was about equally divided between the city and county. "It seems to me that what we need is some change in the legislation that will give the magistrates more power to deal with these people. They either won't work or they spend their money on drink, then they come up here and we've got to keep them for a month or so and press their clothes, and when they get out it isn't long until some of them are back here again."

Queen Alexandra Pupils In Lead

Queen Alexandra leads the Public Schools of Peterborough in percentage of penny bank deposits in relation to attendance for January and February.

The local standing of schools for those two months was: Queen Alexandra, 88 per cent; King Edward, 71; King George, 48; Central, 43; Confederation, 41; Queen Elizabeth, 39; Queen Mary, 28; Prince of Wales, 27; May's, 25.

The total amount of penny bank savings on deposit at the end of February was $14,831.36, as compared with $18,494.86. The decline is said to be caused by the purchase of War Savings Stamps by the school children.

Total deposits at the end of February was $1,316,722.85 by 528 schools as compared with $1,451,-861.63 a year ago by 522 schools.

Training Camp Welcomes 5 New Officers

Five officers of the former staff of the Brockville Canadian Army Training Centre who were transferred to Peterborough following the conversion of the Brockville Centre into an officers' training centre for Eastern Canada, were officially welcomed into the officers' mess of the Training Centre here on Wednesday evening by Lt.-Col. E. O. Keeler, M.C., V.D., officer commanding the Peterborough Centre.

The occasion was the first mess dinner held since the officers of the Centre here returned from Cornwall, and the occasion was one long to be remembered. The dinner followed a reorganization of the mess committee of the Centre made necessary through the loss of eleven officers who were on the Centre staff prior to February 10 when the officers and non-commissioned officers of the Centre left here for a five weeks' course at Cornwall.

Elect New President.

Four officers of the former staff left to join the 4th Reconnaissance unit of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards and later six others left to join an advanced artillery training centre at Petawawa. Among the officers who left during the interval were Major H. H. Brown, who until the time of his transfer was president of the officers' mess of the Centre and Lieut. C. S. K. Bingham, who until the time of his transfer was secretary of the mess. At the reorganization meeting held previous to the dinner, Major Lorne Johnson was elected president of the mess, 2nd Lieut. W. A. Bowerman was retained as vcie-president, and Lieut. J. A. Haskell was elected secreatry-treasurer.

At the dinner which followed the tables were effectively decorated with spring blooms, a product of the greenhouse of Rev. Captain V. E. R. Zufelt, Protestant chaplain to the Centre.

Following the dinner the officers were addressed by Major Johnson, president-elect, who called upon Lt.-Col. E. O. Keeler to officially welcome the new officers.

Lt.-Col. Keeler, in addressing the new officers, stated he hoped the latest addition to the officer personel would enjoy their stay at Peterborough. The officer commanding paid tribute to the work of the officers who had been transferred since the opening of the Cornwall course. Up until the time of their transfer all had been happy in their surroundings at Peterborough, and all of them had proved efficient in their work. The new officers, Col. Keeler stated, would find Peterborough a fine city and the Centre was set in pleasant surroundings.

High Standard Set.

The Peterborough Centre in the past had maintained a high standard among the Centres of Canada for efficiency and he was confident the new officers would do their utmost to uphold that standing. Col. Keeler voiced the thanks of the officers of the mess for the excellent gift of cut flowers donated to the mess by Rev. Captain Zufelt. The padre had been most generous during the winter with flowers for the dining tables in the officers' quarters, and Col. Keeler stated their presence on the table added greatly to the pleasure of the officers.

Rev. Captain Zufelt, in a short address, spoke of pleasure it gave him to be in a position to give the flowers, and also took the opportunity of extending his welcome to the new officers and also to those who had returned from Cornwall and who were formerly on the staff of the Centre. Captain Rev. Father Grant, Catholic chaplain to the Centre, also extended a few words of welcome to the former officers and the newcomers, bringing to a close one of the most enjoyable dinners since the Centre opened in October.

The 16-foot cedar strip canoe donated by J. B. O'Dette and Sons, boat builders, is now on display in the big north window of the Peterborough Examiner and tickets are still available on this fine prize.

Adjourn Charges Against Drover

Fifteen charges against Alex. Leaitch, Asphodel cattle drover of having obtained livestock from farmers in Asphodel, Belmont, Dummer and Douro under false pretences were adjourned by consent until April 8 when they were called before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

Leaitch was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C.

It was intimated that some of the charges against Leaitch might be dropped and others substituted.

The court room was crowded with farmers interested in the cases and prepared to give evidence if called upon to do so.

Pre-Fabricated Houses Will Be Needed Here In Opinion Of C.G.E. Mayor Hamilton Is Told

"Ian McRae seems to think we will need some of these houses," Mayor Hamilton commented to the Examner this morning in regard to the government's willingness to allot 300 of the pre-fabricated dwelling to Peterborough to provide emergency accommodation.

This question is on the slate for to-night's meeting of the council, and for the purpose of accurate information Mayor Hamilton went down to the C.G.E. plant Wednesday afternoon and talked over the employment prospects of the next few months.

Indian Style

London, March 27 (CP)

BRITISH troops in training for an invasion of Europe demonstrated their amphibian technique today with assault boats resembling in design the birchbark war canoes once used by American Indians.

The boats are so light they can be portaged by four men. In a drill demonstration at the school for amphibian shock troops, soldiers leaped aboard, knelt in position, took up paddles and sped away.

Three Vags Are Sent To Jail

Three transients, all of them fairly well known here, appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court today to face liquor charges.

James Scotty Maguire lined up as a first offendered drunk, pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs. He will take the ten days alternative.

Michael O'Brien, who said he hailed from the Cobourg district faced the same charge, gave the same plea and received the same punishment.

Andrew Ryan, elderly wanderer, did not fare so well. He too was charged with drunkenness but it was the second offence in his case. Ryan had some difficulty in remembering the previous conviction but when Magistrate Langley announced that he would be remanded until tomorrow to give the police a chance to prove it, he admitted that he had been so convicted.

Accordingly as a second offender he was fined $50 and costs or a month in jail. So that April will be nearly over before Comrade Ryan makes another appearance on local streets.

Lady Detective Demoted For Bar Fracas

NEW YORK, March 27—(AP).—Mary A. Shanley, 39, celebrated captor of Manhattan pickpocket, lost her rank of first-grade detective on Wednesday and was suspended to await departmental trial as police officials investigated the circumstances surrounding the firing of her service revolver in a Queens bar.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine reduced Miss Shanley—one of New York's two first-grade women detectives—to the rank of policewoman, with an automatic reduction of $1,000 from her $4,000-a-year salary. He also instructed a police captain to determine why she had not been placed under arrest.

Miss Shanley was suspended on charges of having been "found unfit for duty due to verindulgence in some intoxicating agent or agents," and having "fired her gun without just cause."

Emil Wicke, proprietor of a bar, told police that Miss Shanley, who holds a citation for bravery and was praised by Mayor LaGuardia as "a credit to the force" when he elevated her to the post of detective in 1937, entered his bar at 3 o'clock and demanded a drink.

He was quoted by police as saying he declined to serve her, that she then proceeded to the end of the bar where four men were talking and suddenly fired a shot that struck the front of the bar. The men made a hasty exit.

Miss Shanley told detectives that one of the men at the bar had insulted her and reached in his pocket as though for a gun. She said that she thereupon pulled her revolver out of her pocket and that it discharged accidentally.

Miss Shanley, who is married but uses her maiden name, was not on duty at the time of the incident.

Rylston Group Raises Relief Money

CAMPBELLFORD, March 27. —(ENS).—Rylston goes over the top to the amount of $167.25. Rylston is not a town nor even a village, but a good average rural community yet it went over the top Friday evening to the amount of $167.25 at the programme given in the Orange Hall at Petherick's Corners in aid of the British War Victims' Fund. At an open meeting of the Rylston Women's Institute the previous Friday evening the idea was suggested. A committee was nominated, consisting of Ernest Irwin, chairman, Wilfrid Spencer, treasurer, F. M. Rutherford, Fred Barnum and Victor Irwin.

The committee met the following Monday night and arranged to hold the programme on Friday evening, just four days later. This meant all preparations had to be done in a short period of time. A canvass was made for prizes and donations. These were contributed by the business men and merchants of Campbellford and the people of the community. Also donations of farm produce, butter, eggs, honey, fruit, apples, dressed poultry, home cooking and even a live rooster. The donations came in generously and after prizes had been distributed for certain numbers on the programme all the rest was auctioned by J. R. Battisby, local auctioneer of Campbellford, assisted by Nell Morrison and Abram Rappaport.

The programme, under the supervision of F. M. Rutherford, opened with "The Maple Leaf Forever," followed by "There's Always Be An England," sung by Bruce Barnum, with the crowd joining in the chorus. Then followed humorous stunts, a quizz, an amateur programme, old time fiddlers' contest with a hilarious square dance finale, nail-driving and tap-dancing contest.

Tickets were sold on an occasional chair, which was won by Mrs. J. Simpson. The door prize, $1.50 in war savings stamps, was won by Mrs. Elvin Pollock

All services were given gratuitously, including the use of the hall by Sentinel L.O.L. 2322. Thus making it possible for all money received to be turned into the fund.

The committee deserves great credit for the expeditious and efficient manner in which they carried the evening to such a successful conclusion.

BOYS' SENSE OF HUMOR

Boys of Belgium cut holes in the top of their berets, then place a carrot through the hole to resemble the spiked helmets of the German Staff, and whenever an officer is spotted they spring to attention then solemnly goosestep backwards.

BABY'S

TEETHING UPSETS QUICKLY CHECKED

YOUR BABY must "get a tooth". But he need not get a fever with it—if baby's mother is wise he won't.

Here is what one wise mother, Mrs. Archie Begbie, of Consecon, has to say: "We have not lost one night's rest through teething as I always use my old standby, Baby's Own Tablets. They are worth their weight in gold."

And Mrs. B. A. Sebine, of Galt, Ont., says: "I have given Baby's Own Tablets to my baby girl since she was three weeks old and, although she cut her teeth rapidly (all four molars at once) she has never yet wakened us at night. I would not be without these tablets."

Give these safe, sweet-tasting tablets at the first sign of teething fever. Easy to take, prompt in action, yet safe. Analyst's certificate in every package.

Also effective in Constipation, Simple Fever, Diarrhoea, Upset Stomach, Colic, Simple Croup and Fretfulness. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

RCAF Signaller Tells Of Visit To Windsor

HAVELOCK, March 27 (Special)—According to a letter received by A. C. Denike of Havelock, a big event to his nephew R.C.A.F. Signal Officer Emerson H. Denike of Winnipeg, a member of the first contingent of R.C.A.F. signal officers to go overseas after being trained under the Commonwealth Air Training Scheme, was an invitation to his company, shortly after their arrival in England, to a reception at Windsor Castle.

They were shown over the estate and the old buildings, etc., and then to the reception hall, where they were received by the Queen and the Princesses. He is a devoted admirer of each and all of them. The Queen questioned Signal Officer Denike, who graduated in mineralogy from the Manitoba College, about Flin Flon and his life and work there. He admired very much their three house dogs and pets and that won the Princesses, who told him of their dogs and pets and gave each man a souvenir card.

R.C.A.F. Signal Officer Denike is the son of W. N. Denike, a retired school inspector of Winnipeg, and trained in Winnipeg and Toronto.

Ennismore News

Among Ennismore's older residents whom we regret are confined to their homes due to ill-health are Mrs. Maurice O'Connor, Sr., Mrs. P. G. Crowley, Mrs. Eugene Murphy, Mrs. Mary Harrington, Mr. Maurice Twomey, Mr. John Mahoney and Mr. John Gannon—Mrs. John Killen of Peterborough has been with her mother, Mrs Eugene Murphy, while Mr. Gannon has with him his daughter, Mrs. Thompson of New York.

Mr. P. J. Maloney of Detroit and son Jack were visitors with friends here during the week. Mr. Maloney is the son of the late Eugene Maloney of Ennismore, and we might recall the fact that he was a Flight-Lieutenant during the First Great War, and a winner of the Military Cross.

HASTINGS

T. A. Coughlan In Business Thirty Years

HASTINGS, March 27—(ENS).—A son of the first white child born in Hastings, T. A. Coughlan, Hastings druggist and jeweller, is marking 30 years in business this month.

Situated on Front Street, the Coughlan store has survived the leaving of four other druggists who came and went in the three decades. The store is the main centre of the village, for one can "cure that headache," have his watch adjusted, pay his telephone bill, or Hydro bill, buy a railway ticket to Winnipeg, sell the Separate School eight cords of body hardwood, or buy himself a magazine. T.A., as he is known to friends, is a man of many municipal and business activities.

Prominent Lacrosse Player.

Back in the days when Hastings was noted for its fine lacrosse players, T.A. took a hand in leading the locals to many victories on the field. About the years 1903-4 he hit his stride as a baseball player and football player as well. "At one field day, I played all three games, and wasn't very tired after it either," he recalled.

Mr. Coughlan attended the Ontario College of Pharmacy about 1908 after serving one year's apprenticeship with William Bert in Hastings, and four years with E. W. Boyle in London, Ontario. Following his graduation, he was in Eaton's dispensary at Toronto for a time and spent about six months with Tamblyn's in Toronto. "At that time Tamblyn's had but three stores. Now they have possibly fifty or sixty," he said. "I spent about two years with the Strong Drug Co. in Cobalt and Haileybury, where I learned something of the jewellery line they carried."

When he returned to Hastings, it was his intention to spend a few days at home and then proceed to Vancouver to start up business. "Taylor Huycke persuaded me to take over a business he operated along with a Mr. Gibson. I introduce a line of drugs to the established line of jewellery and chinaware. That was March 1, 1911, and marked my starting up in business for myself."

"At that time I was appointed local manager of the Bell Telephone Company when there were about 30 'phones in Hastings," he said. Mr. Coughlan has been manager of the Bell for 30 years and the number of telephones has jumped to more than 30 now. "Also in the building, the C.P.R. and G.T.R. railways had telegraph wires. That was the quickest way in those days of learning quickly the results of elections and other news." Mr. Coughlan received and sent wires, but in recent years the system has changed from his hands.

Credit Not So Good.

He expressed the opinion that a man's word was better when he asked for credit several years ago than it is to-day. "We used to let out a good deal of credit, but we have to be more careful in doing that now," he told the Examiner.

"There were hardly any magazines sold when I started business, but the present amount sold is far beyond the figures of 20 or 30 years ago. And there were many more prescriptions sold years ago. To-day people have become accustomed to buying patent medicines."

Mr. Coughlan is secretary-treasurer of the Hastings Hydro Commission, chairman of the Separate School Board, C.P.R. ticket agent, and a former councillor and director of the Trent Waterway Association.

American tourists have found T. A. a valuable source of information with regard to likely fishing spots, for he has fished throughout the district for many years. And in the fall, if T.A. can't direct a group of hunters into the woods for a shot at a deer, then the deer have changed their haunts. Duck shooting has provided another sport for this veteran druggist.

Bancroft News

Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Card of Porterville motored to the home of their daughter, Mrs. McGregor of Pickering, on Monday.

Mrs. A. Jordison of the village does not claim to be an ardent sports woman, but she does lay claim to her game much easier than many hunters. While Mrs. Jordison was down street on Wednesday afternoon her sister, Mrs. James Price, paid her a visit, but finding no response to her knocking, Mrs. Price opened the door and went on into the kitchen. Her first attention was drawn to the window where the glass was broken out, and hearing a peculiar sound glanced around to find to her amazement a plump partridge perched on the table. Mrs. Jordison on returning home got quite a surprise, but feeling sorry for the plight of the bird, she quickly liberated it.

After a two months' illness the death occurred on Saturday, March 15, at the Red Cross Hospital in Bancroft, of Annie Zita Dupuis, the nine-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Dupuis of Maynooth, Ontario. Her death was attributed to encephalitis, following an attack of influenza. The funeral was held on Monday, March 17, to St. Ignatius' Church, at Maynooth, where the service was conducted by the Rev. T. J. Brady, P.P., with interment being made in the Roman Catholic Cemetery. The pall-bearers were Billie, Lawrence, Jack and Gorman Green, all cousins.

HAGGIS OF GREEK ORIGIN

Scotland has just disclosed a link with Greece by admitting that haggis, the pudding composed of edible organs of cheep or calf mixed with chopped onions and oatmeal, is not exclusively Scotch as generally conceded, but really originated in Greece.

Challenge To Leaders

Montreal, March 27 (CP)

WENDELL WILLKIE sounded Tuesday a call to political and business leaders to 'come through' for democracy.

He made his appeal in a three-minute address to a Montreal service club just before attending a luncheon meeting of the Canadian Club of Montreal where he also was to speak.

He told the meeting that "one of the questions before this world today is whether leadership is coming through."

"Political leadership has created this mess that we are in today. We as business leaders—I once was called a business leader—can't be crowned for what we have done in the past 20 years."

"So, as the business leaders of Montreal, I call you to your country and for your liberty," he concluded.

Elgin Branch Spends Whole Day Quilting

HASTINGS, March 27—(ENS).—Mrs. C. Tedford of Norwo , a delegate to the Provincial Red Cross convention in Toronto, was a guest speaker at the Elgin Red Cross gathering held at the home of Mrs. George Richardson on Friday.

The twenty ladies of the neighborhood arrived around 10 a.m. and began working on five beautiful quilts. At noon an appetizing dinner was provided, each one donating towards the menu, after which the ladies again worked and completed the five quilts. Those present were Mrs. R. Leeper, Mrs. H. Tristlewaite, Mrs. H. Lobb, Mrs. H. Buck and Gwendolyn, Mrs. W. Buck and Gretta, Mrs. E. Waters, Mrs. W. Preston, Mrs. J. Fleming, Mrs. D. Kelly, Mrs. Fred O'Grady, Mrs. T. O'Grady, Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe and Frances, Mrs. Horace Brown, Mrs. Max Scott, Mrs. A. Stinson, and Miss Annie Thistlewaite of Toronto.

Tapping To Begin Around Marmora

MARMORA, March 27.—(ENS).—Earl O'Connor and other maple syrup producers in the district have commenced tapping operations. It is expected that the season will be a good one.

The regular monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society was held in the Separate school on Tuesday evening with a good attendance. The president, Vincent Lynch, was in the chair. After a short business session a paper was given by Eugene Brady on 'Origin of Lujon,' followed by a paper by H. A. McNally on 'Aluminum.'

A drawing was held for a cord of wood on which tickets had been sold. The owner of the lucky ticket was found to be Mr. J. Dysall of Kingston. A few games of bingo were played and the meetng adjourned.

Winona Sharpe, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sharpe, selling tickets on a loaf of bread, was recently able to send in $5.65 to the British War Victims' Fund. Mrs. William Darrah was the winner of the drawing.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bradley and family visited relatives in Toronto over the week-end.

Cut The Debate Liberal M.P. Urges In House

TORONTO, March 27—(CP). — The Ontario Government had before it today a plea from one of its own members to bring to a quick conclusion the budget debate in which 13 speakers have been heard and which is now in its second week in the Legislature. The debate continues today and Labor Minister N. O. Hipel, who has been indisposed for the past few days, is expected to participate.

T. A. Blakelock (Lib., Halton) declared in the House yesterday that it was "time to end a debate of this kind." The country was in the midst of "a terrible war," yet in no sense were Canadians war-minded.

"Here we are sitting in comfort and ease and if it wasn't for the newspapers we wouldn't know there was a war on," Mr. Blakelock asserted.

He deplored the fact that some members had the "audacity" to oppose the transfer of the Ontario Agricultural College buildings at Guelph to the Department of National Defence for training of air wireless operators. It had been suggested that other colleges be used or that wooden hutments be built to house the wireless students.

"As far as I am concerned nothing is too good for any man in the King's uniform," he declared.

Time For Repayment.

Wendell Willkie had said that Britain was protecting us, as she has been for years, and it was time, he declared, "to rise to the occasion and do all we can to repay that debt."

W. A. Summerville (Con. Toronto-Riverdale) and T. P. Murray (Liberal Renfrew South) also devoted some remarks to the war. Mr. Summerville suggested that $1,000,000 should be taken from the $12,000,000 surplus and donated to the Canadian War Service Fund.

Mr. Murray declared the Government should inaugurate plans immediately to rehabilitate incapacitated soldiers upon their return from overseas. This work, he added, should be above all "political affiliations."

The Legislature departed from its usual custom of discussing bills on a Wednesday when the illness of Attorney-General Gordon Conant prevented debate on legislation which he is sponsoring. Mr. Conant is not expected back at his desk until next week.

Mr. Summerville said he agreed with Premier Hepburn that this was no time for elections.

"People are not talking elections, not even politics but they are saying 'Let's get on with the war'," he declared. "Forget politics and drive shoulder to shoulder in prosecution fo the war effort."

Aid For Gray-Haired Man.

He pleaded that assistance be extended to the "gray-haired" worker when he was seeking employment. These men were good citizens, and were heartbroken when told they are not wanted.

Mr. Murray declared the problem of caring for soldiers not capable of working at full-time jobs should be tackled immediately "and we should get above political affiliations" in solving it. There should be no talk about a depression after the war. "We should take about the new state of affairs, because in a country like this there should be no depression," Mr. Murray said.

Mr. Blakelock asserted that if it wasn't for the newspapers the people in Canada wouldn't know there was a war on.

Mr. Blakelock advocated a flat rate for rural Hydro users, declaring he couldn't understand why "urban users could get the comfort of Hydro cheaper than those in the rural section."

The Sports Round-Up

By EDDIE BRIETZ, AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK, March 27—(AP).—A 25-year-old Mexican jai-alai star named Izaguirrre settled an old argument by tossing the pelota 97 feet farther than Bill Terry could hit a fungo. Then the Mexican put on the clincher by tossing a baseball 15 feet farther than Bill's hit. ....The touring golfers were suffered to learn Porky Oliver has pneumonia at Fort Dix.

Today's Guest Star:

Lynn C. Doyle, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin: "They're calling Lou Novikoff 'Lou Novocaine' at this writing because of what he's doing to the Cux power output."

Coincidence Dept.

Bruce Barns, golf pro at the Houston Country Club, and Jimmy Demaret, pro at Houston's Brae Burn, are close friends....Each is 30....They are native Texans and both married Houston girls....On April 1 they leave Houston to assume new posts....They take over on the same day—April 15—Bruce at Greenwich, Conn., and Jimmy at Noroton, Conn....Although they will have travelled 2,000 miles from Houston, they still will be only 15 miles apart.

Canada Lee, former Negro fighter, now starring in "Native Son" on Broadway, was christened Leonard Lionel Cornelius Canegata. An announcer for one of the obscure N.Y. fight clubs fixed that one night by introducing L.L.C.C. as Canada Lee. It stuck.

Mebbe it's a coincidence, but the elevators in the Dodgers' headquarters at Safsty Harbor, Fla., are padded.

Sydney Favored To Oust Hull

TORONTO, March 27—(CP). — Just one last obstacle remained on each path today as Sydney Millionaires, bidding to recapture the Maritime hockey glory of Allan Cup years, and Quebec's perennial Montreal Royals raced toward a head-long clash for the Eastern Canada title.

With each leading 2-0 in their respective semi-finals, both need but one more victory to advance into the final. Sydney gets a chance to end their series with Hull Volants, Ottawa and district champions, tonight, while the Royals can polish off Ontario's Toronto Marlboros on Saturday.

The fleet Royals, representing Quebec in cup play for the third straight year, set the stage for a death blow by defeating the Marlboros, 3-2, in Toronto last night after a 3-1 triumph in Montreal. The win left them favored to end the round when the teams swing back to Montreal for the third game Saturday.

The Millionaires, rated the strongest title threat from the Maritimes since the lush years from 1933-1935, when Moncton Hawks and Halifax Wolverines monopolized the Allan Cup, defeated Hull handily in the first two matches at Sydney. Starting tonight the remainder of the series is to be played on Hull's home ice at Ottawa but this is not expected to sway the outcome.

Even if Hull should knot up the round, Sydney has a pair of buried aces. Captain Mel Snowdon, big defenceman, and the starry Dick Kowcinack, both out with injuries recently, are being kept on the sidelines to rest their wounds for just such an eventuality.

Generals Win 9-4.

Oshawa Generals, two-time Dominion champions, featured the Memorial Cup hunt meanwhile by outscoring Toronto Junior Marlboros, 9-4, to tie up their series for the Ontario title. Each club now has won two games, with the ultimate winner of the best-of-seven series advancing into the eastern final.

In the other bracket, Ottawa Canadiens advanced to the semi-final against Montreal Junior Royals, Quebec champions, by defeating Charlottetown Royals, 12-3, at Charlottetown. It was originally the first of a best-of-three series but the Ottawa and district champions were declared winners for their whelming edge.

Food Clearing Accord

VICHY, France, Mar. 27—(AP).—The Paris newspaper Aujourd'Hui says that a clearing accord has been arranged between occupied France and the non-occupied zone for an exchange of food.

The occupied zone will send 800,000 tons of wheat, 100,000 tonus of bran, 200,00 tons of sugar, and 800,000 tons of potatoes, according to the paper, while the unoccupied zone will send 100,000 head of cattle 565,000 sheep, 600,000 pigs and calves 36,000 tons of oil, 100,000 tons of vegetables, 8,000 tons of cheese, and 1,700,000,000 leitres.

It started with our little Phoebe when we were told, "Don't trifle with her feeding. Start her off every day with a bowl of Quaker Oats."

Try to keep anything good from Jim. "That's for Phoebe", I said. "That's for me", he replied. And it's had him singing at breakfast ever since!

As for me—I eat Quaker Oats for its grand nourishment. Jim thinks I have "oomph"! But it's just plenty of vitality and a swell disposition.

● Babies, even in their first years, and growing children need many food factors for normal growth and development. Vitamin B_1 is one of these factors necessary to normal nutrition. Service Stations Are Receiving Overseas Parcels

A letter stating that boxes had been placed in their three Peterborough service stations for the reception of articles of new clothing, blankets, etc., for British War Victims, received from the Imperial Oil Company, was read Wednesday afternoon at the March meeting of 57th Regiment Chapter I.O.D.E. Books, not magazines, may also be left at the stations, and will be sent to the fighting forces. Donors are requested to wrap parcels securely, placing name and address within, and an itemized list of contents on the outside. The work is being handled by the various Peterborough Chapters of I.O.D.E.

The draw for the diamond bracelet on which tickets have recently been sold will be held in Hamilton at the annual meeting of the Provincial Chapter, April 24. Mrs. W. A. Turner, regent, will represent the 57th Chapter.

The Marys of Canada Spitfire Fund has found its way to Peterborough, and everyone whose name is Mary is asked to contribute in silver. All other women are asked to give toward this fund as a tribute to Dowager Queen Mother Mary.

A donation to the Lucy Morrison fund in Hamilton in commemoration of the late Mrs. Morrison, who was the provincial regent, is to be made by 57th Chapter. The fund is to aid in the care of soldiers' children, a work in which the late provincial regent was greatly interested.

Two new members were enrolled at Wednesday's meeting. Gratifying reports were presented by various conveners, and two letters of thanks for Christmas parcels were read from Vernon Outwater and Robert McDougall, now somewhere in England. Announcement was made of a change in meeting days from the last Wednesday of the month to the second Wednesday. Tea was served after the meeting.

Alarming Increase Is Shown In Drinking Among Women

The serious social import of the increase of drinking among women was among the questions that came up for discussion Wednesday afternoon at the March meeting of W.C.T.U. in the Y.W.C.A. Green Room, and figures quoted from Toronto statistics indicated an increase of arrests for drunkenness among women in two twelve month periods, six years apart, of more than 250 per cent.

Women were urged to help in curbing this condition by securing pledges of voluntary total abstinence for patriotic motives, and the suggestion was stressed that the weeks between now and Easter should find thousands of personal workers carrying the appeal to neighbors, friends and acquaintances. Emphasis was laid on effective presentation of the W.C.T.U. motto, "Save and Serve—Don't Drink."

To aid the hotelman in a difficult situation where age is doubted, it was suggested that the bar-tender be supplied with an official card, with a declaration of age, to be signed by any purchaser whose age is doubted, thus checking the minor about to drink. The knowledge of its use would thus keep out of the beverage room most young people under twenty-one years of age.

Mrs. H. T. Rehill was in the chair for the meeting. Convention highlights in connection with recent W.C.T.U. sessions at London, Ont., were presented in an interesting manner by Mrs. A. B. Cunningham. A note of encouragement reported by this delegate was the large attendance of young people, who entered earnestly into discussions. The educational program of the W.C.T.U. was praised during panel debates, she stated.

Mrs. J. H. Rowe, superintendent for Law and Sabbath Observance, presented abstracts from Dominion regulations, pointing out that too often laws were not strictly enforced, including those in our own city, and declaring that "it is the duty of every citizen to help in keeping these laws."

A vocal duet was given by Mrs. Gordon Marshall and Mrs. W. J. Routley, Mrs. G. N. Moncrief was at the piano.

. . . .That buttons are playing a new role in the costume picture this season. Not only will be button up coats, suits and dresses with smart unusual buttons, but the same original design have been ued in companion clips, pins, brooches, zipper pulls and buckles. Smart women wear these on their hats, scarves and bags to ensemble their accessories to their costume.

. . . .Clips "companioning" the button originals on frocks can be worn in the hair at afternoon bridge parties and informal luncheons and dinners where hats come off.

Flags Deck Room For Tea Of St. Paul's Group

A delightful and well attended tea was held in the spacious Sunday School Room of St. Paul's Church from three to six o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. As guests entered, their attention was arrested by the striking arrangement of patriotic flags and ferns and the three tables at which tea was served were gay with large silk flags and silver candlesticks holding red, white and blue candles. Mrs. James Dutton, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, and Mrs. A. T. Barr, received.

Mrs. W. A. Burrell was general convener of the tea, with Mrs. H. C. Sherwood, Mrs. J. W. Gordon, Mrs. W. Brown, Mrs. R. B. McWilliams in charge of tea tables. Hostesses were Mrs. J. H. Jamison, Mrs. H. McKenzie, Mrs. W. L. Ferguson. Group leaders pouring tea included Mrs. O. A. Moore, Mrs. W. Moorhead, Mrs. A. McLeish, Mrs. J. E. Latimer, Mrs. F. Rowan, Mrs. Robert Ross. Assisting to serve were Mrs. W. Taylor, Mrs. R. J. Goring, Mrs. F. Finnie, Mrs. W. S. Hill, Mrs. A. R. Bennett, Mrs. J. Anderson, Miss Rutherford, Mrs. H. M. Paton, Mrs. George Coleman, Jr.

Completed articles, including layettes, an afghan, a pair of wool blankets, quilts, dresses, etc., to be forwarded overseas, were displayed by memebrs of various groups of the society.

The sale of home cooking was under the direction of Mrs. J. Pulkinghorn, and Mrs. E. Currie, and Mrs. T. Hendry was treasurer.

Miss Mary Hanlon, a sixteen-year-old singer who possesses a sweet, full soprano voice that promises a successful career, was heard in two solos, 'Land of Hope and Glory" and "There'll Always Be An England," with Mrs. W. A. Greenslade at the piano.

Young People Put Energy Into War-time Tasks

The contributions of young people of 'teen-age or younger toward Red Cross and other wartime activities all over the country, have added in no small measure to the large total accomplished month by month, and many times it is the enthusiasm with which these young folk approach their tasks that gives older groups of workers new heart.

An example of the teachings imposed by war in which young people are becoming quite proficient is that of knitting, providing much needed wearing apparel for the men in service and the British people. Young business women who would have regarded fashioning frocks for their wardrobes at home, through the use of the family sewing machine, pattern, and pins, as fantastic, have become adventuresome, and are adapting themselves, so that sewing is not a mystery but a useful effort.

When the war is over, and life once more settles down in the normal routine, these young people who have received valuable training in arts, crafts, and home economy, will be well equipped and better prepared for the years ahead than they might possibly have been if life had continued in its usual course.

DO DISHES AS MUCH AS 50% FASTER
This Speedy Way That's So Kind to Your Hands!

HERE'S a quick, easy way of dishwashing that gets dishes so clean lots of people don't bother to wipe them—thus saves you up to 50% on dishwashing time with added safety to hands—thanks to a new "miracle" soap, High-Test OXYDOL.

For this improved granulated soap contains a new SAFE ingredient—and does these amazing things—proved by our laboratory tests against many soaps still used for dishwashing:

(1) Gives up to 3 TIMES THE SUDS. (2) Suds last as much as 2 to 3 times longer. (3) Makes suds in one-sixth the time of washday bar soaps. Rich, quick-acting suds, ready to start to work cutting grease 6 times faster.

This means you get suds almost instantly—don't have to keep hands in hot water so long. Hence far less risk of red, puffy "dishpan" hands. And Oxydol itself is safer for hands than a whole group of popular washday soaps.

What's more, Oxydol leaves no clinging greasy film. You'll be delighted how glassware gleams—dishes sparkle like jewels.

Economical, too—High-Test OXYDOL costs less than ½ of a cent to do an average meal's dishes. So try the new High-Test Oxydol way of dishwashing. Get a package tomorrow.

DOROTHY DIX

Accept Conditions and Make Best of Your Life. There Is Still Lots of Sunshine and Happiness, No Matter What Perverse Circumstances Now Claim You.

Dear Miss Dix—I live in a tourist city in Florida, and when I watch the happy, carefree husbands and wives of my own age, 65, it fills me with bitter resentment and loneliness, not toward them, but toward fate that has left me to struggle on alone, without a home of my own after living so many years secure and happy. If I had money I could still be attractive and perhaps marry, but my position as nurse companion gives me few social contacts and takes away the prestige I once had. I want a home of my own, a car to ride in again, a congenial husband of whom I need not be ashamed, ample security and a chance to do the things I long to do. It is hard to suppress a feeling of bitterness when I see wealthy men of my own age, many of whom no doubt are single, following with their eyes the much younger women who do not need them. Can you tell me why such things happen.

NONEEN.

ANSWER—It is a sad thing for a woman who has had a good husband and a beautiful home and lived luxuriously for many years to be left alone and poor when she is old, and you have my heartfelt sympathy. But do you not realize that you are making a bad matter worse by your wishful dreaming of things that cannot happen to you? Do you remember what Tennyson said about a sorrow's crown of sorrow being remembering happier things? So my earnest advice to you is resolutely turn your thoughts away from the past and concentrate them on making what you can of the present. For you to dream of some old millionaire riding by in his limousine and bearing you off to a palace is as foolish as for you to expect to be suddenly turned into a cinema queen, or to become a glamor girl.

You are a woman of the world, and you know that big, prominent, rich men do not marry poor, elderly women. No doubt they would be far more sensible if they did, but it isn't the common sense and reliability and intelligence of an old woman that they want. It is youth and beauty and freshness they crave.

Quit Torturing Yourself

So quit torturing yourself with the thought of what you would like to have and can never have again. Quit envying the people who have the things that you want. Quit letting your fate make you bitter. Your dreams that can never come true and your bitterness only poison life for you and make things harder to bear.

Believe me, when we accept the conditions of our lives and try to make the most of them, we find a peace and contentment that nothing else gives us. Not long ago a very dear friend of mine lost his only son, a brilliant and talented young man who was his father's idol.

No blow could have been more crushing to any human being, but he took it with a courage that never faltered, and instead of bemoaning his loss, he said: "I am thanking God that He let me have my boy for all those happy, beautiful years."

Try to emulate him if you can, and keep your mind fixed on the happiness that you have had, instead of rebelling against the hardships of the present.

No Remedy For The Book Worm

Dear Miss Dix — I have been married three years and my husband reads constantly — during meals, after meals, in bed, also when visiting. Even when we go out and come home late in the evening he still must read before falling asleep. When I try to talk to him he says to write it on a piece of paper and he will read it when he gets to the office. I have tried to break him of this habit and can't. Can you suggest a remedy? WEARY.

ANSWER—I am afraid not. If there is any way of breaking a bookworm of burrowing in a book, I don't know what it is. The only thing that you can do is to develop the reading habit yourself and get so absorbed in the last sixth best seller, or the daily papers that you will forget to clean up the house and cook dinner. Perhaps after he goes hungry a few evenings he will begin to take more interest in his food and less in his books.

Personally, I can't think of any more aggravating habit that any one can have than to read at the table, and to have his coffee pushed over his paper or splashed over his book, and to have to be asked three or four times whether he will have any potatoes or another piece of steak, and who never hears what you say and only answers uh huh when you ask a question. If anything is a just cause for a divorce, it's that.

For Friday, March 28

Rather complex and complicated situations may be expected on this day, according to certain conflicting or confusing planetary operations. While in routine matters things may run in customary grooves, yet there are outstanding trends of a unique, intriguing or strategic importance which may gravitate around public, community or fraternity interests. These seem to affect the inner private, emotional, cultural or spiritual life in its various creative expressions.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves deep in a year of unique, mysterious or intriguing experiences, with their emotional, cultural and inner creative urges under rather confusing or bewildering but constructive impetus. This may be in connection with group, collective or humanitarian projects, which will prove materially gainful and spiritually satisfying.

A child born on this day, while having many practical and constructive abilities, may also possess spiritual, emotional, visionary or over-idealistic tendencies. It may be richly endowed with excellent creative urges on all phases of its being.

QUESTION.— My dumplings tend to dissolve away into the stew broth. I would like a recipe that would keep the dumplings whole—I would not mind if they were a little stodgy as long as they keep their shape. While I don't follow your dinners every day I find them ver helpful when I am telephoning my orders in. Thank you for past help.

MADGE-HOMER.

ANSWER.— Your dumplings probably only need a little less water.

Dumplings for Stew.

Two cups sifted flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon shortening, ¾ cup milk. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in fat; add milk, stirring quickly to make a soft dough. Drop by small spoonfuls on top of stew, making sure the dough rests on pieces of meat or vegetable. Cover tightly, and steam for 12 minutes, without lifting lid. (For other readers who like "lighter" dumplings use 1 cup milk.)

QUESTION.— You mentioned a vegetable and crumb stuffing for chicken—but I was put out that you did not give us the method—would you be kind enough to print this recipe when you have time and space. Thanking you in advance,

MRS. HAROLD OTIS.

ANSWER. — I am glad you wanted that recipe—it comes from the same "Laura" that gives me such good ideas.

Laura's Vegetable and Crumb Stuffing for Chicken.

Six slices hard whole wheat bread, 2 medium-sided carrots, 2 large stalks celery including leafy tops, 6 medium-sized mushrooms, ¼ green pepper finely sliced and chopped, 1-3 of a medium-sized onion, 1½ tablespoons butter, 2 teaspoons salt, ⅛ to ¼ teaspoons summer savory, about ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Soak the hard bread in warm water until soft, then wring out tightly. Mix with the vegetables which have been finely grated or chopped— the mushrooms, onions and pepper may be sauteed in the butter before adding if desired—add all remaining ingredients— melt butter if not used for sauteing—and mix very well. While this does not fill a large chicken to bulging, it is plenty to serve six people.

DO YOU KNOW . . .

White enamelware may be cleaned of stains by making a strong solution of baking soda and rain water. Put the utensils in it and boil them hard; they will be as white as snow.

To save the inside of earthenware teapots, pie dishes and pudding basins from becoming lined with any cracks, put them when new into a pan of cold water. Then bring the water slowly to a boil and let it boil for a minute or two.

A satisfactory emergency glue may be made by soaking some tapioca in warm water.

Windjammers Coming Back

SAN FRANCISCO, Mar. 27—(CP)—War has turned back the pages of maritime practice. They're putting old time sailing vessels back into service.

The Sailors' Union of the Pacific has received requests for crews to man windjammers which include the former gambling ships Rex and Tango.

One of the last stands of the sailing ships was the Alaska salmon fisheries, and as late as 1925 San Francisco Bay was dotted with picturesque three and four masters ready to sail north. Now, with a world shipping shortage, many interests wish the old hulks had been preserved.

Selected as the most beautiful brunette model, Mrs. Nedra Evans, 22, is in hospital at Chicago, suffering from stab wounds allegedly inflicted by her husband. Police say the latter confessed to stabbing his wife and two-year-old son, and killing his mother-in-law during a quarrel.

DON'T WASTE TIME! GET AFTER THAT COUGH

Why hang onto a cough brought on by a cold, when all you generally need to do to get prompt relief, is to step into the nearest drugstore and ask for a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. First used in 1841—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral to-day is the standard relief for coughs due to colds in thousands of homes. It's a remedy you'll like. Pleasant to take because of its wild-cherry flavor. And it contains 8 active ingredients that go to work soothing irritated throat membranes, helping to clear bronchial passages; usually giving needed comfort in just a few minutes.

Millbrook's W.I. Holds Euchre

MILLBROOK, March 27.—(ENS)—The local branch of the Women's Institute reached its fortieth birthday on Monday and in recognition of this event held a euchre and dance in the town hall, with fifteen tables in use for play, and many other guests coming in after the games for the concluding part of the evening.

Councillor H. D. Bigelow announced the prize winners shortly after ten o'clock, Mrs. Harvey Sanderson taking high place for the ladies, and Henry Blakely for the gentlemen; Mrs. E. C. Richards, W.I., president, presented the awards.

On the platform, with the place of honor on the central table, was the handsome birthday cake, in three layers, iced in pink and white, with the lettering "fortieth anniversary" Tickets sold on this cake, amounted to $6.50, Reeve W. E. Ball making the draw later in the evening, and William Trick holding the lucky number, 50. Before the dance was concluded Mr. Trick asked to have the cake sold for the British War Victims' Fund.

Chief E. C. Richards made an efficient auctioneer, and the delicious confection was finally "knocked down" to Delbert Olan for four dollars. Not to be outdone in generosity, as shown by the initial holder, Mr. Olan suggested that the rest of the guests might wish to participate in the worthy cause, and mentioned passing the hat, the net result being $11.60 for remittance to the British War Victims' Fund.

Galloway's orchestra supplied music for the dancing in their usual popular manner, and Wilbert Lunn "called off" for the square dances, Allen Wood won the prize, a crystal condiment set, for the first "lucky spot" dance, and Sergeant-Major Kent the second.

The Institute officers, with other helpers, served supper around midnight, and it was well past one o'clock before an enjoyable evening, which was attended by about one hundred and fifty guests, was brought to a close. Mrs. Melville Ball, W.I. treasurer, acted as cashier, and $45 was taken in at the door.

Cavan Institute Has Busy Rally

CAVAN, Mar. 27.—(ENS)—Mrs. C. Smith was hostess for the March meeting of the Cavan Women's Institute. The vice-president, Mrs. Kenneth Braithwaite, was in the chair. There were eighteen members present. The roll call was answered by quoting a word as it is now pronounced, and its old pronunciation.

During the business period, a quilt top was shown, which had been donated by Mrs. H. Tinney, also a comforter was offered for recovering by Mrs. W. Douglas. Arrangements were made for purchasing material and bat, and for quilting them, for the Red Cross.

Discussion was held concerning a remembrance to be sent to a member who had left the community. Correspondence was read from a firm who wished to present a program under the auspices of the W.I. Mesdames Snider and K. Braithwaite were named to interview a representative of the company and make arrangements. The April meeting will be the annual meeting and the roll call will be answered by "paying fees." There will be a sale table. Mrs. Ralph Staples gave an interesting paper of Current Events. Mrs. C. Smith read a paper, prepared by Mrs. K. Braithwaite, on Cavan village and community, which proved quite interesting. An Atlas of 1887 was shown, illustrating farm homes, and many pictures of pioneer residents. Cavan was settled by Irish pioneers who named it after the locality in which they lived in Ireland.

Lunch was served by the committee in charge, which gave an opportunity for visiting.

Charming New Slip Cover Quickly Made for Spring

Underskirt Plays Hide and Seek

Spring turns our practical fancy to making slip covers, and isn't this one a love? So charming in rosy chintz, bows of green and a green petticoat peeping out!

And so easy to make! A few deft pats, a little pinning, a bow here—there—and you're done!

What you do first is to lay a length of fabric down the inside back and seat of your chair, allowing a 4-inch tuck-in between. If you'd smartly bind the seams with green, work with fabric right side out.

Pin firmly along the chair outlines and next cut outside the pins, leaving 1½ inches for seams. Fit, pin and cut each section the same way—arms, back, cushion. Where arms and back curve, take up surplus material with darts, as in diagram. Then to basting and fitting and sewing on binding, as our other diagram shows.

Now—the skirt! Stitch on your petticoat just above the chair legs. Over it, fit and pin the chintz skirt in two pieces.

Wasn't that tiny effort well worth it? Our 32-page booklet explains in detail how to measure, cut and finish slip covers for many types of chairs and sofas, also for auto seats. Describes making of smart box-pleated and swag flounces.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO MAKE SLIP COVERS to the Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

COVERING ALL YOU CAN

SOMETIMES your bidding cannot cover every possible holding which your partner might have, judging from his earlier bidding. There are times when you have to guess the most probable situation, especially if the opponents have crowded you. But there are many times when you can bid so that you protect the side, no matter what type of hand your partner has to cause the bidding he already has done.

	♠ K 5 4 3 ♥ J 2 ♦ Q 9 4 3 ♣ A 10 2
♠ J 9 7 6 ♥ 10 6 4 ♦ K J 8 5 ♣ Q 5	N. W. E. S.	♠ 10 8 ♥ K 9 7 5 3 ♦ A 7 2 ♣ K 7 3

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	Pass
1 ♣	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 NT

It was a shame to see that hand passed out short of game, especially since North took ten tricks, one more than enough for a No Trump game. He was inclined to upbraid South for not going on to 3-No Trumps, since his own bidding might have indicated a hand just below sufficient strength to bid 2-No Trumps as his first response. South in turn blamed North for the lost opportunity.

After discussing the various possibilities, including that of a 1-spade response by North to the opener, they agreed that a better first response would have been 1-Diamond. From North's standpoint, that would have made it easy for South to show a heart suit. It also would have told South the side had something in diamonds if South had to know it to bid No Trumps without worry. The latter is what South would have done—bid 1-No Trump on his second turn.

North then could have bid 2-Spades. Besides showing the very fair strength of his hand, this would have covered the possibility of South holding perhaps four of the suit headed by the Q or J-10. In that event, the side could go on in spades. Actually after 2-Spades South could easily have bid 3-No Trumps or, if he bid only two, North could have lifted him then the rest of the way. The beauty of suit bids, instead of No Trump ones in such cases, is that you show the location of your stoppers, not merely the fact that you hold some.

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

If West's strong bidding of hearts and diamonds shows a 6-5 distribution in those suits, and he then leads the diamond A, how should South plan to make his contract of 5-Spades on this deal?

Births Marriages In Memoriam Cards of Thanks Deaths

BORN

IN MEMORIAM

O'BRIEN.—In loving memory of my dear sister, who died March 27, 1940.

Deep in my heart lies a picture
Of a loved one gone to rest;
In memory's frame I will keep it
Because she was one of the best.
My lips cannot speak how I miss her,
My heart cannot tell what to say,
God alone knows how I miss her
In my heart that is lonesome to-day.

—Sadly missed by her sister, Mrs. J. Doleman, 237 McGill street.

O'BRIEN.—In loving memory of my dear daughter Genevieve, who died March 27, 1940.

No stain was on her pure soul,
Sin had not entered there,
And innocent slept sweetly on,
That pale sweet brow so fair;
She was too pure for this cold earth,
Too beautiful to stay,
And so God's holy angel came
And took our darling one away.

—Sadly missed by mother and brother Michael.

McCALL.—In loving memory of our dear father, Mr. William McCall, who passed away March 27, 1940.

He has gone across the river
To the shores forever green.
And we long to see his dear face
But the river flows between.
Some day we'll clasp his loving hand
And never say farewell.

—Lovingly remembered by his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Armstrong, Indian River.

O'BRIEN.—In loving memory of Genevieve O'Brien, who passed away one year ago today, March 27, 1940.

My sister passed from me
Out of human care and strife;
Left me, as a gift those virtues
Which had beautified her life.
She bequeathed me that great patience
Which has power to sustain;
A cheerful, uncomplaining spirit
In its prison house of pain;
Gave me that unselfish nature
That with charity divine
Can pardon wrong for love's sweet sake.
Meek heart forgive me mine.
Hope and faith born of my sorrow,
Guarding angel shall become,
And my sister gone before me,
By her hands shall lead me home.

—Ever remembered by her sister, Mrs. W. E. Plumpton.

BREEZE.—In fond and loving memory of Mrs. Margaret Breeze, who died March 27, 1936.

A silent thought, a secret tear,
Keep her memory ever dear.

—Missed by her daughter, Mrs. Maud Cavanaugh, 13029 Kercheral Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

CHAPTER II

YESTERDAY: Beatrice Huntington Davenport, rich, bored, heiress to the Huntington department store millions, is furious because her guardian, old Mr. Weeming, refuses to honor her check paying for a string of polo ponies. The polo ponies are for Clarence, suave continental nobleman, frankly a fortune hunter, to whom Beatrice has recently become engaged. As a friend and associate of her grandfather, who started Huntington's, Mr. Weeming warns Beatrice that her money may soon disappear if she continued this mad spending. She demands action on the check, leaves. At the door, however, she hears a young, masculine voice addressing Mr. Weeming: "That girl's the world's most useless object. She should be quietly chloroformed."

SHE went out through the private, unmarked door to the corridor. For a moment, adjusting her coat, she stood in the hall thinking, "Weeming certainly must be put in his place every once in a while or he positively tramples one!".

Behind her, the door had not clicked, but stood a little ajar. Suddenly she heard a voice coming from Mr. Weeming's office. The voice of someone who must have been in the little room beyond, waiting for her to go.

"Why do you take that from her?" the voice asked in exasperation. It was a deep, masculine voice. Pleasant, rich, young.

"That girl's the world's most useless object! There isn't even hope for the future. She'll be divorcing this Clarence before she gets around the corner from the church. She's the kind that'll marry a prize fighter next and then an orchestra leader and by the time she's 40 she'll take up with a college freshman or a handsome rookie cop. The foul heiress pattern! Polo ponies for Clarence!

"You know what I think?" The pleasant timber of the voice hardened, and even as Beatrice stood there, stunned and rigid, his next words exploded against her eardrums. "I think a girl like that should be quietly and competently chloroformed. More in sadness than in anger. But chloroformed."

As she stood there, trembling on her tall lucite heels, the mink coat suddenly too warm around her, Beatrice Huntington Davenport knew a swift and devastating fury. She wanted to go in there and tear that unknown young man's eyes out. She wanted to slap him, hard, across his hateful, smug face.

She wanted to scream, "Who do you think you are, saying that I should be chloroformed? What do you know about me? Is it my fault my grandfather left me millions? Is it my fault that the money breeds envy everywhere I go? I didn't earn it, no. Perhaps I don't deserve it. But just having it doesn't make me bad, black and inhuman.

"I have to do something, don't I? I can't take a job, I can't do anything useful, anything to occupy my mind and my time because if I did, they'd say I was taking bread out of someone else's mouth. Someone who needs the job.

"You think I'm stupid and arrogant and conceited. I'm not. I'd like to work with my mind, my brain. You don't know how I've tried, sometimes, to do something—find something—worthwhile. They laugh at me. Even Mr. Weeming laughs.

"I'm a prisoner, that's what I am. Grandfather's millions—the life he brought me up to live—keep me locked up in a little world I hate. I'm bored, do you hear? I've known that a long time but I never knew, until I heard you, how bitter it is.

"You're not bored. No, you sound too complacent for that. You're doing things you care about—I've never done anything I really cared about. Never enjoyed anything the way a human being should. Parties, dances, clothes, theaters, trips, what are they to me? I can have all I want—endlessly, forever, without effort. There's no fun in that. No fun in filling in time, living from one day to the next just to be amused.

"And the men, how do I know they really like me? Either they're as rich as I am, and as bored—or else they're after the money. I can't trust anyone. At least, Clarence is honest. I know with him it's the money, but I know, too, Mimi Frothingham has as much money as I have and he preferred me."

The hot, savage words beat through her brain in a rushing flood. A tide of protest that she had only half sensed before was throbbing inside her. In this raw and painful moment, here in the corridor of an office building, Beatrice felt suddenly as if a dark abyss had opened at her feet. She had never faced it before—the thick fog of dissatisfaction, the tightening bands that closed in on her, the tasteless emptiness and this quick, stabbing fear.

"What else will there ever be? What else will I have? What am I living for? Where are the thrills, the satisfactions, the contentment they talk about and write about in books? Where's the love—the ecstatic passionate, soul-lifting love—I see in the movies, read of, dream of?"

Her hands, that life had crammed so full, were reaching out and all at once there was nothing in them. Nothing to touch and feel and get hold of. Nothing solid. Just emptiness.

The impulse to rush in there and confront the owner of that scornful voice died inside her. Her anger went with it, and now there was only the fear. She felt lost and helpless and suddenly she thought, "I hate him for making me look at my life. I hate him for tearing away the little pieces of camouflage I've managed to hide in..."

She turned, and peered through the narrow crack of the opened door. "I hate him!" It was as if she had to see him—had to transfer this hatred to some concrete image.

All she could see was a broad, gray back, sitting in the chair she had vacated. A brown hand rested on the arm of the chair—a big hand, with strong, blunt fingers. And above the wide gray shoulders she saw a tanned neck and a well-shaped head with dark hair.

He moved. Beatrice drew back, conscious suddenly of how ridiculous and undignified she would look if they caught her.

Fiercely her gloved hand curled into fists. "I'll see you again, you—you chloroformer, you!" she promised him silently. "I'll see you again and I'll make you eat that chloroform."

But she was almost herself again when she walked into the lobby of the Algique. Clarence moved toward her from the discreetly lighted lounge. He was terribly handsome, his tall body graceful as a cat's in the superbly tailored dark suit.

"Cara," he whispered, "You are weary, no? Come, we shall have a drink." His black eyes were tenderly solicitious, his hand on her arm gentle.

She thought, "How shrewd Clarence is. How well he understands me. He knows so much about women..."

Over her glass she asked him, "Do you understand everything about me, Clarence? Just everything? Or only when I'm tired or not tired?"

He made a little gesture. "Who can understand a woman, Beatrice? I try. I study you. I love you so, and want always to please you—"

"You mean, you want always to be able to read me. So that you won't ask me for something at the wrong moments, you can wind me around your finger?" She was thinking out loud. There was no resentment in her tone, it was merely an appraisal.

Clarence leaned toward her. "Darling, he said carressingly, "Something has happened to you. Someone has been unkind, is it not? Tell me, sweet. Was it the old Weeming?"

"Of course not. It's nothing." She sipped her drink.

Clarence was in love with her. He had to be, to have given up Mimi Forthingham who had just as much money and would have been easier to manage. In a way, Clarence was amazingly perceptive. She twirled the slim glass in her fingers. "Clarence," she said softly, "Clarence, suppose I told you I'm unhappy, bored, restless. What would you say?"

"Say?" The black eyes glowed, and his hands reached for her. I would say my little bird needs relaxation, happiness, new scenes, love, tenderness. In short, Beatrice, I would say that it is time for the honeymoon."

She drew her hands away. "But I don't want to get married just yet, Clarence. I—I can't really see that it's going to be any different after we're married. Except for the house at Westbury, of course. But that—" Her voice trailed off. She looked up at him appealingly. "It had no taste, Clarence. It just melted, without anything to it. I guess it really was sawdust. And well—that's my life, too. Taking a cruise and thinking it'll be wonderful. It's not. One thing after another like that, turning into sawdust."

"Ashes, carissima," said Clarence. "That is the classic expression, I believe. But this is not serious, really. It will pass. After we are married."

She dropped her eyes. A sharp little ache of disappointment stung her. Almost, she had hoped that beneath Clarence's flattery and love-making—beneath the polished manners, the amusing little tricks—she would find some depth to comfort her—some sympathy that would warm her, something real and strong to evoke response.

"Clarence," she said lightly at last. "It's the same old trouble. Tired business men have it with their wives, darling, and rich girls like me have it with their fiances. You don't understand me."

"Ah! A moment ago, you thought I understood all to well."

"Let's leave it," she said.

Bonarlaw Couple Honored At House Party

BONARLAW, March 27 (ENS)—On Monday evening of this week the large farm house of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Barlow was filled to overflowing, when friends and neighbors gathered to wish their daughter, Margaret, and her husband, Mr. Ernest Anderson, health and prosperity and a long and happy wedded life, and showered them with many beautiful and useful gifts.

Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne acted as master of ceremonies in his usual capable manner. An address was read by Miss Hilda Brown, wishing the bride much joy and congratulating the bridegroom on his choice of a life partner. Both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson replied, thanking the assembled guests for their kind expressions of esteem and good wishes and for the many gifts. All sang "For they are jolly good fellows" and gave them three hearty cheers and a tiger.

A musical program was given as follows: vocal solos by Miss Edna McComb and Miss Hilda Brown and Messrs. Bruce Barnum and J. F. Baker, and piano solos by Miss Mary McInroy and Messrs. Chester Baker and Bruce Barnum. Community singing was also enjoyed by all, Mrs. W. G. Swayne presiding at the piano.

A bountiful lunch and hour of social intercourse concluded a very pleasant evening.

The world's day of prayer was observed in St. Mark's church on Sunday evening last, Canon Swayne preaching a very inspiring and appropriate sermon, taking as his text the passage of scripture which speaks of Christ stilling the tempest. He also linked up with his text the old testament passages of Gideon's three hundred warriors and God helping His people to defeat the Assyrians, showing how God helps His people. A number of members of the Marmora Legion were present and were warmly welcomed by Canon Swayne. An appropriate anthem was rendered by the choir. There was a splendid congregation.

On Thursday of last week the W.M.S. World's Day of Prayer was held in Springbrook United church, the service being in charge of the pastor, Rev. R. W. Young. Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne of St. Mark's church, Bonarlaw, giving a five minute talk on prayer. Various ladies of the congregation gave readings and prayers.

On Monday of last week the March meeting of the Centre Hastings Ministerial Association met at the Rectory, Bonarlaw. The meeting was in charge of the president, Rev. A. E. Pepper. The paper for the day "Preaching from the old testament" was given by the Rev. S. A. R. Delve. Lunch was served at the parsonage at Springbrook by Mrs. Young and Mrs. Swayne. There was a splendid attendance of both the clergy and their wives.

Pause For A Smoke

Two members of the First Canadian Tank Brigade are shown in this photo as they enjoy a smoke after pushing their steel through the snow mounds of Camp Borden, Canada's largest armored fighting vehicle school. Wrestling tanks through snow-drifts comes natural to many of the tank men, who were formerly "cat-skinners" on the tractor trains of the Arctic.

simple and ordinary folk of this country in standing up to the fire of the enemy.

"Britain could, I believe, save herself for the time being. But it will take the combined efforts of the whole of the English-speaking world to save mankind and Europe from the menace of Hitlerism and to open again the paths of progress of the people.

"Therefore I say that if we look back on these five events, all of which have added to our strength and means of survival and carry us forward upon our journey to success—if we look back upon them we must see that we have much to be thankful for.

Winning Battle of Atlantic

"Do not let us ever suppose that our troubles are ended.

"There is another matter. The battle of the Atlantic must be won so that food supplies and munitions and every form of American aid may come to us in ever growing volume.

"That battle is fought against surface raider, against aircraft which steal out from the French or Norwegian coasts, and against the U-boat.

"It engages the deep interests of great people on both sides of the ocean and I cannot doubt that before many months are passed I shall be able to declare to you that it has been decisively won.

"But there are other difficulties and dangers which beset us and we cannot expect to have successes unconquered by reverses....

"We cannot tell how long the road will be. We only know that it will be stony, painful and up-hill, and that we shall march along it to the end."

Mr. Churchill asserted the "interests of national unity" caused him to forego producing a "catalogue of war aims and peace aims."

"Everyone knows quite well what we are fighting about but if you try to set forth in catalogue what will be the exact settlement of affairs in a period which I see as unforeseeable....You will find that the moment you leave the area of pious platitude you will descend into the arena of heated controversy and that would militate against the efforts we are making," he explained.

"I was very glad to see that the illustrious leader of the American people, President Roosevelt, is of the same opinion, though in our correspondence the topic has never been mentioned," Mr. Churchill added, recalling Mr. Roosevelt's statement it was not much use talking of peace aims until Hitler is defeated.

Mr. Churchill continued that "for the time being the defeat of Hitler and Hitlerism is a sufficient war aim and will open the door to every worthy peace aim."

He declared he assumed the prime ministership with a feeling of "invincible confidence" and "that is the feeling which inspires me here today."

mined, the 350-word navy statement said. "In short time," it recounted, "almost the entire ship was in flames."

Two lifeboats and a life-raft went overboard. But soon the seas had filled one and then overturned it, throwing its complement of sailors into the sea.

The waves were running 15 feet high. An icy wind made matters worse for those still alive when the rescue ships came up after spotting the beacon of flame rising from the Otter.

The merchantman had spotted the vessel's plight at nine o'clock yesterday morning, just 10 minutes after the fire started. She and the other two vessels converged on the spot.

The merchant ship ventured so close in the work of salvaging lives that her two lifeboats were splintered when the seas thrust her against the doomed craft. But with ropes and ladders—the navy did not go into detail—16 of the survivors were brought aboard. The six others saved were taken up by the second warcraft.

No more was told of how the men were saved, or how the others died. In the words of the navy, the two vessels "exercised most valiant rescue measures." But that was all.

Tanker Does Good Job.

The tanker, which pushed herself between the wind and the scene of rescue, "performed valuable service." None of the three was identified.

They reached this port last evening, nine hours after the tragedy opened, with the survivors, who were taken to hospital here by ambulance. None of these, however, was reported in serious condition, though some were suffering shock. It was expected most would be discharged in the next day or so.

The naval announcement did not say if any of the bodies had been recovered.

The dead came from five provinces, from Nova Scotia to Alberta. Next-of-kin of seven live in Nova Scotia; four in Ontario; three in Quebec and Prince Edward Island and two in Manitoba.

Nine of the survivors were from Nova Scotia, five from Quebec, three from Ontario, two from New Brunswick and one from Saskatchewan. The other two were from Great Britain a steward and a cook.

All four officers were Nova Scotians. Lieut. Alan M. Walker of Halifax and Chief Skipper Andrew F. Parker of Parrsboro, N.S., perished.

Surviving officer with the master was Chief Skipper D. A. Snelgrove of Halifax.

The navy announced the "usual investigation" into the fire would be held. It did not disclose details of the Otter's construction or her peacetime identity or ownership.

Opposition Raps

The speeches of Mr. Perley and Mr. Gardiner occupied the House up to adjournment, with Mr. Gardiner not able to complete his speech.

Mr. Senn's amendment substituted for the Government motion a resolution that the Government take immediate steps to "create a parity of prices as between agricultural and other products in order to improve the condition of Canadian agriculture."

Adoption of such an amendment would mean technical defeat of the Government and leave it no alternative but to resign. However, with the huge majority it enjoys, there would seem no possibility of such a defeat occurring.

Mr. Senn protested that "the revenue of the average farm is insufficient to meet overhead expenses and maintain a reasonable standard of living for the farmer and his family."

He said there was a feeling of resentment in the farming community against the Government because of what had been done and what had not been done.

Listing the numerous boards set up since the war to handle certain aspects of agricultural production, Mr. Senn charged "there has not been a single producer or representative of any farm producer organization placed on any of these boards."

Says Producers Represented.

Later Mr. Gardiner contended the producers were well represented on every board set up since the war began to facilitate the provision of needed foodstuffs for Britain.

At another point, Mr. Senn charged that the bacon agreement negotiated with Britain last fall by Mr. Gardiner had lowered the price of hogs to the farmers by $2.10 a hundredweight as compared with the agreement entered into at the start of the war.

Mr. Gardiner denied there was any such reduction and added that all last year Great Britain could have bought its pork products in the United States for three cents a pound less than the price paid in Canada.

"When Great Britain signs on the dotted line, Great Britain carries out the agreement," Mr. Gardiner said.

He said the average price paid for hogs at Toronto while the old agreement was in effect was $8.57 over the period of the agreement. Under the new agreement the average price for November last was $8.31; for December, $8.17; for January, $8.31, and for February, $8.45. The last figure was only 12 cents less than the average under the old agreement.

The minister said farmers would not be getting five cents a pound for hogs if the new agreement had not been made.

"In spite of the propaganda put out by some persons who are not farmers," said Mr. Gardiner, "I think the old gentleman who got up at the London meeting (a meeting of Western Ontario farmers) and said 'I am going to produce all the hogs I can no matter what Britain pays for them,' expressed the sentiments of farmers all across Canada."

One Unprotected Industry.

Mr. Senn said agriculture was the only industry in Canada which did not enjoy some sort of price maintenance scheme. Labor had regulations for minimum pay and hours of work, manufacturing costs and profits were guaranteed, while retailers, professional workers and utilities were protected.

"I believe the farmers of Eastern Canada will resent most bitterly the proposal of the government to pay the western producers of coarse grains a bonus of $2 an acre when those grains will be fed to livestock which will compete with stock from Eastern Canada where no bonus is paid," Mr. Senn declared in a brief reference to the government's new policy of paying western farmers for restricting wheat acreage.

The difficulties facing farmers were well known to the government but nothing was being done to remedy them, Mr. Senn contended.

Mr. Perley, seconding the amendment, said 50 per cent. of Canada's population practically depends on agriculture, and 75 per cent. of the farmers of Western Canada are directly dependent upon wheat."

Under war conditions "no great national long-term policy" could be worked out, Mr. Gardiner said. The best the government could do was review agricultural conditions from month to month and see what branches of farming required assistance. Assistance was arranged if any branch had markets seriously impaired as a result of the war. If other markets could not be found and if the farmers could not shift to other lines of production.

Many proposals of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, which consulted the government each year, had been adopted, said Mr. Gardiner. It was the Federation which first suggested he go to England to consult the British Government on food supplies.

Favors Organizations.

"I believe in farm organizations and there are no organizations in this country that more consistently work at their job and keep contacts with governments than farm organizations," said the minister.

This was in reply to Mr. Senn who complained of lack of producer representation on the governmental boards. Mr. Gardiner said every farm organization could not be represented, but all board members were producer representatives, either as officials of Federal and Provincial Departments of Agriculture or of farm organizations.

Mr. Gardiner said statistics of total receipts from the sale of farm products showed the condition of agriculture was not getting worse. From $952,000,000 in 1926 they dropped to $390,000,000 in 1933, and since then rose to $714,000,000 in 1940.

"They did get worse beginning in 1930 and going down to 1933," he said, "but they have been getting materially better since then as far as returns are concerned, but they have not got sufficiently better for the farmer to realize any great improvement has occurred."

Mr. Senn said farmers suffered not only from disparity in prices but from importation of competing products such as fruits, vegetables and vegetable oils. He urged an advertising campaign to promote the use of lard instead of vegetable oil shortenings. With lard selling at 4½ cents a pound in carload lots the price of hogs was bound to be lower than it should be.

Mr. Perley said the processing tax of 15 cents a bushel on wheat milled for domestic use should have been increased to 50 cents a bushel.

7 Cents Top For Bread

"The price of a loaf of bread should not increase any by reason of a 50-cent processing tax," he added. "The price of a loaf of bread should not be more than seven cents.

"There is the greatest racket going on that you can imagine in the big mill-controlled bakeries throughout Canada. There should be an investigation of them by this government.

"Yesterday I talked with the Canada Bread Company in this city. They make 46 loaves of bread out of a bushel of wheat which at 10 cents a loaf is $4.60, whereas the farmers gets 50 cents."

Mill operators had told him the price of bread was out of line with wheat prices and the cost of bread should not go up if the tax were 50 cents. That would mean about $25,000,000 more return on the 230,000,000 bushels to be taken next year.

New elevators were being built in Western Canada to take care of the increasing quantity of wheat in store and Mr. Perley estimated there would be a revenue of $4,000,000 a year to those building them.

"That is an outrage and should not be permitted," he said. "I have always claimed that storage rates were too high. Under the present storage charges the whole elevator system in that western country will be paid for in less than five years.

"I suggest this government proceed to take over—commandeer if you like—all the elevator storage space in Western Canada from Fort William to the coast. They should operate it by a board. Let the present storage rates prevail, paying the capital out in five years.

Mr. Gardiner said he had made the same suggestion in the first public speech he ever delivered to a large audience in 1910, and that in the same year the Manitoba Government took over the elevators in that province.

"They operated those elevators for a length of time and they stand today as one of the outstanding—I was going to say business failures but probably I should say, political failures—that we have in the history of business in Canada."

New Nazi Decree

in either Iceland or Greenland of port facilities for unloading and reloading heavy cargoes would make British use of the ports for transshipment purposes unlikely. It would only tighten considerably the time require to get cargoes to Britain.

Nor does it seem likely that the British Admiralty would establish a shipping base of any importance that close to Norwegian harbors and fjords, the certain lurking places of German surface raiders or long-range submarines.

Might Annoy Russia.

If Russian cargo craft use the North Atlantic route to Murmansk to any extent, which is doubtful, the Nazi declaration might be more annoying to Moscow than to the United States or Britain. It throws a sink-on-sight threat athwart every sea approach to Murmansk, including Denmark Strait between Iceland and Greenland.

Berlin may have had that in mind, among other things, in proclaiming the blockade extension. It might be a sort of left-handed retaliation for Russian intervention in the Balkan situation to oppose Nazi manoeuvres.

To what extent Russian influences are at work behind the scenes in Yugoslavia to incite popular demonstrations against the Regency Government that surrendered to German pressure and aligned itself with the Axis is anybody's guess. That Moscow agents are at work there building up anti-Axis sentiment cannot be doubted.

Both Move Cautiously.

If that accomplishes no other Russian purpose, it tends to delay a German attack on Greece while the internal situation in Yugoslavia clarifies. That attack may or may not be forthcoming. It seems unlikely to come soon, however.

The Nazi field commanders certainly would like to know the size of their job before they start. Armed pacification of Yugoslavia, if it should come to that, might require considerable forces and some little time. If the Yugoslav army elected the resist a German incursion, it would be a more difficult task for Nazi commanders to overcome it than they encountered in Norway, England, for example.

It seems to be the immediate strategy of both Berlin and Belgrade to move cautiously. Probably they hope a cooling-off period will serve to let the Yugoslav popular outcry against the Belgrade-Axis deal simmer down beyond the danger point.

Recital Dramatist To Visit St. James'

Rev. Herbert Piercy, well-known recital dramatist of Niagara Falls, will give his interpretation of the remarkable story, "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," in St. James' United Church next Friday, March 28, at 8 p.m. James Hilton's "Good-bye, Mr. Chips," is a great story, and Mr. Piercy's character dramatization of the old schoolmaster is an inspiration which few who have heard him, will ever forget. When Britain is so heroically facing the greatest ordeal of all time, it is comforting to once again know and feel the old hapy England and to realize the tremendous influence that Chips and thousands like him have had in shaping the destiny of the Motherland. Large audiences have greeted Mr. Piercy in other city centres.

Why Use A "Sissy" Laxative?

Chronic constipation has to do with the colon or large intestine. Unless the large bowel is thoroughly emptied from time to time you become a victim of chronic constipation and poisoning of the system which may result in colitis or other serious disease.

Mild or "sissy" laxatives merely cause a movement of the bowels without effecting a thorough cleaning out of the colon or large bowel. For this reason you are misled into thinking that you are doing all you can to overcome a constipated and poisoned condition of the system.

Those who know Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills appreciate the value of a real medicine which not only effects a thorough cleansing of the colon or large bowel but also arouses the liver and kidneys to activity in filtering poisons from the blood.

Once you have proven the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will never return to the use of "sissy" laxatives. Keep regular by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills once or twice a week.

A Pimple Covered Face Kills Many a Romance

The lives of many young people are made miserable by the breaking out of pimples, and you probably know of cases where a promising romance has been spoiled by those red, white, festering and pus filled sores on the face.

The trouble is not so much physical pain, but the mental suffering caused by the embarrassing disfigurement which very often makes the sufferer ashamed to go out in company.

The quickest way to get rid of pimples is to improve the general health by a thorough cleansing of the blood.

Burdock Blood Bitters helps to cleanse the blood and with the blood cleansed the complexion should clear up.

Legions Break Towards Asmara City

Thousands Captured In Cheren's Fall; Fascist Collapse Near

CAIRO, Egypt, March 28—(AP)—British troops are in hot pursuit of Italian forces retreating headlong toward Asmara, capital of Eritrea, following occupation of the key mountain town of Cheren by British Imperial forces, the Middle East Command announced to-day.

A "large number" of the 35,000 Fascist defenders were reported captured by the British troops who battered their way into Cheren late Wednesday night after a seven-week siege. Headquarters said the Italians "in their precipitate retreat" left behind large quantities of war materials.

The remnants of the Italian forces were headed for Asmara, 42 miles southeast of Cheren, and it was possible that they might try to go on to Massaua, the colony's chief port, to make a stand or escape from the hard-pressing Imperial forces.

Harar Falls Too

In Ethiopia, where the British army knocked another foundation stone from Italy's crumbling East African Empire with the capture of the walled city of Harar, the British command announced that "in all sectors the situation continues to develop to our advantage."

The British campaign was considered to have entered the climatic stage with a sudden Fascist collapse dependent on the outcome of two British thrusts.

First was the developing assault

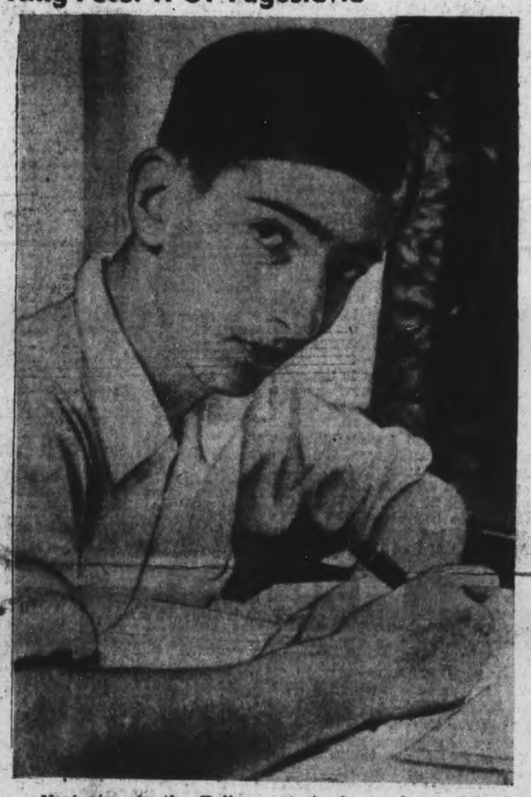
King Peter II Of Yugoslavia



Nazi aims in the Balkans received a serious set-back, when Yugoslavia revolted and jailed members of the Cabinet who had just signed a treaty with the Axis powers. With the country in a turmoil, youthful King Peter II ascended the throne with the support of the army. The boy-king was scheduled to ascend to the throne on his eighteenth birthday.

A Burial Armistice

London, March 28 (CP)

THE Italian army in Albania has been forced to ask Greece for an armistice in order "to bury its dead" the British Broadcasting Corporation said in a news broadcast today.

The BBC said word of the request reached London last Sunday, at a time when Mussolini's personally-dictated offensive in Albania was reported to have broken down completely, leaving the central battle sector "littered with Italian dead."

Slavs Junk Whole Hun Balkan Plot

LONDON, March 28 — (CP). — British military authorities said today that Yugoslavia's revolution would force Germany to revise its Balkan strategy.

"They will have to rearrange any plans they may have had," these circles said.

They declared the Yugoslav coup "has presented the German Army Commanders with a set of difficulties which might hold any definite moves for a short time.

"From a military standpoint, whether the Yugoslavs adopt neutrality or not (reports from Belgrade said they would), the Germans have had such a setback that they will have to reorientate the whole of their plans and timetable."

It was pointed out that communications generally ran north and south, and it would be easy for the Germans in Bulgaria to make a right-hand turn and attack Yugoslavia.

Bulgarian troops which have been placed along the Yugoslav eastern frontier also would be in the way of German troops driving towards Yugoslavia.

Germans Put Finger On Matsuoka

Get Into Fight Now Or No Aid Later, Blunt Nazi Demand

BERLIN, March 28—(AP).—Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka, here for talks with German leaders, must make up his mind whether Japan will enter actively into the fight against Britain or be left to face both her and the United States alone later, informed German political circles claimed today.

The taking of Singapore — key British naval base in the Far East—was mentioned specifically in connection with the subject of Japanese participation in the fight.

If Japan decides to enter the fray at present, Germany and Italy might later show disinterest in Japan's plight, these circles threatened.

That Japan could realize her ambitions in the Far East only by running into British and American opposition was claimed as axiomatic.

Hence, it was asserted, if Japan is in earnest about translating her Far Eatsern dreams into political politics, she must realize that her place is on the side of the Axis, not as a silent partner but as an active member.

Ribbentrop Boasting Anew.

Satisfaction over Matsuoka's visit at a time of "decisive battle" against Britain was voiced by German Foreign Minister Ribbentrop last night at a reception for the Japanese statesman and his staff.

"Actually," he asserted, "this is our conviction—that England's fate is already sealed. We know today that the war is won for Germany and her allies—and toward the end of 1941 we believe the entire world will know it."

(To observers outside the Axis it seemed fairly clear that Ribbentrop's diatribe had two purposes: to overcome the obviously dampening effect on the Axis scene of yesterday's Yugoslavian coup which installed an anti-Axis government and second, to frighten Japan into some sort of active alliance with the Axis).

It was noted that Matsuoka, who already has seen Russian authorities in Moscow, remained entirely passive and merely polite throughout his reception.

Sirois Ad Cost Ontario $21,381

TORONTO, March 28.—(CP)—An advertisement in Ontario newspapers in which the Ontario Government reprinted exerpts from the proceeding of the Dominion-Provincial Conference last January cost $21,381.10, according to a return table in the Ontario Legislature Thursday.

The information was given in response to a question by Opposition Leader George Drew. The advertisement, captioned "These are the Facts," was said to have been authorized by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, who is also provincial treasurer.

Moscow Stays Quiet

Moscow, March 28 (AP)

THE Soviet press published prominently but without comment today reports on the overthrow of the pro-Axis Yugoslav government and the accession of Peter II to power.

Newspapers printed five successive Tass news agency dispatches from Belgrade describing the sequence of events.

Pravda, organ of the Communist party, published two columns of the reports on its foreign news page.

British Bombers Paste Cologne And Dusseldorf

LONDON, March 28 —(CP)—The Royal Air Force pounded the German industrial centres of Cologne and Duesseldorf with "many heavy bombs" in overnight raids extending from the Rhineland to the invasion ports of Dunkirk, Brest and Calais on the Nazi-held French coast, the air ministry announced today.

In the war at sea, the Admiralty announced that the submarine Parthian had torpedoed a 6,000-ton supply or troop ship and a 10,000-ton tanker in an Italian escorted convoy south of Italy.

The R.A.F. night air assaults, a communique said, followed up daylight bomb and machine-gun assaults on German naval and supply ships from the Frisian Islands to the coast of Brittany and produced "good results."

Despite a thick ground haze, pilots of the bomber command found their targets at Cologne and Duesseldorf, setting off fires and explosions among factories and railroad yards.

Two especially large fires were observed at Cologne, returning pilots related, and at Dusseldorf flashes from bursting bombs were declared "clearly visible in the factory area to the east of the Rhine and near the main railroad station."

Bombers of the same command attacked docks at Dunkirk and Calais and the naval base at Brest.

Three Planes Lost

Three British planes were missing from the night operations and two from yesterday's.

In yesterday's daylight assaults on German shipping direct hits were reported on a ship in the harbor at Alderney, in the channel islands.

A German bomber was shot down into the sea south of Beachy Head today, the government announced.

Air raid sirens this morning shrieked the first alarm in London since the night of March 20 but three German aircraft sighted heading toward the capital turned back—apparently without dropping any bombs.

There were no reports of German aerial activity over England during the night.

Calato Blasted

CAIRO, Egypt, March 28 (AP)—A Royal Air Force raid yesterday on the Italian aidrdrome at Calato on the Island of Rhodes, in the Eastern Mediterranean, left a cloud of smoke that could be seen 100 miles away, R.A.F. headquarters announced today.

Airdrome buildings and a fuel dump were reported set afire and at least one plane destroyed on the ground at much-bombed Calato.

10,000 French Cheer, Bury Alexander's Monument In Flowers

MARSEILLE, France, March 28—(AP).—Shouting "Long live Yugoslavia," a crowd of 10,000 poured spontaneously into the Place de la Bourse today where the late King Alexander of Yugoslavia was assassinated in 1934.

The unscheduled demonstration, which grew in volume every hour, came after word was whispered through the city that a new anti-Axis Yugoslav government had been informed.

Early this morning the people began to drop bouquets at the scene of Alexander's assassination and at the monument to the father of Yugoslavia's young King, Peter II.

As the heaps of flowers mounted, 200 police were called out to halt the procedure and crowds began to gather.

In the Place de la Bourse the crowds sang the Marseillaise and applauded each time someone evaded the police cordon and succeeded in adding to the floral offerings.

A similar demonstration took place before the statue at the police prefecture.

Slavs Get Great Reception.

The demonstration grew loudest when members of the Yugoslav colony here, accompanied by members of the "Poilus of the East Association," appeared to decorate the monument to Alexander.

When police lines kept the crowd from the plaque which marks the place of the assassination, the people boarded a trolley car and tossed their flowers from the doors and windows as it went past.

Children, whom the police were unable to control, slipped through and laid little bunches of flowers on the pile which by now almost covered the monument.

Two Soldiers Under Arrest

TORONTO, March 28 (CP) — Two soldiers from the Petawawa military camp, Pte. Herbert Hawkins, 47, and L.-Cpl. Clarence Beechener, 29, were taken today to Bowmanville, 40 miles east of here, to face trial on a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident. The mishap occurred at nearby Newtonville last night. Mrs. W. J. McMurray suffered head and leg injuries.

The men were arrested last night after a description of the automobile which struck the woman as she was crossing No. 2 Highway was forwarded to Toronto police. Police said the car slowed down after striking the woman and then sped away.

Nazis Busy Figuring What Churchill's 'Common Cause' Meant

BERLIN, March 28. — (AP). — Germany waited impatiently to-day for a definite answer from the new military government in Yugoslavia as to whether it is repudiating its membership in the axis.

Berlin apparently was pressing for a clean-cut decision on foreign policy, but diplomatic reports from Belgrade did not bring a clear picture, it was saiad.

It was understood here the new Yugoslav premier, Gen. Dusan Simovic, sought to let the axis pact hang in the air—unratified by parliament but at the same time not specifically repudiated.

Kiktor Von Heeren, German minister in Belgrade, was said to have had at least one conversation with Simovic since the latter took over the Yugoslav premiership. The conversation was not reported here.

The general impression was that Simonvic's statement of general policy was unsatisfactory and Germany protested alleged attacks on German citizens in Yugoslavia.

(Despatches from Belgrade this morning said the Simovic Cabinet had decided to return to a policy of strict neutrality and had informed Germany the kingdom would find it impossible to adhere to the terms of the Axis pact.)

This dissatisfaction was further registered by the fact that the German radio acquainted the German public with anti-German demonstrations and actions in Yugoslavia.

It was to be presumed that the Nazi radio and later D.N.B., the news and propaganda agency, were authorized to publicize these facts only because the German government was not then satisfied with the new Premier's declaration.

Still Figuring It Out.

The spokesmen said that at present—it was then 1:15 p.m. in Berlin—there was no possibility of a full evaluation of the Yugoslav situation and hence no official reaction.

Communications were poor, it was said, reports often were contradictory, and it could not be estimated at present to what extent Prime Minister Churchill's utterances (of "common cause" with the new Belgrade regime) rested on political reality.

The former Yugoslav Government's adherence to the Axis military pact three days ago, official sources asserted, is a legal fact and became such with the signing ceremony at Vienna.

"It is not customary for one government," they commented, 'to rescind the actions of a previous one; at least not as regards international treaties."

NAZIS BUSY

New Cabinet Decides On Full Neutrality; Germans Flee Country

BELGRADE, March 28—(AP). — Defiant Yugoslavia refused today to ratify the Axis pact and received the United States promise of full aid if she is forced to resist German and Italian armies.

The United States Minister, Arthur Bliss Lane, delivered a note to the Government which said that under the terms of the Military Aid Bill every possible assistance would be given to Yugoslavia, "as to all other nations seeking to maintain their independence and integrity to repeal aggression."

The note was delivered to Yugoslavia's hardy soldier Premier, Gen. Dusan Simovic, who assumed leadership in yesterday's coup d'etat, just a short time after Yugoslavia informed Germany that the Axis pact would be neither denounced nor ratified.

Other developments today included:—

1. The Turkish Minister conferred for a long time with Premier Simovic, and was reported by diplomatic quarters to have proposed a mutual assistance pact with Yugoslavia. The Turkish press has been hinting at such a development for several weeks.

2. German journalists, economic experts and trade delegates began an exodus from the county. German sources said nearly 3,000 had started to the frontier or were packing up, in the hope of getting out of the country.

Against People's Wishes.

High diplomatic sources said Yugoslavia had informed Germany that fulfilment of the terms of the pact, signed in Vienna Tuesday by the government which was ousted yesterday, would be "impossible because it would be contrary to the will of the Yugoslav people."

The Cabinet was said to have decided at an all-night session to return to "full and absolute neutrality."

28,859 Civilian Dead

London, March 28 (CP)

CIVILIANS killed in air raids on Britain since the war began total 28,859 and the seriously injured 40,166, it was announced today.

The figures were disclosed at Newcastle by Ellen Wilkinson, joint parliamentary secretary to the ministry of home security.

She added that military air raid fatalities in Britain were about one fifth of the civilian total.

Danger Unites Yugoslavia

War Record Of Past Proves Serbs Doughtiest Of Fighters

(By the Canadian Press.)

Yugoslavia, a product of the First Great War which began in an area now within her boundaries, has sought anxiously for more than 18 months of the present conflict to maintain a precarious neutrality.

This month Germany beckoned, and the elder statesmen of Yugoslavia reluctantly heeded, signing up for slightly modified collaboration with the German-dominated Axis only last Tuesday.

Less than two days later, the regency government of capitulation was overthrown, 17-year-old King Peter II was pushed willingly into early sovereignty, and 1,200,000 soldiers—some of the finest fighting men in Europe—sped to battle stations.

Led by her hot-blooded youth, Yugoslavia, a state of many tongues and races, appeared to have achieved a certain unity in the face of danger.

For the moment, at least, her old leaders and her old pastime of internecine political bickering seemed thrust into the background by the rush of events.

The picture must be viewed in the light of history and of geography.

On the dusty day of June 28, 1914, Gavrio Phinzip, a Bosnian student, assassinated Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the throne of Austria- Hungarian empire, but the then kingdom of Serbia was blamed.

Austria attacked Serbia, and the world sprang to arms.

Evidence of the Serb bravery lies in the battle casualties: After retreating to Corfu, Greece, the army numbered 63,000 combatants, having suffered 331,000 battle casualties.

Compromises after the war was over made the country one of the most varied in history.

The 96,000 square miles of territory embrace old Serbia, Montenego and parts of the Austria-Hungarian Empire, including the City of Sarajevo.

Of a population of about 16,000,-

A Great Day For The World

N.Y. Press Sees Big Things In Slavs' Brave Move

NEW YORK, March 28—(CP). — The swift developments in Yugoslavia which resulted in overturning of the pro-Axis Government resulted in columns of editorial praise in New York's morning papers today.

In an editorial captioned "A Great Day," The Herald Tribune said:—

"Yesterday may well stand as the greatest single day for free men and women everywhere since the first cars hof Nazi bombs on the Polish villages in September, 1939. "The possibilities which may flow from this one act of clear-cut bravery and decision are so vast that one hesitates to contemplate them;

Sea Gallantry Amid Tragedy

15 Men Sing As Raft Drifts From Flaming Otter—Only 4 Live

HALFAX, March 28. — (CP). — Stories of rescuers' heroism and of unflinching bravery displayed by men about to die brightened to-day the gloomy saga of H.M.C.S. Otter whose flaming end struck 19 names from the roll of the Royal Canadian Navy.

While the navy prepared to open to-day an official inquiry into Wednesday's disaster, the tales of gallantry trickled out from those who saw the sinking of the little patrol boat off Halifax. They recounted how navy, and merchant seamen risked ships and lives to bring 22 men to safety, and how other Canadian seamen drifted away to death with a song.

Touches of heroism dotted every paragraph of the accounts told by men among the rescuers and rescued last night, but here are a few that stood out:

Three men in a packed lifeboat that had left the Otter after she burst afire volunteered to give up their places so the captain, left alone on the ship, could be taken off.

A merchant seamen had fellow sailors lower him into the icy water from the deck of his ship so he could fasten ropes about the bodies of floundering survivors too numb to help themselves.

An officer aboard another rescue ship—a war vessel—plunged into the water, with waves running 20 feet high, to support a man about to sink.

As a heavily laden life-raft drifted away from the Otter with about 15 men clinging to it, the sodden seamen roared the chorus of "Roll out the barrel." Four were taken alive from the raft.

There was the Captain of the merchantman who manoeuvred his ship close to the Otter, though "realizing it might blow up any time," and took on 23 men. Three were dead, and two more died of exposure.

And then there was Lieut. Denis Mossman of Halifax, the patrol

Draft Big Stick For Strikes

New U.S. Law Would Make Walkouts Illegal

WASHINGTON, Mar. 28—(AP)— "Big stick" legislation, giving the United States Government sweeping new powers to deal with defence production stoppages, was reliably reported to-day to be under consideration by key Congressional leaders.

Enactment of such a law, they added, would give President Roosevelt means to enforce decisions which might be made by the new National Defence Mediation Board.

The legislation under consideration probably would authorize the Government to take over any plants whose owners "fail"—for any reason, such as a strike—to manufacture military equipment.

RickardLeads Wheat Bonus Bolt

McNevin And Blair Lend Backing, 'Unfair To Ontario'

OTTAWA, March 28 (CP)—Under fire from government supporters and opposition groups alike, the government's policy for handling the 1941 wheat crop today seemed headed for stormy passage through the House of Commons.

In the House yesterday Liberal farmer-members attacked particularly a clause in the program which provides for a $2-an-acre bonus to Prairie farmers who sow former wheat land to coarse grains.

They foresaw Western farmers using this grain for hog feed and threatening the pork industry of Ontario and other provinces.

One Ontario farmer, W. F. Rickard (Lib. Durham), said he could not vote for the appropriation to bonus Western farmers in that manner.

The debate was on the supplementary estimate of $35,000,000 with which the government proposes to encourage Prairie farmers to reduce by 9,000,000 acres the land they normally sow to wheat.

Hanson Attacks

It was enlivened by a strongly-worded protest from Opposition Leader Hanson against the government's method of proceeding with this measure. He claimed there on Asmara, capital of Eritrea, by British armored formations pressing the initiative gained in the fall of Cheren, "Africa's Verdun," after a seven-week siege. Capture of Asmara would open the road across the coastal plain to Massaua, chief seaport of the colony.

Second was the drive on the Addis Ababa-Jibuti railroad made possible by the capture of Harar, second largest city in Ethiopia. Harar is only 35 miles from Diredawa, a town on the railroad, the lifeline of Italian forces in Central Ethiopia.

Actually, the Italian army in East Africa faced encirclement by at least five British and Allied expeditions.

In Eritrea, on the Red Sea, the way lay open to Asmara, though military experts here warned against too optimistic hopes for its early capture—for its garrison will be swelled by the survivors from among the some 35,000 crack Fascist troops who defended Cheren.

Lines Steadily Closing

In Western Ethiopia, British troops aided by native patriots had driven in 200 miles from the Sudanese border to surround Debra Markos, a garrison town only 110 miles from Addis Ababa.

Farther south, a Belgian expedition reached the important trading post of Gambela, about 30 miles from the Sudan border and on a valley route to the capital.

Southeast of Addis Ababa South African, British and native troops moved northward from recently-captured Neghelli and Yavello, though 250 miles of laterating mountains and swamp lakelands lay between them and the Ethiopian capital.

A twin unit, which also marched northward from Italian Somaliland after the capture of the key ports of Chisimaio and Mogadiscio, was the one that occupied Harar and now is reported advancing toward the railroad at Diredawa.

Cutting of the railroad at Diredawa was described as equivalent of immobilizing Italian troops in Central Ethiopia, for the line is their single effective supply route.

Dollars To Doughnuts

By EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY: Beatrice is furious at the stranger who would chloroform her. But he has opened her eyes to the emptiness of her life. Her money, travel, parties bring her no real pleasure. She promises to see the stranger again, to make him eat his words. Clarence is little help. Marriage is the only solution he can offer. He promises they shall be married within a week.

BEATRICE RUNS AWAY.

CHAPTER III.

But somehow it could not be left Even while they sat together in her car, and Jenkins drove to the club where Clarence lived, it nagged at her At last she burst out "Clarence, I think I'll go in for good works. Those social workers have always taken my checks but never let me do anything. I'm going to fix that. I want to do something. It's the people who work who always seem to be so happy."

"Work to do in the world?" he scoffed. "Ah, love, it's not the people who work who seem so happy. It is only the people who are not happy who, looking at other people, think they are happy. You must know, to a girl in a five-and-ten-cent store, you appear to be the happiest creature in the world."

"I wish I were a girl in a five-and-ten-cent store!" she cried. I'd live. I'd worry. I'd fall in love—I'd have some real feelings, some real emotions."

"You are having some real emotion now," said Clarence, very softly. "Of course, you want to live." His arms reached for her, and he held her tight. "With me, you shall live. I shall teach you what life is, Beatrice. I love you. I love these little hands and your bright hair and your bad little temper."

He put a finger under her chin and lifted her face until her eyes met his. There was a fire in his eyes, a dark and burning look that could not be false. Yes, he loved her. That much was true.

"Kiss me, little Beatrice. Kiss me and then dare to say you cannot have a real emotion."

Afterward, he did not let her go. His lips against her hair, his voice husky with feeling, he said, "No more running away, Beatrice. Next week, we shall be married."

Beatrice Huntington Davenport sat up very straight in her car, and looked fixedly at the back of Jenkins' head as he drove through the slow-moving, heavy, late afternoon traffic. She had promised Clarence that she would marry him next week. Promised because, for a moment in his arms, with his lips on hers, she had believed that he was right.

"We shall be so happy. No other pair in history have ever been as happy as we shall be, darling," he had whispered. "No more discontent, my love. I promise you, our life will hold more than parties and social foolishness and wild running around. I love you, and you love me. We shall have a marriage the world will wonder at."

Beatrice realized that Clarence was utterly serious, and with the realization came a rush of pride that she had not, after all, been fooled by a fortune hunter. Clarence loved her and wanted to make their marriage a real and solid bond.

But after he was gone—while she sat there in the car and the city streets darkened around her—uncertainty gripped her. Being engaged to Clarence was fun. Taking him away from Mimi Frothingham had been fun. At least, until this afternoon, it had all been enjoyable enough.

But she had never actually set the date of her wedding. She had

Urges Highway Control By Counties

TORONTO, March 28 — (CP). — George Doucett (Con., Lanark) advocated that the counties take over the maintenance and control of the main provincial highways during the budget debate in the Ontario Legislature Thursday.

"Each county has a qualified engineer and staff and this work could be handled in most cases with very little inconvenience," he declared.

Mr. Doucett's statement that it costs the province nearly $4 per yard more to maintain highways that it would cost the counties precipitated a flareup in which Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, Highways Minister T. B. McQuesten and Alex Elliott (Lib., Peterborough) participated.

Mr. Nixon and Mr. McQuesten pressed Mr. Doucett for particular instances and when the latter ignored the request. Mr. Elliott demanded that the Lanark member be compelled to answer.

Speaker James Clark ruled, however, that Mr. Doucett was not obliged to answer.

The fact that Government has a surplus of more than $12,000,000 "is no relief to the back concession farmer," continued Mr. Doucett. This surplus meant nothing to the farmer whose stock had been depleted and his farm neglected for want of necessary funds to carry on.

He declared that some arrangement should be made for a conference between farmers from the different provinces and members of the Dominion Government to formulate a policy that would benefit agriculturists as a whole.

Mr. Doucett declared the Federal Government was to bonus the Western Canada farmer for "non-production" yet in his opinion this was not the time to discourage the production of foodstuffs.

"There are great possibilities of our being called upon to supply many countries in Europe, and there is nothing that would be more disastrous to this country than for our heaps of plenty to be turned to want," he said.

For the first time on the continent of Europe the colossal Nazi bluff has been called....And Hitler's hand has been forced with a directness which he cannot possibly evade."

The Time described the sensation coup as "a lightning flash illuminating a dark landscape." The Mirror summed up the situation by saying: "He (Hitler) cannot win the war in the Balkans. But he could lose it there."

Kinettes Put On Program

The "Kinettes" took over the program Thursday at the annual Kinsmen Club ladies' night and to-day members are forced to admit that "the little women" put over one of the most successful evenings ever held by the organization. Mrs. James Wharry, as mistress of ceremonies, was given the full support of Kinettes, and directed a hilarious barn-raising bee and rousing square dance. The ladies were in costume, a number more amusing than quaint, and the Kawartha Club had been given a farm-yard setting, with floors strewn with straw, and walls sprouting oat sheaves and animal sketches.

Outstanding, also was an old-time chorus act, and a vocal duet by Mrs. Adam Sands and Mrs. W. B. Gordon. Supper was served prior to the program.

000, Serbs form one-third. Serbs took the lead in the military coup which swung the government away from the Axis.

The principal language is Serbo-Croat spoken by 9,000,000 to 10,000,000, but in common use there also are Slovene, German, Magyar, Rumanian, Albanian, and several obscure Slavic tongues. Religious faiths include the Eastern Orthodox, Roman Catholic, Moslem, Jewish and several Protestant denominations.

Set down in the heart of the Balkans—traditional European tinder box—the country has a highly-mixed geography.

Six principal mountain ranges intersect it, yet there are valleys and plains and marshlands and nearly 1,000 miles of Adriatic seacoast.

The valleys in general run from northwest to southeast, an item of advantage to the Nazis should they decide — and succeed — in moving down to the Mediterranean through this stubborn land.

The Axis already surrounds the country except for the 152-mile frontier with Greece and the segment of Albania held by the Greeks.

The other borders are: Albania, 277 miles; Italy, 132 miles; former Austria, 160; Hungary, 353; Rumania, 337; Bulgaria, 283.

To defend all the possible fronts, 1,200,000 soldiers are mentioned in Belgrade dispatches. This would be practically maximum strength in a country of Yugoslavia's size. But the soldiers, particularly the large Serb battalions, are knokn as ferocious fighters, even though equipped with weapons of doubtful modernity.

In addition, Yugoslavia has a small navy and an air force of unspecified proportions.

Eighteen of the survivors were taken into port aboard the anonymous merchantman, which lost two lifeboats in the rescue and finally brought the men up with ropes and ladders The other four were picked up by the second warship.

The Otter herself, in peacetime the yacht Nourmahal, on which President Roosevelt sailed in 1934 and 1936 when she was owned by Vincent Astor, sank with a final explosion as the rescue proceeded. She had caught fire suddenly, and from undetermined cause, off Sambro Light early Wednesday.

"It was a terrible nightmare," the youthful captain of the rescue freighter said last night. His ship had come upon the blazing Otter in a gale, and it worked with the other ship for three hours taking the survivors aboard.

One of the Otter's lifeboats had been overturned by the seas, spilling men into the water, and those who did not drown had to be lifted aboard one by one. The men in the second lifeboat clambered aboard themselves

Hipel Reviews Ontario's Labor Worries

TORONTO, Mar. 28 — (CP). — Hon. Norman Hipel will complete his review of the Labor Department's activities at a later date, but for the time being the Labor Minister has given the Ontario Legislature many facts to consider. Mr. Hipel, who has been ailing, was unable to finish his budget debate speech yesterday and was excused after talking for more than an hour.

During his address, interrupted repeatedly by members desiring details, Mr. Hipel reviewed the work of the Conciliation Board, the Workmen's Compensation Board, and effect of the Factory Inspection Act and the Industrial Standards Act.

Through efforts of the Conciliation Board, many strikes had been prevented and during the past 11 months the loss of man-days totalled only 33,326 or one-ninth of the time lost in 1937.

Mr. Hipel said arrangements were being made to extend hours in certain industries due to war conditions, but declared he was "definitely opposed to excessively long hours, even in war time." Great

Toronto Youth Sentenced To Six Months

Six months definite and three months indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory was the sentence handed out by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to Matthew J. Moran, 16-year-old Toronto youth who last week pleaded guilty to two charges of receiving stolen goods.

One charge involved two suits of clothes and ten shirts stolen from the store of Ed. Riley here on March 2, and the other concerned a stolen suit of clothes in Toronto, the case being tried here at the request of the Toronto authorities.

For the Riley break-in two other youths, Norman Cross and Harry Roberts are already under sentence. Moran, arrested some time after the other, was charged with receiving some of the stolen property.

Detective-Sergeant W. E. Meagher gave evidence in both cases this morning. He told of a conversation he had had with Moran after the arrest of the latter in which the accused had admitted knowing that the suits and shirts he had received from Cross and Roberts were stolen. "He said he had taken them from the other two to sell to a fence in Toronto," Detective-Sergt. Meagher said.

Knew It Was Stolen

Witness testified that Moran had also admitted the other offence with which he was charged. "He said that he had paid $2 for the suit, knowing it to have been stolen, and then sold it to the same fence for $4" Detective Meagher swore.

After Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., had produced the prisoner's record and Magistrate Langley scanned the sheet closely and then had the record passed to John A. Bradshaw, defence counsel.

Mr. Bradshaw urged leniency for the accused asking that he be given a short jail sentence rather than be sent back to the reformatory. "According to my information," said counsel for the defence, "Moran was drunk on the day that the offence was committed and he had not known in advance that the other boys were coming down to Peterborough to commit a burglary." Mr. Bradshaw stressed the prisoner's youth in his plea for lenient treatment.

"The boy is very young," pointed out Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C. to the magistrate.

"I am considering your youth," said Magistrate Langley in imposing sentence. "I am also giving you the benefit of the statement that you did not know in advance of this break-in. At the same time I am not green enough to believe that you might not have known about it."

Moran's mother, who came down from Toronto for the hearing this morning wept silently as sentence was imposed.

"You will be able to be out before Christmas," Magistrate Langley said to the youth as he sentenced him to six months definite and a further three-month indeterminate period in the Ontario Reformatory on each charge, the sentence to run concurrently.

A third charge against Moran of breaking and entering the Riley store here and committing theft was dismissed when the crown offered no evidence.

Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka of Japan meanwhile had another long talk with Foreign Minister Ribbentrop. Some observers assumed that Yugoslavia was a subject of discussion and may even have been the reason for the unscheduled meeting.

Gen. Simovic, these sources said, informed the German minister that Yugoslavia wishes to remain on peaceful terms with Germany and Italy as well as with all other countries but that fulfillment of the full terms of the Axis pact was "impossible because it would be contrary to the will of the Yugoslav people."

Army Heads To Battle Posts

Nevertheless, the Yugoslav army was mobilizing 1,200,000 fighting men and moving them into battle stations. Reports from Sofia said Nazi troops occupying Bulgaria were rushing toward the Yugoslav frontier.

The cabinet action followed a day of violent jubilation in which the Belgrade populace, bitterly anti-Axis, shouted for war and hailed the early morning coup which put King Peter and Gen. Simovic in power and ousted the pro-Axis cabinet of Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic.

The new cabinet, informed sources asserted today, will put the country back on the policy of strict neutrality which Yugoslavia attempted up until the time Vcetkovic, Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic and Regent Prince Paul succumbed to German pressure.

Whether Hitler and Mussolini were ready to let Yugoslavia return to her former status in view of the Vienna affiliation ceremony Tuesday remained a burning question.

New Cabinet Decides

The United States note was delivered as 1,200,000 Yugoslav soldiers stood fully mobilized to resist German and Italian armies should they attempt to hold Yugoslavia to the terms of the pact.

Prime Minister Churchill implied full British support for an anti-Axis Yugoslavia when he declared yesterday that Britain would make "common cause" with the new government.

Flags still were flying in the capital. Trucks filled with soldiers rumbled through the streets toward the frontiers.

Mr. Lane told Premier Simovic and Foreign Minister Momtchilo Ninchic he was authorized on behalf of President Roosevelt to inform the government that news of the Yugoslav stroke had caused "an immediate and popular reaction in America" and that the event "constitutes a matter for self-congratulation for every liberty-loving man and woman."

While Yugoslavia awaited the reaction of Hitler, clamorous demonstrations occurred in the Belgrade Cathedral in the presence of young King Peter at the swearing in of the new government by the Serb orothodox patriarch.

Cheers For British, U. S.

When the automobiles of the United States and British ministers arrived at the cathedral a cheering crowd broke through police lines. Many tried to shake the hands and even to kiss the envoys.

The cathedral was packed with army officers who gave rousing cheers as King Peter entered.

The young king, who formally took over the royal power which he normally would not have received until September at his 18th birthday, wore the blue uniform of a General of Aviation.

The Patriarch presented a cross for him to kiss.

Troops guarded the German and Italian legations constantly. A German legation attache said almost all Germans who had not already left the country were in refuge at the legation fearing beatings if they went on the streets.

Considerable excitement was created by a German language broadcast of unknown origin which predicted that "Yugoslavia" probably will enlarge the war area by aiding England."

Press Changes Tune.

Danilo Gregoric, editor of the pro-German newspaper Vreme, who went to Germany to pave the way for the signing of the pact, was reported under arrest, and the paper suddenly took a pro-British tone.

Despatches of D.N.B. and Stefani, German and Italian news and propaganda agencies, gave way to stories of British origin.

It was learned, meanwhile, that Vladimir Macek, the old Croat Peasant Party Leader, has not fully decided to remain in the Cabinet. He is a hold-over from the Cvetkovic Cabinet which went out yesterday.

Macek is understood to fear that Croatia, in the north, will be forced to bear the brunt of German and Italian attacks in case of conflict.

The Governor of Croatia was understood to be attempting to negotiate between Macek and Simovic to arrange for continued Croat participation in the Cabinet.

High diplomatic sources said the Yugoslav Cabinet had informed German Minister Viktor von Heeren in reply to an "urgent" German demand for an explanation of yesterday's coup that neither King Peter nor Parliament would ratify the Axis pact.

A record number of fines in National League hockey history resulted from a Stanley Cup playoff game a year ago to-night in which Toronto Leafs defeated Detroit Red Wings 3-1. Nine Toronto players and eight Detroit players drew $25 fines after a fight that involved practically every member of the two teams.

Cobourg Boys In England Reported Well

COBOURG, March 28.—(ENS).—Many letters of note have been received from Cobourg boys over there, but one of the more interesting is sent from "Benny" Benson, a member of the anti-aircraft battery recruited at the start of the war eighteen months ago. Benny is well known here, having been a star linesman with the Cobourg Galloping Ghosts when that team was winning football titles in 1937 and 1938. His letter follows:

"Well here I am writing as I promised last time I saw you. Well, am doing fine, have lost a bit of weight but we could all get it back if we had Andy here. The boys from Cobourg are all fine. We were stationed at the same town as the old 14th, but we moved a short time ago, but managed to see them all, also "Tweed" Earle and the Hie boys with the C.M.P. We are in a very nice town now, and being the first Canadians here, the people have all treated us swell and most of us are having not a bad time considering 10.30 p.m. is the dead line. They have many funny ways here, one they start to dance in a lot of the places at 6.30 p.m. and stop at 10.00 p.m. Very few go after that. The only thing that really pinches is the cigarettes, they are expensive and rotten. It's really funny some times how valuable some tobacco is. We get both The World and Star and boy, do they ever get a going over. The first thing I do when I get back is going to be to get a good cup of coffee. The town here is very picturesque, there are little narrow streets that some of our cars would have a time getting up. There is an old castle, and some old Roman walls. All of England is a net work of gun positions and machine gun posts. You would hardly believe so much could be done in so short a time. The people here are really wonderful and you can sure believe what you read about their spirit and then double it. The ones my hat is really off to is the men in the factories, especially in London and I spent five days and night travelling around there. They work from 8 to 14 hours a day, their homes have been blown to pieces and they have lost everything that they own but they eat in a lunch counter and try to sleep in the subways and unless you were ever in one you can not imagine what it is like. Then during the night they do two hours on fire guard. Every one here is doing something and the women are driving busses, ambulances and they sure can handle them. I thought I could drive till I saw some of them throwing 5 or 6 ton trucks around and then I decided that I knew nothing about it Boy, these roads here are sure dandys, ask some one that has seen them, what they would think of putting a bus 30 to 50 miles an hour up them and they will give you a good idea how good these women really are. We have several alarms a day ever since we came here and have heard plenty of German planes. I saw the first one close to-day and it was brought down by Spitfires and, let me tell you, once they get on one it hasn't a chance. They make those planes do everything but talk. Bob King says to say "Hello." He is here beside me. Well give my regards to everyone. So I will colse hoping to see you in the near future.

Your Pal,
"BENNY" BENSON.

Travelogue Given Port Hope WMS

PORT HOPE, March 28 (ENS).—Group 6 of the Women's Association of the United Church was in charge of the program for the regular monthly meeting held Thursday night.

The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. Price, the leader. A quartette from the Baptist Church, composed of Mrs. Elmsley, Miss Hosking, Miss Chesher and Mrs. Smith, sang two delightful selections. Miss Vivian Jennings of St. Paul's Church, rendered a solo in her usual fine style.

Mrs. Price introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Bryant.

Mr. Bryant lived a great deal of his life in Cypress and came to Canada only last year, residing first in Vancouver, and then he came to Port Hope. He addersed the association on his trip from Cypress to Vancouver, illustrating his talk with slides. His address was enthusiastically received by an interested audience.

The president of the association, Mrs. Hawkins, conducted a business period at the close of the address.

Leave Of The Midand Unit Expires On Monday

COBOURG, Mar. 28— (ENS). — Cobourg people are being pleasantly reminded these days of the colorful early fall and winter parades of the crack Midland Regiment, C.A.S.F., due to the furlough given to the members of this unit now stationed in Ottawa. Part of the regiment, a number one unit of the Canadian Army, was recruited here in town and the mass furlough granted to the "Mad" Midland has given many of the local young men a chance to return to their native heath, and as a consequence the town has once again taken on a week-end.

The Midland is under the command of Major Gamey, who has already seen service in England during the present conflict. Among its officers from town are Captain Galbraith, Lieutenants Niles and Melville, and in addition many of the N.C.O.'s are former Cobourg boys. The regiment possesses one of the finest bugle bands in the C.A.S.F., and also has its own brass band, and the parades of the Midland have been winning high praise in Ottawa during their stay in the Capital.

Fear Lakeshore League Will Not Operate This Year

COBOURG, March 28—(ENS).—One of the oldest baseball leagues in the O.B.A. has its existence threatened according to delegates at the first annual meeting held here yesterday. The officers of the Lakeshore League held no hope for any resumption of baseball this season at their first get-together, due to the present conditions which have scattered the players far and wide. The league last year operated a three team group and those three teams, Bowmanville Royals, Port Hope Ontarios, and Cobourg's champion Ponies sent only two representatives to the meeting, exclusive of officers, and both were from the local team. The meeting was presided over by President R. Dodge of Cobourg, and also present were Secretary-Treasurer Allan Brown of Port Hope and Vice-President Sid Little of Bowmanville. President J. W. Burtt of the Cobourg club and Councillor Joe Delanty represented the locals. The league is solvent, having on hand a balance of $23.40. The meeting revealed that the total league receipts last year were $86.75 and total disbursements $63.35. This healthy financial condition was heartily approved by the officers present, and Allan Brown, treasurer, was given credit for the balance on hand due to his wise handling of league funds.

The loop will buy and present a red and white pennant emblematic of the 1940 championship to the Cobourg team, as a token of the local team's title winning effort. A letter from Ken Colling of Belleville in regard to reviewing the C.O.B.L. Senior league with Port Hope and Cobourg included was read. The other entrants, according to Mr. Colling's missive would be Peterborough, Oshawa and Belleville. The matter was given a thorough examination, but it was decided that it was impossible for this year at least as far as the Lakeshore loop is concerned, and President Dodge was delegated to write Mr. Colling, who is a member of the O.B.A., to this effect.

A committee of President Dodge and Vice-president Little was appointed to attend the O.B.A. meeting at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto on Saturday, April 5. A further meeting of the league itself will be held in Port Hope on April 25, when the election of officers will be held and entries from the teams interested will be accepted. This it was pointed out, will be proceeded with only if two or more teams fill out entries to the league, for the coming season. These entries will not be accepted after the April 25 meeting, as the league will fold up if no further interest is shown on that date. The situation in Cobourg is hopeless as far as intermediate baseball is concerned, according to President Burtt of the local club, who stated that six of last year's regulars are in the service forces of the country; a seventh has been moved by his employers. A possible combination of Port Hope and Cobourg might be formed, the president stated. The Bowmanville situation is also in great doubt as to playing strength, it was stated; while the Port Hope interests were having little success in electing a new executive to replace the old, which had resigned in a body, the meeting was told. The feeling of the meeting was in favor of a baseball holiday at least for 1941, the delegates concluded.

Flier Thrusts Ring At Cobourg Waitress

COBOURG, Mar. 28 — (ENS). — Hedy Lemarr has not a corner on all the glamor in the world. No, sir. There's a little girl working as a waitress in a Cobourg restaurant who has so much glamor that tall handsome airmen throw diamond rings at her.

It hapened last week, and when the girl told the story in the restaurant last evening she didn't know she was talking to a reporter, so her name will not be used, but people in the town won't have a difficult time picking the best-looking waitress in the restaurants.

A member of the R.C.A.F., a six-footer with fair hair and good looks, and two stripes, came into the restaurant a week ago, and seemed quite disappointed when the girl did not remember him. He claimed that he had been in on several occasions, but Air Force men are plentiful in Cobourg, and one cannot remember them all.

On this particular day everything was going wrong for the little waitress, the customers were cranky, the boss was on the rampage, and the employees were on edge. The airman didn't like that at all, a nice young girl should not be subject to even the slightest bit of distress, so he decided right there to marry the girl and take her away.

Thought Him Kidding.

The waitress thought he was kidding her, but when he left the cafe and walked to the nearest jewellery store for a diamond solitaire, she started to worry. He insisted that she accept the engagement ring, and at that moment her mother dropped in for a cup of coffee. The airman could see the resemblance between the two so he promptly walked over to her, introduced himself, and asked if he could marry the daughter.

Mother Comes to Rescue.

When the mother recovered from the shock of hearing an earnest, handsome young man in the Air Force blue asking for her daughter in marriage after half an hour's acquaintance she had to think fast, so she expressed her regrets that the daughter was already engaged.

The flier finally accepted this as true, and left the restaurant. Discussing the incident the girl said the flier had not been drinking, so the only conclusion she could arrive at was that this young man had plumbed the depths of loneliness, was perhaps alone in the world, and wanted someone to comfort him.

Driver Burned To Death In Bus Blaze

GRAFTON, March 28.—(ENS)—The inquest adjourned from a previous date in connection with the death of Arthur Timmins, Oshawa bus driver who was burned to death after his bus met in collision with a truck, resumed its hearing last night bringing in the following verdict.

'We the undersigned jury find that Arthur Timmins came to his death the morning of Feb. 13, 1941, at a point known as Hancock's Corner on Highway No. 2 as a result of a collision between a bus owned by the Gollacutt Coach Lines and driven by the deceased and truck owned by the Martin Transport and driven by Norman McIntyre.

Albert Maskell, Colborne, stated he boarded the bus at Colborne at 7:40 a.m. on February 13 and took the third seat from the front on the right side. He had noticed the road was slippery with frost and ice.

"The front end of the bus slewed over and caught the front of the transport as we went around the curve. I do not think we were going over 40 miles an hour," stated Maskell. "Everything in the front of the bus seemed to burst out in flames. I crossed the bus and got out through a window on the left side that had been broken in the impact. I could not actually see the driver for the flames. I don't believe he moved after the crash."

Maskell also said the front of the bus was over on the south side of the centre line and that the transport truck was entirely south of the centre line when the impact took place.

YOU BECOME WHAT YOU EAT!

Robt. G. Jackson, M.D., Now in his 84th year

It cannot be doubted that the greatest evil of our civilization is wrong foods and feeding methods; trying to live upon unnatural constipating foods and ignoring the food-gifts of Nature which come from the farm and field.

Our resistance to sickness and debility is maintained and measured by the amount of vitality we possess and vitality can be obtained and maintained by eating foods that have in them a vital or life principle which they can transfer to us.

I positively assert that if you, well or ill, will eat one full meal daily of any one of my natural whole-grain cereals, Dr. Jackson Meal (formerly Roman Meal) Bekus-Puddy, or Lishus; one meal consisting largely of green vegetable salad, or fresh fruit; consume milk and cheese freely, and drink four to six cups daily of my alkaline beverage Kofy Sub, choosing the balance of the food intake from simple, sensible foods, you will realize why I, at 84, am younger in mind and more vigorous in body than 90% of men and women in their early forties.

Tipping The Apple Cart

Events have been moving rapidly in Yugoslavia. So rapidly that what is news today is old stuff by tomorrow. The thinking world stood back in amazement when Yugoslavia signed away its birthright for a mess of Nazi pottage.

Next day the same world rubbed its old eyes and read that Peter II, although but 17, had taken the helm in Yugoslavia and with him was General Dusan Simovic, an officer who was described as being "tough."

Read also that the first action of the new government was to disavow any intention of recognizing the document which had been signed at Vienna which joined Yugoslavia to the Axis powers. Those who engineering that deal have skipped the country, or if they were not quick enough to do that they have been placed under arrest.

Fast on the heels of all that came the report from Washington that the United States Government had sent congratulations to the new Yugoslavian Government, and made mention of the fact that President Roosevelt was empowered to assist nations seeking to preserve their independence.

From London came the blunt and forceful declaration from Prime Minister Churchill that Yugoslavia "had found its soul in revolution." The added statement was that "the British Empire and its Allies will make common cause with the Yugoslav nation and we will continue to march and strive together until complete victory is won."

Mr. Churchill in making the announcement was careful to state that his statement was based on "such information as I have received."

There will be those who will state they had anticipated something like that would happen, but we doubt if their number is great. Judging the present by the past it looked as though the signing of the Axis document at Vienna would commit Yugoslavia to the fold of the enemy the same as Rumania and Bulgaria.

Such reports as have been coming from Belgrade announce that the populace paraded through the streets shouting "Long live Peter II!" Peter I, who was leader of the Serbs on the side of the Allies in the previous war, died in 1921, and following him came his son, Alexander, a wise man and good ruler, fearless enough to make enemies if necessary. He was assassinated in 1934, and a regency existed until such time as Peter II, son of Alexander and Queen Marie, should come of age.

On his mother's side Peter II is related to young King Michael of Rumania since Queen Marie of Yugoslavia is a sister of the deposed King Carol of Rumania, and Peter is also the grandson of the late Queen Marie of Rumania, and the great-great-grandson of Queen Victoria of Britain.

What effect all these changed conditions will have on the plotters in Berlin is not clear at the moment. There was a great celebration in the German capital over the coming of the foreign minister of Japan. He had arrived simply to look over the situation and find what sort of company his nation was keeping in Europe. He himself had patiently explained he was bound on no devilry, but a skeptical world made its own interpretation. In the midst of this gathering the coming of the news from Yugoslavia would be nothing less than a plain punch on the nose for the host of the occasion.

Hitler and Ribbentrop were as certain as could be that they had Yugoslavia sewed up tight. They barely had time to put the precious document away in the strong box until they received word that it had been renounced and denounced by the legitimate representatives of the intended victim. Under the circumstances the people of this land of ours will say with fervent voice: "Long Live Peter II!"

A Present For Il Duce

War correspondents continue to pick up stories of what was taking place at the Albanian battle front during the visit of Mussolini. When he was there he gave the generals something like a dead-line placed at March 15, by which time they were supposed to "do something."

They "did something" all right. They littered the hills with dead and wounded Italians.

The latest story has to do with a body of 500 picked troops from the Italian army who appear to have been caught up with the idea of "doing something." They were going forth to capture the Greek General Headquarters, and it was to be "a present for Il Duce."

The five hundred were not going to make a frontal attack, but they moved forward under the cover of night just as they might have done in the story books or the movies. They crawled and they crept, and the thing appeared to be going over well enough except for the one slight defect that there appeared to have been a number of Greek soldiers out after bedtime, and as it came to daybreak they had informed the batteries in the hills, and a ring of fire was placed around the 500 so they could not advance, nor could they retreat, nor could reinforcements come to their aid. The spirit of high adventure seems to have oozed out badly when the Greeks finished the story by charging with bayonets and taking the 500 venturesome Italians. They "did something" all right.

Is There a Solution?

The agricultural debate is going to have its way at Ottawa, and farmer members have been waiting patiently for it to come. Two of them sponsored an amendment to the motion to go into supply, and they called for farm prices being placed on a level with other prices. Mr. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, evidently regarded this as a move for a vote of non-confidence in the Government. There are farmer members in the Liberal ranks, and the minister wanted them to feel there was going to be plenty of opportunity for debate.

When the question of putting farm prices on a level with others was raised the House would have something before it which is also before every farmer in the country. Because that is what they are talking about, and what they are asking for. The farmer will tell you that all he desires is to be as well used as a Canadian manufacturer. He will tell you the Canadian manufacturer has been subsidized because he regards a tariff as a subsidy.

Back of it all the farmer is not anxious to be subsidized, but he does feel that the governments have done little which he can see as beneficial to the business side of his daily work. We do not believe the average farmer takes a favorable view of subsidies, even if they are directed toward himself. Each one that comes is just another way of officially admitting that there is something basically wrong with the whole set-up, and that agriculture, which is a primary occupation in this or any other country, is not on a sound footing. It needs something tossed out to it now and then by the government in order to keep it going. And that does not line up with the feeling of the farmer that if he had a chance he should be able to so operate his own business that he could make a living out of it.

The farmer knows that his father and probably his grandfather before him made a living on the farm; knows too that in many cases he was able to retire when the day's work was too much for him. Knows also that the farmer of today can't do that.

We have a feeling that farm life in Ontario changed with the opening of the Canadian West and its subsequent development. We were not aware of it at the time; there were thousands of our farm folk who went West to take up cheap land; we used to call it the Granary of the Empire, and that is what it could well be. But the West produced so greatly that it needed a world market to provide sufficient outlet, and when the world market began to contract some years ago the problem started becoming acute. The situation today is that we have a world-size production, but no world market in which to sell it.

If the farmer members at Ottawa can herd their ideas around that central point and suggest, find, discover, even intimate or hint at a way out, then they will be serving their constituents and the entire country well.

The Muskrat Season

The muskrat season opens at the end of the month for the district south of No. 7 Highway, and that includes the Rice Lake area, rat pelts from which have gained rather an enviable reputation in the market.

The closing date for the section south of No. 7 and the opening date for district north have not been announced, and that is right enough, because the weather has everything to do with it. We doubt if the muskrats have started to move.

Trapping muskrats is something like a battle of wits between the rats and trappers. The trapper has to set his traps where he guesses the muskrat will go, and as the trap is not baited it calls for a keen knowledge of the habits of the animals. As the season progresses the take decreases because the muskrat is a wary animal.

Fortunately the miserable custom of spearing the rats in their huts is passing, and the game wardens have that situation pretty well in hand. A good season means cash in the pocket for a good many trappers and guides in this district.

To the Indian the muskrat represents a dual purpose catch; he can sell the pelt and he can eat the muskrat. There are a number of the Indian trappers who have learned how to preserve the meat so that it can be used for weeks after the season has closed. They use a stiff brine mixture as the preservative. We recall having encountered muskrat stew at a snug little home of a guide and trapper early in June. It smelled as fresh as could be (but how it tasted we do not know). Many of these people have a high regard for food about which white people know nothing, and their preference would run this way: (1) porcupine, (2) muskrat, and (3) groundhog. They explain that all these animals are strictly vegetarians and are cleaner in their habits than most of the animals and birds which are used by the white people, and actually their argument is sound enough.

Fooling The Readers

There has been a case before court in Toronto which has to do with one of those nasty little papers published weekly in that city. With the outcome of the case we are not for the moment concerned, but the point of interest is in a statement made to the jury by the man who claims he owns the paper. It was to the effect that the name of an individual which appears in the masthead of the paper as managing editor is purely fictitious. Such an individual does not exist, and so that line in the paper is a plain printed falsehood.

It was claimed that the paper frequently exposed rackets of one kind or another, and the meaning of such claim was that the paper was performing some useful service and was therefore justified in existing.

The policy of such papers is to so arrange their reading matter that the section of the public which we call gullible is sufficiently interested to step forward and buy the sheet. The amount of actual exposure of wrong-doing in such papers is exceedingly small and the amount of conjecture in which they indulge is exceedingly large. A reputable paper does not use the name of a fictitious person as one who is responsible for the editorial policy.

DECISION

(By A.B.K.)

¶ John Thomas says he'll have to move, he fears he's getting in a groove, he lists his house not bad; admits though it has some defect, when he has looked around and checked, it makes him somewhat sad.

¶ When rain came driving in last week, he found the roof had sprung a leak, it dripped upon the bed; John Thomas says he never smiled, in fact he seemed exceeding riled, when he crawled into bed.

¶ And when it thaws the cellar floor, takes water 'bout a foot or more, and things begin to float; he says he cannot walk down there, and holds perhaps it's only fair, that he should have a boat.

¶ The flooring in the shed's no good, it doesn't look like what it should, I happened to inquire; John Thomas said the boards were dry, they came in handy when he'd try, to light the kitchen fire.

¶ He says it's drafty on the floor, can't seem to keep it warm no more, at times his feet gets blue; there used to be storm doors on there, for wood he had no cash to spare, and so he burned them too.

¶ The back fence went up long ago, he split that up when came the snow, quite thrifty so he'll prove; there's nothing more that he can burn, John Thomas don't know where to turn—and so he'll have to move.

Waterway Will Cause Fight At Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Over the project for a big-ship waterway from the Great Lakes, via the St. Lawrence, to the Atlantic, a stiff fight's ahead in congress.

President Roosevelt

President Roosevelt's 100 per cent in favor of the development. In the first place, he wants to get lake boats to sea, to carry supplies to England, across the ocean. Some of them can navigate the river now, but their size has to be limited, to avoid scraping bottom and to get through the narrow channel and the Welland canal locks.

"Pooh!" answers the Transportation Association of America, opposing the project, "it'll take at least until 1947 to enlarge the outlet, and by then Britain's shipping emergency will be past."

Even so, argue the scheme's proponents it'll be, commercially speaking, a magnificent thing to have as a permanent deep waterway.

More than half the time, disputes the transportation association, it'll be no such thing, except to skate on; from November until May it'll be frozen over. And it'll cost considerably above a billion, which is a lot to pay for a skating rink.

You fellows forget, reason proponents, when you say that Britain's emergency may be past by 1947, that Uncle Sam's got to have a two-ocean navy from now on Well, we have yards at Cleveland, Lorain, Chicago, Superior, Buffalo, River Rouge, Ashtabula, Toledo and Manitowoc that, with a bit of enlargement, can turn out war craft ad lib. But we'll have to get them to salt water, and how are we going to do it without an improved St. Lawrence waterway?

OPPOSITION'S STAND

BETTER build them right on our salt water coasts, rejoin opponents.

That's where they everlastingly will be subject to being bombed by plane, insist proponents. On our lake shores our plans won't be so easy for potential enemy bombers to get at. In short, this waterway development is vital to our national defence.

America railroads naturally aren't friendly to the waterway. If there's transportation to be done, they want to do it; not to have it travel by water.

Ports like New York don't like the idea, either. Their preference is to have exports funnelled out through their harbors.

Neither is Buffalo enthusiastic. Buffalo's been in the habit of having the bulk of stuff piled off there, upon arrival from up the lakes, and loaded on to freight cars, making it an important trans-shipment point. Maybe Buffalo, upon due consideration, might be reconciled to the notion of being transformed into a huge shipbuilding centre (much larger than it is now), but it isn't reconciled yet.

Possibly such lake ports as Duluth and Milwaukee don't particularly care.

Chicago's uneasy, though. It's afraid that down-the-St. Lawrence suction would adversely affect the water level in that harbor and maybe dry up its canal to the Mississippi.

Then there's the power angle.

WATER POWER

BIG fuel-produced power companies shy away from the prospect of having a vast reservoir of water power turned loose in competition with them, and that's what President Roosevelt says he has in mind as a by-product of the waterway's transportation utility. Perhaps it would be a fine thing from their present customers' standpoint, but the companies are understandably skeery of it.

The president is pretty resolute, but so's the opposition.

The latter was strong enough to beat the plan in 1934, but it's been revised since then.

In 1934 it was submitted as a United States-Canadian treaty. An international treaty has to be confirmed by a two-thirds Senate vote and this one, while it got a majority (46-42) didn't get the necessary two-thirds.

This time it's in the form of an ordinary congressional bill, which can be passed by a simple majority of both houses.

It doesn't matter that it's a mere bill; not a treaty. It's a foregone conclusion that, if it passes, Canada's legislature promptly will pass a corresponding one. That'll make the transaction as effective as a treaty would. It may be an evasion, but it will turn the trick.

The "antis" will roar like sixty, though.

IT ALL DEPENDS

FIGURES recently made available indicate that France has paid to Germany since the armistice of last July more than Germany paid in reparations to France from 1919 to 1931. France is paying for the support of the Germany army of occupation.

It is interesting to recall the anguished squawks that used to be let loose by Adolf Hitler about "infamous reparations" and the caustic manner in which he used to denounce the principle involved. It all depends, that is to say, on who is having to pay. — Memphis Commerical Appeal.

Mr. Howe Is 100% Right

MINISTER of Munitions Howe told the House of Commons on Friday that no official can be given a free hand in the direction of any branch of war production or in the spending of public money.

Mr. Howe is so right the wonder is that, in a democracy, it has been necessary for him to make such a statement.

Unfortunately a terrible lot of nonsense has been talked and written about the need of some sort of a super-dictator running our war effort. We have had newspaper and public men, all of whom should know better, demanding that some heaven-born genius be summoned to Ottawa to cut through "red tape" and parliamentary checks and balances to "get things done." What was needed, they have been proclaiming loudly, is a "Canadian Lord Beaverbrook."

Well, to begin with, Lord Beaverbrook doesn't cut through British parliamentary checks and balances, nor through the "red tape" of the British Treasury Board. Not by a long sight. Lord Beaverbrook (as Mr. Howe pointed out gets approval of his expenditures from the British Treasury, and approval of his policies and plans from the British Cabinet. More than that, and equally important, Lord Beaverbrook is a member of the British Cabinet—and of the British Parliament. He is a responsible Minister of His Majesty's Government; responsible to Parliament.

If the Government or people of Canada want Mr. H. R. McMillan (to use him as an example) to run Canada's Department of Munitions and Supply, or Mr. Ralph Bell to run Canada's air craft production, there is a way to do it. That way is to make Mr. McMillan and Mr. Bell members of the Canadian Parliament and the Canadian Cabinet. To put them, in other words, in the position of Lord Beaverbrook.

There is no other way. No other way under Canadian or British democratic processes. If we want to scrap those processes, if we really want a totalitarian technique and method, well and good. All that is necessary is to say so; to convince the Canadian people that that is the right war method. Otherwise let us cease this foolish talk about importing somebody into our war effort who would be supreme over Parliament, who could just go ahead and do things in this country as Herr Hitler does them in Germany.—Ottawa Journal.

WOMEN ARE READY

From Hansard

Mr. FRASER (Peterborough West): I should like to ask the minister if the women's auxiliary corps throughout the country have been used in connection with this work. In the city of Peterborough they have a women's auxiliary corps with over two hundred members. They have been training for over six months. They have taken a course covering the St. John ambulance corps first aid course; they had had lectures on anti-gas work, and they have been helped by the officers of the training camp there. "A" company have had military training, under an officer, in army office work and correspondence. "B" company have had training in map reading, and later on they are going to take up motor mechanics. "C" company have had lectures under Doctor Clarke, medical officer of health of Peterborough, in sanitation, and is now taking an advanced course in first aid under St. John ambulance corps officer. "D" company have completed a course in dietetics, and in another week they go into canteen work. Could these women be used in that work? Yesterday the hon. member for Lake Centre asked the Minister of National War Services a question on this point. These Peterborough women are anxious to get into war work and do what they can to help win the war.

THEY ARE PRISONERS

Dr. [illegible] EVANG, surgeon-general of the Norwegian public health service, visiting in Minneapolis, remarks on the number of suicides among troops in the German army occupying Norway.

Especially among Germans assigned, in clusters of half a dozen or less, to guard public utilities and similar plants in isolated Norwegian communities, there have been many cases of self-destruction, Dr. Evang says.

He explains it thus: Norwegians of these communities ignore the Germans, turn their backs when addressed, and pretend not to understand German nor the German's handbook Norwegian. The German soldiers tire of their own companionship, grow ashamed of their intrusion and depressed by the breach between them and the Norwegian people, and suicide has become an increasingly frequent way out.—Minneapolis Star-Journal.

TRAVELS WONDERFUL

ALICE BOOTH writes in the New York Sun: "I have travelled extensively in four British colonies or dominions — Canada, Nova Scotia, New Zealand and Australia....and I want to say that what the British think of as plenty of food is not food at all as we know it in this country." One can but hope that Miss Booth's knowledge of food is as charming as her knowledge of geography.—Windsor Star.

TOO LATE! TOO LATE!

COLONEL LINDBERGH believes that France and Britain "waited until it was too late" and that it was folly for them to declare war in 1939 —from which it follows that he would have had them submit to Nazism without a war. Now, he says, "our politicians and idealists harangue us about defending freedom and democracy and our way of life," but "we in America have waited until it is too late....Like France and England in 1939, we are unprepared." So the unstated conclusion is that we might as well forget about freedom and democracy and our way of life; it is too late; nothing more can be done except submit as France and Britain should have done to whatever world-triumphant Nazism may present to us. But it is not too late. The very fact that we cannot land great armies in Europe frees all our energies to back up those who still are in Europe, to use our vast power in this world in ways which can be effective, to control and not passively submit to our destiny.—New York Herald Tribune.

LINERS ON THE LAKES

A GREAT DEAL of nonsense is still being talked about the mighty ocean liners that will ascend the St. Lawrence to the Great Lakes once the river is deepened in the rapids section and below. As any shipping man will tell you, much of this talk is pure moonshine, and probably the only liners we will see will be not much larger than the ocean "tramps" that have been travelling up and down the river for the last 30 or 40 years. — Brockville Recorder and Times.

A REAL FACER

IF THE cold snap of the week-end did not accomplish anything else, it at least gave our old acquaintance, Batchawana Bill, an opportunity to point out what he considers a most interesting phenomenon.

The problem is referred either to the Sault Medical Association or the Algoma Institute of Cosmeticians.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And from henceforth Pilate sought to release him, but the Jews cried out, saying: If thou let this man go thou art not Caesar's friend; whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Caesar.

When Pilate therefore heard that saying he brought Jesus forth, and sat down in the judgment seat in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Habbatha.

And it was the preparation of the passover, and about the sixth hour, and he said unto the Jews: Behold your king.

But they cried: Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith unto them Shall I crucify your king? The chief priests answered We have no king but Caesar.

Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jesus and led him away.—John 19.

Claims Shortage Of Oils Slowing Huns

WASHINGTON, March 28—(AP).—The United States Congress was told that Germany and Italy are running their own military and industrial activities and the activities of occupied countries "with an amount of petroleum plus synthetic products" that is equivalent to only about 5 per cent. of the present United States domestic oil production.

Robert C. Wilson, petroleum consultant of the Office of Production Management, gave this information to a House of Representatives Interstate Commerce subcommittee during testimony regarding an official defence survey of petroleum resources in the United States.

The oil industry, he testified, is able to meet any increased demands which conceivably may be made upon it.

Even if the United States should become involved in war, he said, defence officials estimate that the demand for oil will be only 5 to 10 per cent. above the expected increase in domestic consumption this year.

Asked for an elaboration of his statement about Germany's and Italy's crude consumption, Wilson went into a detailed discussion of the situation.

He estimated Germany's own actual production at 40,000 barrels daily and its synthetic output at from 70,000 barrels to 75,000 barrels. Imports from Russia "don't amount to much" if they still continue at all, he said, and estimated Rumania's production before Nazi occupation at 125,000 barrels.

Wilson voluntarily offered the suggestion that the main reason why Germany has not used all of its "estimated 25,000 to 30,000 planes" at the same time was the difficulty of transporting high octane gasoline to air bases.

In addition, he said he had unofficial information that Germany is experiencing a shortage of lubricating oils.

CNR Revenue Up 45 Millions 116 p.c. Increase

OTTAWA, March 28 (CP) — Net operating revenue of the Canadian National Railways for the calendar year 1940 was $45,007,441, an increase of $24,152,993 or 116 per cent over 1939, the annual report of the system scheduled tabled Thursday in the House of Commons stated.

The net revenue available for interest after other income and profit and loss requirements had been met was $33,474,443, or $22,839,419 more than in 1939.

The deficit by which the revenues failed to meet interest on funded debts held by the public and was met by appropriations by parliament was $16,965,044. This was $23,130,475 less than in 1939.

In his report S. J. Hungerford, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, said:

"The outlook for 1941 is for further substantial increase in traffic and the directors are hopeful the property will earn its fixed charges and will not require any appropriation by parliament on deficit account.

"To accomplish this result the net revenues after payment of operating expenses will need to be in the neighborhood of $63,000,000, this being the amount required to pay taxes, interest due to the public and to the government, etcetera. This forecast is based on present traffic trends, and a continuation of existing wage scales and material price levels."

Demands Met in Full

The report, received by Transport Minister Cardin, said that Canada's participation in the war brought greatly increased demands upon the national railway system and that these demands were met in full.

The operating ratio was 81.82 per cent or the lowest in the history of the system. Of every additional dollar of revenue, operating expense absorbed 45 cents, leaving 55 cents available for taxes and fixed charges.

Operating revenues totalled $247,527,224, an increase of $43,707,038 or 21.4 per cent over the preceding year. Operating expenses were $202,519,812, an increase of $19,554,044 or 10.7 per cent over 1939. Net operating revenue was $45,007,412 as compared with $20,854,418. The intests on funded debt held by the public totalled $48,701,523, being $1,112,854 less than in 1939, and the interest on Government loans was $1,737,963, an increase of $821,798 an increase of $821,798 over 1939.

Freight revenue increased $34,307,000, and passenger revenue $3,885,000. Behind the detailed figures, the report said, were to be discerned the movement of large numbers of men for training and active service, the long trains of construction material, and equipment moving to new training centres and munition plants, the supply of war materials to the places of manufacture, and the ever increasing movement to ocean ports of war materials and the products of the mines, forests and farms of Canada.

Increased traffic created additional employment for railway workers the number of employees increased by 4,702 to 82,631.

The following equipment was required during the year: 2,765 box cars, 500 flat cars and 25 Northern type locomotives (all of which were ordered in 1939 to meet anticipated war requirements), and five mail and express cars, four coaches, 25 baggage cars, 60 refrigerator cars, 150 ballast cars, 15 cabooses, and 21 work units.

Tax payments amounted to $11,253,900, including $7,039,000 in direct taxes and $4,214,900 sales taxes on the cost of materials.

The net operating income from hotels was $502,000, as compared $302,000 in 1939.

Bass And Muskie Season To Open June 28

TORONTO, March 28.—An announcement by D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, that the bass and lunge open season in Ontario would be advanced from July 1 to Saturday, June 28, was made last night to a large meeting of Toronto Anglers' and Hunters' Association. He predicted also that present indications pointed to a larger influx of United States tourists and American dollars than in several years.

Of the St. Lawrence waterway development, Mr. Taylor said: "I wonder how many realize that it is going to produce so much power the call for power development here and there on our smaller streams will be entirely eliminated for years to come. As anglers and hunters this is something that most of us appreciate, for it is the greatest thing that has happened for the preservation of the natural resources of our Province in a very long time."

The Danger of Coughs Among the Children

In young children a cold or cough is not a thing to be disregarded, as it is often of a grave matter, and unless attended to immediately may, eventually, cause serious trouble.

On the first sign of a cough or cold the mother will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to help get rid of the trouble.

Its promptness and effectiveness in loosening the phlegm, and stimulating the bronchial organs is such that the cough may be checked before anything of a serious nature sets in.

SPORTS – DAY BY DAY

By FRED D. CRAIG

The second playoff games in the Ladies' Basketball Loop scheduled for the Y.W.C.A. gym will hold the spotlight tonight. Quaker Aces and Westclox meet in the senior fixture and St. John's and Y Gym in the junior bracket. In both sections another win for the winners of last week will decide the championship. Quaker Aces in the senior playoff, faced with the task of defeating Westclox or dropping out of the picture will be doing everything to remain in the running and force a third game. The Aces finished well on top in the regular schedule and they feel they can give a much better account of themselves than they did last week. But the Westclox girls are equally confident. In the junior division Y Gym who also have to win to keep in the battle for the title will be reinforced tonight and will have a stronger team than the one defeated by St. John's last week. As a curtain-raiser to the double-header there will be a fifteen-minute exhibition game between the Y.W.C.A. Cadets and a junior boys' team from the Y.M.C.A. The boys won a similar game a few nights ago and the girls are out for revenge.

* * * * * *

Things have started to move again in basketball circles at the Y.M.C.A., too. With both Peterborough's O.A.B.A. squads out of the running the way is cleared to wind up the city league race and considerable progress will be made in that direction tomorrow night when the Dominions and Bees will meet in a sudden-death game to see which outfit will clash with Quaffers in the finals for the championship, last year won by Zephyrs. The two teams are tied for second place and tomorrow's game means curtains for the losers. The close-checking Dominions will be faced with the task of spiking the scoring aces of the Bees, Pete McArthur and Jimmy Thorburn.

* * * * * *

One American League record is expected to go by the boards this season, Al Simmons' mark of 1,768 runs batted in. Simmons is not likely to play as a regular this season and as Jimmy Foxx only needs to bat in 26 runs this campaign to equal the record a new total should be established before the summer is over. The next nearest player still in the game is Charlie Gehringer who is 369 behind the Boston slugger in the matter of runs batted in. Foxx holds another record that is in no danger of being challenged. He has hammered out exactly 500 home runs and that puts him a couple of city blocks ahead of everybody now in the game. Mel Ott of the Giants is next with 388 and Chuck Klein and Al Simmons tied with 299.

Importing Junior Bees

Intimation that Belleville juniors may do some importing for next winter is contained in a newsy paragraph by Ken Colling, as follows: "After the Oshawa-Kingston junior "B" playoff game here last week, Harold Luke, guiding light of minor league hockey in the Motor City, approached Art Kinnear, Kingston's sensational junior goalie, and told Kinnear to stop in at Oshawa any time he decided to make a move from his native Limestone City. "That lad Kinnear has as neat a pair of goaltending hands as you'll see in the junior ranks and can go places in this hockey business if properly coached," continued Luke in admiration. Incidentally Prexy Bill Cook was mighty sweet on defenceman Hinton and right winger Davis of the Oshawa juniors and providing a junior team is sponsored in Belleville next season, Hinton and Davis will be two of the first players to be approached relative to joining the locals. Unless the Belleville juniors are guaranteed a strong junior "B" grouping another year the future of junior hockey seems rather uncertain at this time. Oshawa, Peterborough, Kingston and Belleville would make up a group worth bringing players in for."

* * * * * *

We imagine the executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club will take one look at the group suggested by Mister Colling in the last sentence of that paragraph and then turn pale. If the local team, they will say, could go more than $400 in the red in the grouping they had this season how deep would they get in a section that called for a couple of Kingston trips. Joking aside, however, four well-balanced Junior B clubs in the four burgs mentioned in the Belleville sheet might be built up into a paying proposition but the quality of hockey would have to be stepped up some from this winter's brand to hold the crowd interest. And crowd interest would most certainly be necessary in a group so spread out as a Kingston-Belleville-Peterborough-Oshawa setup. As for importations, Peterborough would certainly have to do its share to get very far in a strong group.

* * * * * *

One outstanding feature of hockey is the manner in which new Canadians are taking hold of the game. Lineups these days are full of names that suggest other countries than Canada and these new adherents to the Dominion's national winter game are more than holding their own. Bill Walshe of the Kingston Whig-Standard tells of one of them, a young Pole who may be found in the big show some day, in the following paragraph: "One little player on the Kingston Juvenile A team last night will be interesting to follow. His adopted name, or his Canadian name, is Joe Mike, because even he can not spell his full Polish name. At 15 years of age he coached and starred for Robert Meek in winning the Public School League championship this winter and last night he played for Kingston Juveniles. Seven years ago his family came from Poland to Kingston and although starting later than most lads to learn the art of skating and knocking a puck around with a stick he is now much better than most boys his age."

Series Tied Up

Boston Bruins may have been knocked back against the ropes Tuesday night but proving they are a real fighting team, they bounched off them again last night and came out battling so hard that they defeated the Leafs 2 to 1 and tied up the series at two wins for each club. Now the National League champions are in the choice position strategically of starting what is now just a best two-of-three game series with the first and if necessary the third game on their own ice. And that is a lot more comfortable spot to be in than the Bruins were before they started last night's all important game. Against the break they have in playing two of the next three games at home Boston has to balance the fact that Bill Cowley their play-making centre ice star is out for the series. Cowley gamely tried to strike a blow for the Bruins' cause last night but his injured knee gave way after a heavy bodycheck by Hamilton and he left the ice in the first period, crippled for the balance of the season. It is a tough blow both for the star centre and for his club but the Bruins showed last night that they could win even without Cowley and from now on it will be a dogfight. The fifth game of the series will be played in Boston tomorrow night and the teams will be back in Toronto next Tuesday.

* * * * * *

The Detroit Red Wings whose defensive style of hockey is unpopular even in their home town had only 7,000 fans on hand last night to see them defeat the visiting Chicago Black Hawks 3 goals to 1 in the Stanley Cup semi-final round. Detroit scoring a goal in each period and checking the Hawks from the dressing room door had little difficulty in taking the first game of the series and they may wind the round up Sunday night when they play in Chicago. If they don't succeed in doing the thing then they most certainly will Tuesday night in the third game of the series at Detroit. Sam Lo Presti's great goal-keeping saved the Hawks a worse beating last night.

With fifteen races on the card the public school swimming meet at the Y.M.C.A. tonight with the Examiner trophy going to the winning school team should produce plenty of thrills as well as splashes. The kid swimmers have been training hard for the competition tonight and it is expected there will be a keen fight for the trophy among teams from six city and two North Monaghan public schools. With Hayes and Heffernan contributing a comedy act, Al Marshall trying for a new Canadian record and the senior swim team demonstrating the program will be interesting from start to finish.

Take Four Points From Tamblyn's On Final Night

Nationals won the championship of the City Five-Pin League at Duffus Alleys last night when they decisively beat Tamblyn's 3 games to nil. It made the third straight year that the National outfit have won top honors in this league.

Paced by Tommy Miller, who turned in a smashing 864 count the Nationals were in all the way, Both teams were a little jittery at the start but soon levelled away with Fred Martin's outfit hitting 1396 in the second game and rolling 3639 for the string. Tamblyn's total count amounted to only 3265, and Len Anthony supplied 808 of this. A large crowd watched these two teams in action and was rewarded with some fine bowling by the boys.

Joe Dean's Capitols downed Grafton's 3 to 1 and finished in third money. The Dean outfit closed with a great spurt in the past few weeks, turning in big scores. Last night they had 3607 and it was the third week in a row that the touched the 3600 mark.

Big Five's 3 to 1 win over the Westclox crew gave them fourth money. It was the first win in three weeks for the Fitzgerald-coached aggregation.

Peterborough Lock smothered the Kinsmen 4 to 0 while New Centre and Huffman's took 3 to 1 counts over Green's and Raine's.

Warren Ferguson with a nice 832, Bert McCarrell with 822, Bill Stanbury with 810 and Tom Curvin with 807 were other bowlers who were in the select 800 class with Tommy Miller and Len Anthony. 300 games included Eddie Johnston 349, W. Talbot Visions Dodgers Winning Flag

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

TAMPA, Fla., March 28—(AP). — The really smart move at this point would be to take a run-out powder on the National League, pleading illness from overwork.

Either that, or take the easy way and pick the Cincinnati Reds to win their third straight pennant behind one of the finest pitching staffs ever assembled.

But this observer either is made of sterner stuff or has become slightly addled by the sun, and, besides, he distinctly thought he saw a vision last night.

Yankee Stadium (in this far-fetched futurama) was packed to its rafters for an entire World Series, shattering every known baseball attendance record.

What a vision! What a double vision, in fact; it could mean only one thing, folks. Those Brooklyn Dodgers, those Flatbush Fusilliers, had won their first flag in 21 years. They had agreed to play all the series games in the Yankee Stadium (Oh, yes, the Yanks won out in the American League yesterday) because of the limited capacity of Ebbets Field.

Some Part Missing

The dream, unfortunately, didn't disclose how the Dodgers got there. It made no attempt to explain what

Trail Defeats Leafs By 2 to 1

CALGARY, March 28.—(CP). — The 1939 world senior amateur hockey champions — Trail Smoke Eaters—need but one more victory over Lethbridge Maple Leafs to enter the Western Canada semi-final of the Allan Cup playdowns.

A win here Saturday night will send Smoke Eaters against either Port Arthur Bearcats, 1939 Allan Cup winners, or Regina Rangers, who are tied 1-1 in their best-of-five series.

The first game of the Alberta-British Columbia best-of-five series ended in a scoreless draw, but Trail took the second at Lethbridge Tuesday night 3-1 and the third here last night 2-1.

Playing before a crowd of more than 5,000 both teams started cautiously and gradually warmed up to finish at a sizzling pace.

Ottawa Juniors Handed Series

MIDLAND, March 28 —(CP)— President George Dudley of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said here yesterday that because of the decisive score—12 to 3—by which Ottawa Canadiens defeated Charlottetown Juniors at the Prince Edward Island capital last night, the rest of the Memorial Cup playdown series between the clubs has been cancelled. The series was to have been a best-of-three affair.

As a result of the official decision, the Ottawa Juniors will meet Montreal Royals, Quebec Junior champions, in the Eastern Memorial Cup semi-finals.

The Canadiens - Royals series, best-of-three games, will open in Montreal Monday night, with the second game at Ottawa Wednesday. If necessary, a third game will be played in Montreal on the Friday, April 4.

Winning team in this series will meet Oshawa Generals or Toronto Marlboros in the Eastern final. Generals and Marlboros at present are tied at two games apiece in a best-of-seven series for the Ontario Hockey Association title.

Some Ball Camp Training Notes

(By The Associated Press).

LOS ANGELES.—Clay Bryant, victim of a sore arm for the last two seasons, still doesn't look like he will help the Chicago Cubs much this year. He pitched three innings against Los Angeles yesterday, gave up seven runs and was charged with the Bruins' defeat.

FORT MYERS, Fla.—Optioning of Jim Hegan, 20, to Oklahoma City leaves the Cleveland Indians with one of the oldest catching staffs in the American League. Both Rollie Hemsley and Gene Desautels will be 34 before the season ends.

MIAMI, Fla.—Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds is beginning to worry about Paul Derringer, his pitching ace, who was struck in the groin by a batted ball last week. Derringer still is under a physician's care.

ORLANDO, Fla.—The Washington Senators, originally rated just a tangerine in the Grapefruit League, have surprised their critics by winning their last five games with an average of 10 runs a game.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—Sam Chapman, the Philadelphia Athletics outfielder, is hitting well this spring, he explains, because he has lost his "football muscles."

"Football hardens your muscles, but this spring I feel loose again and can swing freely," he said.

BOSTON BRUINS TIE SERIES, SHADING TORONTO LEAFS BY 2 TO 1

Cowley Through Hurts Leg Second Time

TORONTO, March 28 (CP)—The aggregation that Art Ross labelled "the greatest team in the world" still had a chance to prove it today but they faced the task minus the services of the game little centre who sparked them to the National Hockey League title.

Bill Cowley, league champion scorer, bowed out of the Stanley Cup playoff picture last night as Boston Bruins went on without him to beat Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1. The victory evened the best-of-seven semi-final cup series at two wins for each club. They meet again in Boston Saturday night.

Every stride paining him, Cowley went out to try and help Boss Ross and the Bruins, his injured right knee swathed in tape. Bill was hurt as Boston won the round opener and was on the sidelines, as his mates bowed twice in succession to the flying Leafs.

The Leafs showed the great centre every respect and avoided heavy checks but in his second turn out, he was stopped by Defenceman Jack Church. Cowley dropped to the ice in agony and club doctors said he was through for the season. A crowd of 14,824 fans gave the Boston star a rousing ovation as he limped from the ice.

The setback only made the Bruins fight all the harder and they hung on desperately after a disputed third-period goal gave them the margin of victory. Herbie Cain fired the payoff shot, Pat McReavy setting up the play with a rink-wide pass after he checked Church inside the Toronto blueline.

How Cain Did It

"The first thing I knew the puck was on my stick behind the Toronto defence and I popped a shot at Broda," said Cain, explaining his important marker. "He stopped it but I picked up the rebound, stepped around him as he lay flat on the ice and pushed the puck into the net. Then I tumbled over Turk and landed in the net myself. The Leafs claim I kicked the puck in the net."

Immediately after the game both teams boarded a special train for Boston and will arrive there about noon today. They return to Toronto for the sixth contest next Tuesday and if the series goes the limit, the final game will be played in Boston next Thursday.

When Gordie Drillon fired the Leafs' only goal it established him as the leading Stanley Cup playoff marksman of all time. Gordie saved the puck with which he scored his 19th playoff counter as a souvenir of the event which places his name in the record books above that of Frankie Boucher. Former centre star and now coach of New York Rangers, Boucher boasted a total of 18.

As they have in all four series contests so far, the Bruins opened the scoring. After a scoreless first period, Woody Dumart raced in from the left boards early in the second to take a pass that Milt Schmidt dumped ahead to him. Skating at full stride he gave Broda no chance on a low shot.

The Leafs struck back with fury and three minutes later after a brilliant passing attack the teams were on even terms. Wally Stanowski set up a play for Syl Apps and the big centre raced to the right drawing the Boston defence with him. He passed to the goal-mouth and Drillon completed the act.

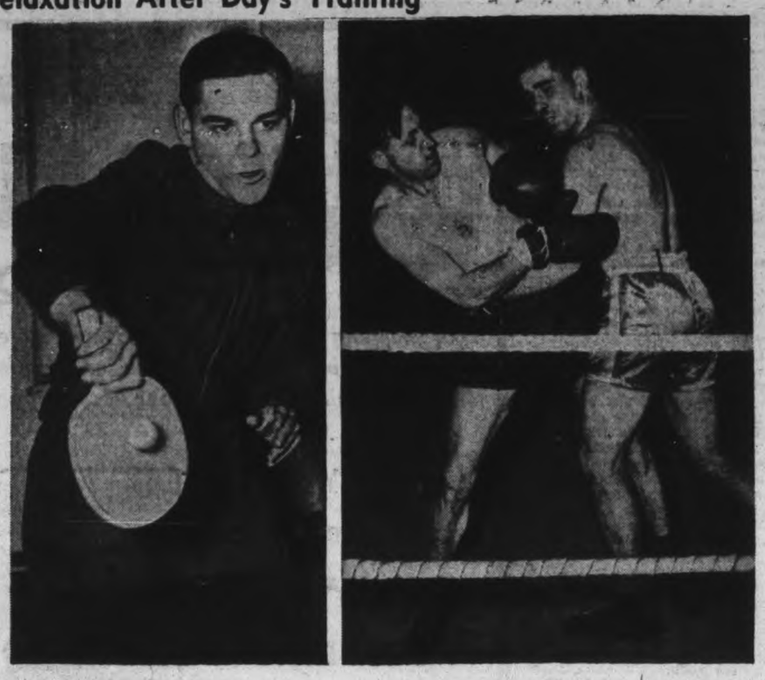
Relaxation After Day's Training



With the day's training behind them, men of Canada's armed forces crowd the huts and clubs maintained by the Canadian War Services in Canada and overseas. Games such as table tennis, chess, darts and bingo help the soldiers pass many an off-duty hour. Among the camp athletics, boxing holds a high place and regular bouts are held. In these bouts, the men fight under Imperial Army rules in which there is no referee in the ring. The referee is stationed outside the ring and calls his instructions to the fighters.

Red Wings Take Black Hawks By 3-1 In Opener

DETROIT, March 28 (CP)—Long and arduous, the comeback trail that Manager Jack Adams started to blaze three years ago for his Detroit Red Wings took definite shape today as the youthful Wings moved within one game of a crack at the world's hockey championship.

A 3-1 triumph at home last night shot Detroit into a one-game lead in their best-of-three semi-final with Chicago Black Hawks. It placed the Wings the nearest they have been to a Stanley Cup final since the collapse that followed their twice-champion clubs of 1936 and 1937.

Only three veterans of those Stanley Cup glories remained this season on the team that Jack built after the 1939 campaign kicked the props from under his champions. The rest were freshmen and sophomores molded about young Johnny Mowers, the 24-year-old goalie getting his first show in the bigtime.

The Wings held their own during the regular National Hockey League schedule to finish third and polish off the world's champion New York Rangers in the first round of playoffs. Their initial victory over Chicago left them needing only one more to sweep into the final against Toronto Maple Leafs or Boston Bruins.

Newcomers Get Honors.

Captain Ebbie Goodfellow, one of the three veterans of Detroit's Stanley Cup teams, was injured and out of action against Chicago. The other two—Winger Syd Howe and Centre Mud Bruneteau — played bangup games, but the scoring honors went to comparative newcomers.

Bagging one goal in each period, the Wings got their first tally from Syd Abel, sophomore winger, on a passing play with Don Grosso and Howe a second before the first period ended. In the second frame, Alex Motter helped Carl Liscombe, who started the season with the minor-league Indianapolis Capitals, make it 2-0 at the half-way mark.

The Hawks, whose attacks had cracked up before Mower's alert netminding, finally got a scoring play under way in the sixth minute of the final frame. Max Bentley and Red McKay combined to help the veteran Harold (Mush) March bag the tally.

Detroit returned to their wide edge on play that had continually kept Sammie Lo Presti, rookie Chicago goalie, on the hop, however, and clinched the verdict in the closing minutes. Joe Fisher, playing his first N.H.L. season, fired the goal helped by Liscombe and Motter.

SydneyCleansUp Hull Volants By 7-3 Victory

TORONTO, Mar. 28 — (CP). — Sydney Millionaires, fulfilling their promise as the Maritimes' strongest Allen Cup threat in many a moon, idled to-day as Eastern Canada finalists while awaiting winner of the Toronto Marlboros-Montreal Royals series in the other Eastern semi-final.

The Millionaires, whose path to the Maritime hockey title was beset with bumps, experienced little difficulty when they ventured outside their own pasture. A 7-3 victory over Hull Volants last night sent them into the Eastern final in three straight games.

Prospects were good meanwhile of an opponent for the Millionaires soon being declared in the other semi-final. Leading the Ontario-champion Marlboros 2-0 in games, Quebec's Montreal Royals need only a victory in the third match in Montreal to-morrow night to eliminate Toronto.

Winners of the first two games against Hull in Sydney, the Millionaires encountered but little resistance on the home ice of the Ottawa and district champions last night.

Leading the Sydney attack with two goals each were Bobby Walton and Steve Latoski while the others went to Johnny Achison, George Snell and Grant Hall.

There was no action in the Memorial Cup hunt meanwhile, where four junior teams remain in the running to represent the East in the Dominion final. In one semi-final, Oshawa Generals and Toronto Junior Marlboros are tied 2-2 in games in a best-of-seven series for the Ontario title.

The other semi-final starts in Montreal on Monday when the Quebec champions, Montreal Junior Royals, open a series with Ottawa Canadiens, Ottawa and district champions who eliminated the Maritime titleholders, Charlottetown Royals.

Hogs Ease Off 15 Calves, Lambs Steady On Sales

TORONTO, March 28.—(CP). — Cattle trade was very dull during the current week on the livestock market here, with the supply moderate and prices steady on cows, bulls and fed calves and a shade lower on all grades of steers. Hogs were 10 to 15 cents cwt. lower. Calves, lambs and sheep were steady.

There was a large number of half finished cattle in the supply but the demand was slack even for best steers and heifers. Top for weighty steers was $9 for a lot with two head at $9.50. Other steers sold downward to $8. Butcher steers closed at $7.50 to $8.50 with some some few choice at $8.75. Heifers were $7 to $8.25 with a few up to $8.50. Butcher cows ranged from $5 to $7.25. Canners and cutters sold at $3.25 to $4.75. Bulls sold from $5.25 for common bolognas up to $7 for good, light butchers. Fed calves were $8.75 to $10 with a few choice at $10.50. Stockers moved slowly at $6 to $7.75 cwt. Good milkers and springers were steady at $80 to $90 each with others in limited demand.

Calves were unchanged for the week at $11 to $12 for choice with occasional tops at $12.50. Common to medium calves were plentiful at $6 to $10 cwt.

Hogs opened lower at $11.15 dressed and at $8.35 live and held steady the balance of the week. The dressed price for yards and packing plants was $11.15 to $11.30. Sows sold at $7 to $7.50 dressed.

Sheep and lamb receipts included 1,540 Westerns. Good Western lambs sold at $11 to $11.25, with others downward to $10.00. Local lambs brought $8 to $11 according to quality. Sheep were steady at $3 to $6 for locals with light Western ewes at $6.50 cwt.

Rickard Heads

should be a specific bill introduced, setting forth all the provisions under which the bonus is to be paid.

By acting with only an item in the estimates, Mr. Hanson said, the government was ignoring the true purpose of parliament and defying the rights of members. It was government by order-in-council which should not be attempted nor accepted.

The government figures not more than 230,000,000 bushels of this year's crop can be sold. It is attempting to restrict production by 35 per cent.

It will pay a bonus of $4 an acre for wheat lands left in summerfallow this year, and $2 an acre for wheat lands sown to grass or to coarse grains. Regulations covering the procedure now are being drafted and will be presented in the House.

No progress was made with the estimate yesterday and the same subject will be given right of way today.

Mr. Gardiner bore the brunt of criticisms and made a long speech in an effort to convince the House that while all agriculture might be having its difficulties the wheat farmer had suffered and was suffering more from the effects of the war than any other branch industry.

McNevin Fights It Too

All other speakers criticized the program. Like Mr. Rickard, Bruce McNevin (Lib., Victoria, Ont.) and Dr. J. K. Blair (Lib. Wellington North) opposed the coarse grain bonus on grounds it would threaten Ontario's hog industry.

T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn) contended the policy did not go far enough and said he was against any restrictions on production of wheat.

Hon. W. Earl Rowe (Con. Dufferin-Simcoe) mildly criticized the government and pleaded with Mr. Gardiner not to bonus any class or industry in Canada for doing nothing when other industries were being urged to produce to the limit.

Robert Fair (N.D. Battle River) said Mr. Gardiner had "betrayed agriculture" and made a plea on behalf of western agriculture which, he said, asked only a chance to earn a living.

Mr. Gardiner told the House a central office would be set up in Regina to handle the wheat acreage reduction activities as well as prairie farm assistance, with suboffices in Edmonton and Winnipeg.

Provincial municipal associations would be asked to receive applications from those wishing to qualify for acreage bonus, special forms being provided which must be returned by June 1. These forms would be filled out to show the 1939 and 1940 wheat acreage and summerfallow of each applicant.

Seriously Hit By War.

Mr. Gardiner said the wheat industry's market had been seriously curtailed by the war, it was impossible for producers to change easily to another commodity, and it was impossible for growers to maintain themselves in agriculture without assistance.

To support his claim that wheat producing areas had suffered more than others, Mr. Gardiner read a statement showing the value of sales of farm products in each province in 1940 in relation to the average from 1926 to 1929, taking that average as 100. The table was as follows:

Prince Edward Island 64.8, Nova Scotia 96.6, New Brunswick 86.3, Quebec 99.8, Ontario 85.8, Manitoba 74.9, Saskatchewan 50.9, Alberta 69.7, and British Columbia 112.9.

Mr. Hanson protested that these figures did not indicate any hardship caused by the war but by drought and low prices.

Mr. Gardiner replied that the two largest consecutive crops ever produced were in 1939 and 1940 and practically all that wheat was still in Canada.

"The minister will agree that the wheat problem would have been confronting Canada had the war never taken place?" asked Grote Sterling (Con. Yale.)

"There was no wheat problem in this country in 1937 and 1938," Mr. Gardiner said.

"Will the minister not agree with me that the problem dates back to failure to sell the 1938-39 crop upon which this country lost $61,000,000 before there was any war?" Mr. Hanson asked.

"It dates back much farther than that," Mr. Gardiner said.

Virtually all the recommendations of the Advisory Committee of the Wheat Board and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, with respect to wheat, had been carried out in the policy for 1941-42, Mr. Gardiner said after reading these recommendations in detail.

Higher Processing Tax.

Recommendations not adopted included that of the Advisory Committee to increase the processing tax on wheat milled for domestic consumption, and recommendation of the Federation that the initial advance payment be increased.

It was apparent that where farmers received about $176,000,000 for their wheat last year they would get about $115,000,000 this year, the minister said.

The bonusing system would make up the difference to some degree.

Mr. McNevin contended that wheat is "a weather casualty rather than a war casualty."

He was content to see the Western farmer get $4 an acre for wheat land left in summer fallow, provided a limit was placed on the amount he could receive in the way of gross income. He favored encouraging Western farmers to sow wheat lands back to grass.

But he said he was definitely against paying an acreage bonus on wheatlands sown to coarse grains, which he said was hog and cattle feed, and nothing else.

He was willing to meet fair competition and take his medicine, Mr. McNevin said, "but I do object to a policy whereby we take from the state money to cheapen the production of hog feed in a particular area, and thereby drive the farmers of my own and other provinces out of business."

Wants a Minimum

Mr. Douglas recommended as the "irreducible minimum" necessary to save Western agriculture the six-point program contained in a resolution adopted by the Saskatchewan Legislature last month.

This asked for an advance price of 85 cents a bushel instead of 70 cents; a processing tax of 50 cents a bushel instead of 15 cents, proceeds to be added to the minimum price; deliveries to be on an acreage quota basis; the Government to advance money to farmers to finance storage construction; advance to be paid on quotas to be delivered and the Government to maintain the wheat surplus as an essential part of its war policy.

Mr. Rickard praised many of the Government's policies, but said that "bonusing the Western farmer to grow coast gain to the extent of $2 an acre is going a step too far." The principle was "absoluetly wrong."

"I, as an Ontario farmer, do not feel that I can support it," he said. "I hope the Government will consider this seriously and, for the sake of the hog producer and grain grower in Ontario, leave this clause out."

Dr. Blair said Western Liberals and Conservatives alike were "shadow boxing" but were all the time "planning together how to get a little bite out of the government, how to get a little donation."

He warned the government not to give the West everything that was asked. "No matter what you give them you can never satisfy them," he added.

"I believe if Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett (former Conservative Prime Minister) were here today he would blush to see some of the things we are putting through.

Giving Away Too Much.

"We have gone further than the Tories would go. We are destroying the Liberal party. We are giving away too much."

He was opposed to assisting Western farmers to compete with Ontario hog producers. "I say to them, grow your grain and feed your pigs. We will take our chance of being run off the map—but do not ask Ontario farmers to pay you for growing the grain."

A tax on imported vegetable fats and use of some of the wheat surplus for production of animal fats was suggested by Mr. Rowe. It would bring in much-needed Customs revenue and put an additional sum in the pockets of Canadian producers, he said.

"I urge the government to reconsider giving any industry in Canada a bonus for doing nothing," he said. "I would rather spend $100,000,000 to send foodstuffs to Great Britain than to pay half that amount to men in this country to do nothing.

"We must win the victory and I have never known of any country to lose victory because it had too large a surplus of food."

Mr. Fair quoted Hon. William Houck of the Ontario Government as saying Mr. Gardiner had "betrayed the agricultural classes of Canada" and said that he agreed.

Hipel Reviews

Britain and Germany had discovered long hours for working men were not practical, he said, because they cut down on efficiency.

The minister told of the board of review set up in connection with the Workmen's Compensation Board. Any workman who wished to appeal a case could appear before this board with either his lawyer or union representative. No claim, he said, was ever closed, and could always be reviewed in event of developments.

No Boiler Tragedies

Due to a change in the Factory Inspection Act which made it compulsory that boiler inspections be carried out by fully qualified engineers there had been no deaths from boiler explosions during the past three years. Prior to that eight lives had been lost in this type of accident.

Mr. Hipel assured the members Ontario was getting its share of war contracts in competition with Quebec firms in the needle trade. Several members had inquired as to reports that Quebec firms had bid under those of this province on contracts for uniforms because Quebec wages were lower than Ontario.

He made the statement after John Glass (Lib., Toronto St. Andrew) said he had been informed Quebec firms were able to underbid those in Ontario on military uniform contracts because of lower wages.

Leopold Macaulay (Con. York South) said he knew the codes prevailing in the needle trade industries in Quebec were higher than those in Ontario, but he understood they were not enforced and "violations are winked at."

Code Enforced in Quebec

The labor minister said the Quebec Wage Board assured him the code was enforced. He added that through consultation with Quebec labor authorities, Ontario officials had succeeded in having wage levels raised in certain industries in Quebec to put them on a par with those in Ontario.

The minister said industrial plant plans calling for an expenditure of $26,00,000 had been submitted to his department for approval since the start of the present fiscal year and the first requisite necessary to approval was that the safety and welfare of the worker be guaranteed.

The training school at Galt had graduated 1,750 boys since it was opened in 1939 and not one failure had arisen. Net cost per boy for 30 weeks instruction was $101 and at least 24 of the graduates were now instructors in the Royal Canadian Air Force. Mr. Hipel said the students were restricted to Ontario boys but if the time comes when this province cannot fill the classes the privilege will be extended to youths in other provinces. When the school was first opened it had accommodation for 200 but since then had been enlarged to accommodate 600.

George Duckworth (Con. Toronto Dovercourt) asked Mr. Hipel if he was aware of a practice in which Toronto stores discharge girls after several years service because they are approaching the age of 18 and would come under the minimum wage act.

The minister said he knew of this and his department was seeking means to stop it. Year by year employers were complying with the provisions of the Minimum Wage Act and today only 2.2 per cent are not adhering to it.

ANOTHER ROBIN

Spring is just around the corner, and getting ready to make the turn in high gear. Today at noon, Mrs. Bert Rowe, 288 Westcott street looked out the window of her kitchen, and in the back garden, a robin was sending a carol of better days to come from his bread breasted throat.

CONTRACT ACCEPTED.

The contract of H. J. Withers for the collection of garbage during the twelve months beginning April 1 for $11,500 was passed by the council Thursday night, with a comment by Alderman Bradburn that the contractor should make more general use of tarpaulins covering the wagons and also put some paint on them.

THE WAR—DARN IT

A died-in-the-wool fisherman was told today that the muskie season opens on June 26, and to the surprise of the reporter the fisherman replied. "I'd much sooner try fishing for Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, Hess and Mussolini, and if they don't get going with this war and smear those fellows soon I'll enlist myself."

A PROBLEM SOLVED

H. A. Cranfield, employment supervisor at the C.G.E. gets plenty of requests from new employees seeking a boarding house or a place to rent. The newcomers would be well advised to scan the classified columns of the Examiner as practically every house available is listed there, along with first class boarding houses in all parts of the city.

MOTOR CYCLE IN COMMISSION.

Another sign of spring bobbed up today when Traffic Officer C. J. McGillen made his first appearance of the year on the police motorcycle. Paved streets are now dry enough to make cycling possible.

PROMOTED.

According to regimental orders of the Prince of Wales Rangers, recent promotions include the name of Lieut. L. C. Gilders, who has been appointed Temporary Captain.

OFFERED BAND JOBS.

A number of local bandsmen have received invitations to join a military band that is being formed at the R.C.O.F. training centre in Kingston. Others have had similar offers from bands destined for overseas service.

MUSKRAT PRICES GOOD

Trappers throughout the district are asking what the prices for muskrat pelts will be this year, and Harry Jopling, the biggest buyer in Peterborough, reported this morning that the market demand is good. He says it is quite safe to report that pelts will bring last year's top price of $1.85 at least and perhaps more than that.

TWO MORE NEONS.

Tamblyn's drug store has blossomed out with a smart new neon sign and the colors are pink and powder green, a change from the usual combination. The sign was put up a few days ago and is a colorful addition to the illumination along the main street. Today workmen were busy erecting another neon sign in front of Meyer's Studios on George Street.

FARMERS PLEASED.

Farmers in the district are happy over weather conditions. The snow is melting and the water instead of running off the fields seems to be seeping into the ground. This in the opinion of the men who till the soil is an ideal situation. A quick thaw with floods, washed sediment onto the flats, and is usually followed by a scarcity of moisture in the grain fields, but this year so far nothing like that has happened.

SWIM MEET.

One hundred and seventy-nine boys of Peterborough schools have entered in the swimming competition for the Examiner trophy, presented by H. L. Garner, at the Y.M.C.A. this (Friday) evening. A huge crowd is expected, as interest in the efforts of the teams from the various schools has been running at high pitch through the preparatory season.

City Council Is Not Anxious To Take Action

The City Council will avoid recourse to the new Dominion Legislation pegging rents as long as landlords "play fair."

That was the substance of a resolution passed at last night's special meeting on Alderman Dutton's motion, seconded by Alderman Sullivan.

"I don't want to see Peterborough made a rent control area if we can help it," Mayor Hamilton said, and replying to Alderman Roy's question as to whether there have been any local complaints, he said: "I have heard some stories, and I am afraid there has been cause."

Alderman Dutton declared that he was not in favor of exorbitant advances in rent, but on the other hand owners were entitled to reasonable consideration. He recalled that during the depression rents in many instances had declined sharply and beyond true values, and at that level they could hardly be considered ordinary and normal rentals. Owners had often to take what they could get.

"I hope the property owners are going to play fair," Mayor Hamilton said. "It is up to them to play fair. I don't need to say that there is war on and conditions are extraordinary."

Alderman Bradburn suggested that the rent control legislation might permit reference of complaints to the County Judge because of his fuller knowledge of local conditions than some members of an Ottawa board.

Possible effect of rent control on the building of houses here this year was mentioned by Alderman Sullivan. "We should be careful not to do anything to retard the progress we are all hoping for in the erection of new houses this year. "If we get rent control in Peterborough it may interfere with private investment in homes. Those who are planning to build might decide not to go ahead if control comes into effect."

Alderman Dutton's motion to be forwarded to the Dominion Board was to the effect that the council is giving serious consideration to undue and excessive increases in rents, that it is seeking further information on this question, and that if it deems the step to be necessary the Rent Control Act will be invoked. Alderman Bradburn's suggestion will be incorporated in the resolution, which was seconded by Alderman Sullivan.

Builders Urged To Erect Homes

Vaguely within the borders of assurance and mere hope, the council last night through the utterance of Mayor Hamilton tried to convey to hard-bitten builders, who do not use sentiment as part of their stock in trade, the community's wish that a new crop of houses should spring up this season.

Alderman Bradburn had bluntly told the council the cost of building was up at least ten per cent, and Mayor Hamilton had made some mention about the hesitancy of builders because of the rustlings of the rent problem and talk of invoking the federal rent controller. His Worship found himself in an uneasy spot. He spoke of the approaching engagement of more men at the C.G.E. works and Johnson Motors, and he wanted builders to feel confident about things and especially to the extent of breaking sod and getting cement foundation forms in and roofs on top.

Finally after trying to define something like an offical declaration, His Worship retreated a bit, saying "After all, we really can't guarantee them anything. It is just our own opinion that the situation warrants public and trade confidence. Well, we can let this thought stand over until the April meeting and in the meantime we may get some inspiration on it."

250 Men Wanted For New Battery

Recruits are wanted here for active service with a light anti-aircraft battery, with headquarters in Kingston. Some 250 men will be required from this district, including clerks, cooks, drivers, motorcyclists, motor mechanics, electricians and gunners. Applicants between 19 and 45 years of age should apply to the 4th Field Battery R.C.A. (R.F.) in the Armouries within the next few days.

The 4th Field Battery itself will be a reinforcement unit for the time being, to supply reinforcements in groups or of individuals from time to time for active artillery regiments. The battery will not be mobilized for the present as it is known as a second battalion — its first component part, the 4th Anti-Tank Battery, being an active unit.

Next week members of the local battery will be asked to state their intentions of remaining with the unit but on call as reinforcements to active regiments, or to turn in their uniforms and be considered "on leave" from the 4th Field Battery. In the latter case, all such men would be liable to four months' compulsory military training at the established training centres. These are orders from district headquarters in Kingston.

Millbrook Cake Nets War Victims $11.60

Ivan Gray, Peterborough District War Fund representative at Millbrook turned in a nice donation this morning and the way the money was raised is an interesting story. It seems that William Trick won a birthday cake at a euchre party staged by the Women's Institute at Millbrook. Mr. Trick immediately donated the cake to be auctioned off, so Chief Constable Richards was delegated to act as auctioneer.

Chief Richards did a good job for the cake finally sold for $4.00 to Delbert Olan. This loosened the purse strings of everyone present so they took up a collection adding $7.60 to the price of the cake and the total sum of $11.60 was turned over for the relief of the British War Victims.

The Women's Association of Mount Pleasant United Church through Mrs. Shield made a substantial contribution to the fund today when $10.00 was handed it. This is a nice gesture from a comparatively small organization in Cavan township but this district has been doing good work for the fund, and the Women's Association is keeping on with the job.

The employees at Curtis Service station won some prize money in the Automobile League and promptly turned the cash over to the fund. The sum was $4.90. Today also the Lucky 13 club turned all the money in that was to have been used for the season's prizes, and it amounted to $16.00. This money was brought in by Mrs. R. Gavine.

The A.Y.P.A. Local Council sent a lovely letter along with their ten dollar donation and in the letter they voice their commendation for the work being done by the fund, and sends congratulations to the Examiner and Mr. Mann for carrying on the good work.

'D' Company Wins Machine Gun Cup

"D" Company was successful in winning the cup in the machine gun contest held by the Prince of Wales Rangers in the Armoury on Thursday night. Cpl. Earl Huffman led his team to victory a scant one-half point over the runners-up from "C" Co'y.

A good representation from each of the four participating companies was on the floor watching with keen interest as each team in turn marched to the fore. With "A" Co'y leading, they followed in alphabetical order until each had a chance. The winning team consisted of Cpl. Huffman, and Ptes. Nicholas, Woodhouse and Beatty.

D Co'y is commanded by Major James McGrath, M.M., and number 13 platoon, which supplied the winning team, is under the command of Lieut. James Turner.

Ottawa Representative Is Asked To Visit City To Discuss Building Pre-Fabricated Homes

With a little note of reluctance to depart from Peterborough's normal course of building permanent dwellings for its gradually increasing population, the city council last night affirmed that it would welcome the visit of a representative of the Federal Government's recently organized Wartime Housing Limited to discuss the details and prospect of one hundred or more pre-fabricated houses being erected here to accommodate at least one thousand additional employees who are expected presently to be engaged by the Canadian General Electric Company.

In the meantime Mayor Hamilton and Aldermen Bradburn and Swanston were appointed a special committee to survey and list available and conveniently located properties which may be used as sites for these houses which were described as being of a type of temporary construction and service.

City Clerk Outram informed the council that enquiry through the medium of Postmaster Lacheur and the city mail carriers obtained the fact that there are only seven or eight vacant houses in Peterborough, and some of them are vacant because they are being converted into duplex form.

"As Few As We Can"

The council cheerfully faced the new problem of taking some action to meet the approaching acute shortage of houses, but in Mayor Hamilton's opening remarks a little note of concern about the quality of dwellings which may be built to supply the emergency was sounded.

"I was hoping that we could get on with out them," His Worship said in reference to the pre-fabricated houses. "But, I suppose we've got to have a certain number of them."

"And as few as we can," Alderman Dutton interjected.

"Nearly one hundred houses were built here last year, and we have been averaging that many for some years," Mayor Hamilton recalled. "They have nearly all been a good type of house, comfortable and permanently built, and they have been a real asset to the city. I still hope that we will see at least another hundred of the same kind of houses built this year."

It was said that many of these houses cost around $2,800, but Alderman Curtis said that they probably would cost $3,500 this year.

Alderman Bradburn estimated that the building costs have increased ten per cent in the last year, and Alderman Curtis quoted his opinion as an increase of 20 per cent since 1938.

Cost About $2,000

Alderman Dutton said he understood the pre-fabricated houses would cost about $2,000. They are intended only for the war time industrial emergency, and would perhaps be torn down after the war. They are built on concrete posts, without cellars, and are equipped with light, water and sever services.

"And they can be put together in a few days," Mayor Hamilton said. "Ian McRae of the Canadian Electric Company told us that one hundred of them might be sufficient, if about the average number of other houses was built."

The question of location was only mentioned in passing. The city owns the big lot on Park street, south of Chamberlain street which has been used for relief wood storage, and it was felt that thirty-five or more of the houses, each with 40 feet could be built there.

This detail of property was left to the special committee, and the council intends to obtain as much local information as possible for the expected visit of a representative of Wartime Housing Limited.

Alderman Dutton's motion to write the directors of this administrative body that the council would welcome one of its men to discuss the question of prefabricated houses was seconded by Alderman Cotton.

Clerk's Information

The following summary of facts regarding the war time houses and the investigation already made at the instance of Mayor Hamilton was presented to the members of the council last night:—

"In order ot assist in overcoming the unsatisfactory housing conditions arising from the influx of workers into certain communities where defence industries have been established, the Dominion Government recently set up a company known as Wartime Housing Limited, and allotted to this company an appropriation of $7,000,000.

Gordon K. Fraser, M.P., notified the city on Tuesday, March 25, that Mr. Joseph Piggott, Director of Wartime Housing Limited, had tentatively allotted Peterborough 300 houses under this plan.

Mayor Hamilton on Wednesday interviewed certain officials of the local plant of the Canadian General Electric Company and discussed with them the question of housing in Peterborough. It was intimated to the Mayor that at the present time the Canadian General Electric Company is employing approximately 3,000 hands and that there is every prospect that within the next few months this number will be increased to 4,000. It was further stated that there is a possibility that even this total might be increased. It was also suggested that the Canadian General Electric Company would prefer to employ a larger percentage of married men. The officials at the Canadian General Electric Company intimated that they considered some action must be taken to meet the housing situation as it may develop and they encouraged the suggestion that the City should make full enquiries into the proposals of Wartime Housing Limited and possibly make arrangements for 100 of these houses.

At the suggestion of Mayor Hamilton the city clerk today telephoned Wartime Housing Limited and in the absence of Mr. Piggott had a conversation with Mr. Coggin, Mr. Piggott's assistant, relative to policies of the Housing Company.

Four Or Five Rooms

Mr. Coggin said that the company had been set up with the duty of supply necessary housing for employees engaged in defence industries only. He said that the company had only got into organization two weeks ago and many of its plans were most indefinite. He said a survey will be made to ascertain the type of house needed and that this type might vary from district to district in Canada. It is proposed to set up "staff houses" to house 80 to 100 single men when required. For family men it is proposed to erect four and five room cottages. These houses will be owned by Wartime Housing Limited and rented to the tenants. Mr. Coggin stated that the thinking of the Housing Administration is that this housing is to be a temporary arrangement only and it is proposed to remove the houses following the war.

Mr. Coggin would not put himself on record as to the type of houses or the form of their construction. Asked regarding what part the municipality would be expected to play, he said that it is hoped that municipalities might be able to supply land at a nominal rental to the government and it is hoped that these houses would be located on land which is served by water and sewer. He said it was the policy not to put a load on any municipality that would be unfair to that municipality but that it was expected that the municipalities would desire to cooperate fully.

It appears that many of the details in connection with this whole matter have yet to be worked out. A representative of the company will be sent to Peterborough to make a survey regarding the necessity of this type of housing in the city and other details in connection with this matter.

Today I interviewed Mr. Bruce Johnston, clerk of North Monaghan, and he said that North Monaghan would be interested with Peterborough in the housing situation. He suggested a joint meeting between representatives of the City Council and North Monaghan Council to discuss the matter in full."

CAPABLE FELLOWS

General McNaughton wants every soldier in the Canadian forces to be a one man army, capable, quick thinking, prepared for any emergency, and the Engineers are measuring up to these predictions. For instance one of the Engineers taking the electrical course at the Collegiate found it tiresome walking from his boarding house to school every day, so last week-end when he visited his girl friend in Toronto he spoke of the trouble. It seems th girl owned a bicycle but she hasn't got it any more, the Engineer commandeered the vehicle and every day he pedals blissfully to and from school. What does it matter if it's a girl's bicycle with a Toronto license, the Engineers know the value of mechanized transportation and the bicycle fits in. It is rumored too that another Engineer has visions of securing an automobile from his girl friend, not that the Engineers don't deserve these things. Only the best is good enough for the boys in khaki, and it seems that the Engineers, His Majesty's Royal Canadian Engineers are being well taken care of.

Wild Haliburton Party Costs Resident $31.95

LINDSAY, March 28—(ENS). — Magistrate Gee held a police court session at Haliburton when Eugenia Fornica was charged with permitting drunkenness in his home. After hearing the evidence Fornica was fined $31.95 "This was apparently a real party, and when the police showed up the guests promptly proceeded to spill the wine and beer down the table legs and out the door," said the Magistrate. The raid was conducted by Provincial Constable McPherson and Constable Carnochan.

A serious fire occurred at Fenelon Falls early Thursday morning when a large double garage, the property of W. H. Graham, and two trucks were destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $2,500. The fire brigade fought the fire for nearly three hours and by hard work prevented it from speading to adjoining residences. The cause of the blaze is a mystery.

A motor accident occurred on the Fenelon Highway, about four miles from Lindsay, on Wednesday as Harvey Demoe, of Cameron, accompanied by Delos O'Connell, of Lindsay, were driving north when when the right front tire on the car blew out. The car sailed through the air for approximately fifteen feet and then turned over. It was badly damaged. O'Connel suffered facial injuries, but Demoe was uninjured.

April Birthday Month For "King's Own" Class

Mrs. A. Rosborough, Gladstone Avenue, was hostess to the members of the King's Own Bible Class for their March meeting. For the devotions Mrs. W. K. Sloane was in charge and was assisted by Mesdames Hess and R. Watson, who gave inspirational readings. Mrs. Sloane leading in prayer. The president, Mrs. G. Harris, took the chair for the business period, when arrangements were completed for a concert to be given by Rev. Mr. Piercy, Niagara Falls, on March 28th.

April was selected as the birthday month for the class and plans made to continue sewing for the British War Victims. For this worthy purpose, the class meets once a week and have made dresses, quilts and baby clothes.

An entertaining St. Patrick's program, led by Mrs. P. Bullied, included solos by Mrs. James Goldie accompanied by Mrs. H. F. Doig and an Irish reading by Mrs. G. Rowe.

Contest winners for the evening were Mesdames E. Eakins and Doig. At the close of the social hour a vote of thanks was tendered on behalf of the class members to their hostess and all assisting in the program by Mrs. Eakins, seconded by Mrs. Downer and endorsed by all.

Petty Officer Lawson and Mrs. Lawson are leaving this week-end for Halifax.

WE . . . NOTICED

....There are two rules to follow in accessorizing an ensemble. First is the rule of two—which suggests selection of flowers to match gloves, shoes to match bag, gloves to match neckwear.

....Second is the rule of three, which matches gloves, bags and shoes, or bag, belt and shoes.

....Also in good taste this spring is the monotone costume to which is added the single accent of a bright bag. And without confusing one's chic the trick of double-matching can be resorted to. In this instance, both hat and bag are chosen to match in one color, while another contrast is provided in shoes and gloves which match each other.

"Fireweed" and "Ginger Tea" Top Color List

Take a spring tonic in color! There's nothing like a bracing dose of color to make you feel a brand-new person. Three tonic shades, livening finger tones to animate your entire costume, have been introduced by a prominent nail-polish manufacturer, and all three have been copied in accessories and are slated to be among fashion's leading shades for Spring.

They're named for tonics, too, early American bracers that grandma used to make her pert and pretty. Rhubarb is the perky pink she used for ribbons in her hair, the kerchief tucked in her cuff (the only way she had, poor dear, of bringing color to her hands). Rhubarb is a rosy pink, live and clear, and in line with the surge of pinks for spring. Fireweed is a crisp clear red, most energy-building of all colors. It's a shade to brace your navies, neutrals and dark green. Last is a sun-browned shade, Ginger Tea, rosy-toned and warming, a toner-down for ruddy skin tones, a picker-up for ivory ones. Wear it with your beiges, tortoise shades and soft off-greens.

Animation is what the new colors give your hands. They'll look alive and alert. Canadian hands are proud hands, poised and self-reliant, no more time for cuddly little stay-at-homes. This year we're going to be definite and sure in our gestures, and in the shades we wear.

THE STARS SAY . . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, March 29.

A day of contradictory and confusing conditions, with much of major importance moving under high pressure and with objectives of major significance. Nevertheless, if such enterprise and initiative be carried to excess there may be a blowout or some form of defeat.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very lively and productive year with events moving swiftly, energetically and under high tension. But carried to excess, initiative and enterprise may swing into defeatist channels, especially through reckless, impulsive and turbulent conduct.

A child born on this day should have practical talents, with much versatility and constructive or inventive ability. But its impetuous, quarrelsome, over-zealous or indulgent methods may prove its undoing.

Variety Recital Presented In Y.W.C.A. Hall

Attended by a large and enthusiastic audience, an attractive recital was given Thursday evening in the Y.W.C.A. Recreation Room by senior pupils of Marguerite, Olive and Roy Rome. The program opened with the playing of "The Lights of London," by violinists Louise Leslie, Nancy Spring, June Wellwood, with Eleanore Carrol at the piano, followed by piano solos, "March," played by Beatrice Fairburn, and "Pink," by Shirley Wilson.

Terry Graham was heard in a group of violin numbers, including the lovely old Irish air, "Mountain High," and "Waltz in A Major." Although but eight years of age, this young artist already plays with deep singing tone and accomplished technique. Two splendid piano duets, "Bright as a Button" and "Haymaker's March," were presented by June and Muriel Craft.

Playing a difficult number with splendid assurance and effect, Louise Leslie delighted the audience with the violin composition, Wienawski's "Mazurka." The violin duets, "Kerry Dance" and "Vienesse Melody," were played by Nancy Spring and her teacher, Roy Rome. The Kerry Dance was played without piano accompaniment, and showed the tone of the violins to splendid advantage. The "Vienesse Melody," composed by Mr. Rome, is a beautiful melody, and was evidently liked by the audience. Another violin number was Brahms' "Hungarian Dance," played by Nancy Spring, who possesses a lovely singing tone, and plays with flexible bowing technique. Her second number, "Gavotte" (Purcell) was exceptionally well done.

A lengthy number played entirely by memory, with trills, double-stopping, high notes and staccato bowing all taken with ease, was "Tales from the Vienna Woods" (Strauss), presented by Mary Jane Wharry. Phillip Lehey played Horvath's "Hungarian Sketch" with brilliant technique, showing rapid bowing. His second number, "Shepherd Girl's Sunday," by the great Norwegian violinist, O. Bull, was played with an artist's conception of feeling and warmth, and was beautiful throughout. Eleanore Carroll was another artist who played with firm touch and sure technique in Paderewski's "Minuet."

Other piano numbers included "Minuet in G" and "On Parade," played by Jean Austin; "Minuet" (Boccerina) by Eleanore DeNure; "Haymaker's March," a piano duet by two talented little players, June and Muriel Craft; "Lucia de Lamermoor" and "Gavotte" played with splendid interpretation, fine tonal quality and rhythm by Eleanore Chapman, an outstanding pupil, and Forge's "Flower Song" by Pearl Cowan.

June Wellwood was heard in the violin number, "Military March," and vocal numbers were sung in clear, sweet voice by Marion O'Toole, "Jeannie with the Light Brown Hair" and "My Curly-headed Baby"; "Andante" (violin) was played by Jack Harris, with "Then You'll Remember Me" as his second number.

Vocal numbers included a composition by Roy Rome, "March of the Frontiersman," sung by Herb Henry, who possesses a fine baritone voice, and was received with warm applause. "Danny Boy" (Weatherly) and "Come to the Fair" (Martin) was sung by Wilma Lockie with excellent, clear tone. The latter number won particular favor.

Two graceful little dancers, Jean Millard and Frances Wardle, were well received in "The Sergeant-Major and the Cook." "The Sailor's Hornpipe," by these two little girls and June Killingbeck was attractive and nicely performed. They are from the studio of Caroline Littlefield.

Mr. Gordon Lupton, who was chairman for the program, is a pupil of Marguerite Rome. Miss Marguerite Rome was at the piano during the recital.

Labrador Coastal Workers Raise $250 for Red Cross

A tale of one of the most amazing bits of war work of all comes from the coast of Labrador, where fishermen's wives who very rarely see actual money, have raised $250.00 for the Red Cross. For months these women have been contributing a substantial amount of war knitting from wool supplied to them by the society, but that they have also been able to raise money is a fact which touches the hearts of folk occupying comfortable homes inland. Word of this accomplishment came to the city Thursday afternoon when three Labrador workers told of their activities among the peoples of this northern territory at an open meeting in the Y.W.C.A. of the local branch of the Grenfell Labrador Medical Mission.

A public health nurse, Miss Ethel G. Graham, who spent eleven years among Labrador folk, and is now established at Ottawa as general secretary, had some interesting things to tell about the work before she introduced the two speakers, Miss Janet Stewart, director of industrial activity at St. Anthony, and her assistant, Miss Effie Lee. Although home on furlough, these two workers prefer to spend their holiday time visiting various centres in an effort to bring the dream of the late Sir Wilfred Grenfell to fuller completion.

The office of the Labrador mission at London, England, is still in operation, and even though bombs have shattered its windows, is carrying on, workers having raised almost their full quota of money. To them this task in a war-torn city seems little enough when it is remembered that fishermen from Labrador and Newfoundland are aiding in the task of mine-sweeping, and lending support to the British Navy.

Travel by dog-team and snowshoes is taken as a matter of course by coastal workers, and the problem of what to do in the long winter evenings simply doesn't exist. Details of her work in connection with the industrial department at headquarters in St. Anthony, as outlined by Miss Stewart, left no doubt in the minds of her listeners that every hour is full of activity, and every thought directed toward improving the morale and living conditions of the fisherfolk by filling their idle moments with useful and profitable occupation.

Personal contact does much in keeping up the standard of the work, although connection is made with inaccessible territories through a student who passes on instructions to those unable to read. It is the hope of Miss Stewart that an industrial worker many some day be settled in the White Bay district, where so far personal contact has not been established.

Production of handcraft products is highest during the winter months, and materials utilized in the manufacture of articles are those obtainable in the district, such as walrus tusks and birch wood for carving. Silk stockings, wool and cotton articles are sent in by branch workers, and here Miss Stewart emphasized that everything, from buttons, tin boxes, bits of silk, to old hats and odd shoes, can be used in some way.

An ordinary pen-knife is the chief instrument used in carving, and most of the work of this kind is done by crippled men and boys. Weaving and the hooking of rugs is an art which the women master following instruction from the industrial staff. On display were a number of fascinating little articles of polished ivory, a Grenfell cloth parka edged with baby seal and richly embroidered, numerous hooked rugs, mittens in intricate patterns, etc.

Relating the "life story of the silk stocking after its death," Miss Lee quoted the words of the late Sir Wilfred Grenfell, "if stockings run, let it be to the Grenfell Mission." She made a plea for used silk stockings, remarking that the old-fashioned silk stocking is much preferred to modern Nylon hose, which are of little use in rug-making.

Mrs. F. M. Somerville, president of Peterborough Branch of the Grenfell Labrador Medical Mission, introduced Miss Graham, and the speakers were thanked by Mrs. G. R. Langley and Miss M. Rannie. Tea was served after the meeting while visitors admired the handsome handcraft display.

Trinity Dramatic Club Presents Sparkling Three-Act Comedy

A sparkling three-act comedy, "Here Come Patricia," was presented in the Reid Street Hall on Thursday night, by the Trinity Dramatic Club. An enthusiastic and well-pleased audience agreed that the effort was one of the most worthy to be made in Peterborough this season.

A small town was the locale, the picturesque name, "Fern Lawn" fitted into the atmosphere created by the artists whose collective reputation for splendid dramatic talent remains intact. Such an amazingly amusing set of circumstances arose out of a boarding house kept by Mrs. Carrol, played by Viola Sexsmith. Through her rooms passed an amazing cast, all of them stars in the vehicle. Mrs. Smith-Porter, the town "aristocrat," played by Phillis Webster, was superb in her criticism of Tim Hopper, played by Bert McFadden. The amazing turn of events which finally showed Tim, who was usually considered the town no-good, to be a friend of the governor, made the nagging Mrs. Carrol take a back seat, and one of which she was none too fond.

Adam Jealous

Mrs. R. Kemp plays Patricia Grayson, who is the governor's daughter but in disguise, is fond of orchard keeping, and one of the dramatic bits in the plot is provided by an attempt on the part of Adam Wade, played by Jim Betts, to have the orchard destroyed. Adam, too, had an orchard, a prize one, and it seems that jealousy of Patricia's manifestations drove him to thoughts of crime. Bud Flannigan and Jimmie Clark are hired by Adam to destroy the orchard, and the pair, played by Bill Petrie and Dick Clayton respectively, held their audience in suspense until they wreck the wrong orchard, the one belonging to Adam, through clever efforts of Patricia.

Patricia also feels the wrath of Mrs. Smith-Porter, when she dons man's overalls to tend to her garage, which, in addition to her orchard, she delights in operating. One scene is a flareup between Patricia and the critic, giving excellent indication of the venom contained in the heart of she of the double name. Elsie Crowder, played by Audrey Garside, is an impusive girl, who finally flings herself at the man of her choice, who is Elbert Hastings, played by Ralph Hambidge. In taking her in his arms Ralph eases a lot of tension at least on the part of an audience who is glad to see the thing settled.

Irish Whalen plays the part of Angelina Knoop; and a cousin, Minnie Knoop, is played by Mary Thompson. But Flannigan is inclined on the romantic side toward Angelina, but it is with severe difficulty that he proceeds, for Minnie is apparently ever present and interferes to no end.

Which Really Came First The Chicken or the Egg?

By MARY MOORE

For the cook the answer to that poser is "The Egg." For every chicken that you roast or boil you probably use a dozen dozen eggs.

There isn't a course in any meal where eggs are not appropriate. Any cook who is worth her salt need never be stuck if she has eggs on hand.

....A first course could be devilled eggs on a hors d'oeuvres plate.

....Or for a main course any of the omelettes or souffles which are not only good, but a welcome change from the overworked "meat and potato" standby.

....Next comes the salad course when hard cooked eggs sliced, and served with asparagus tips on bright green leaf lettuce is the favorite salad of lots of folks.

....And when it comes to egg desserts their number is legion. To name only a few there are custard pies, or lemon snow pudding or sponge cakes—our recipe for Jelly Roll taking the honors this week.

Of course, you wouldn't serve any two of these egg dishes at the same meal, but there are reminder ideas of how useful the egg is in meal planning.

Now for our own version of Eggs Benedict. Men love eggs prepared this way—in fact, it is a dish a man will take pride in preparing himself if he is any hand at all in the kitchen.

Incidentally Lent Observers, Egg Lovers, and Economy Experts can all get in on these egg dishes, with the best eggs at 28 cents per dozen (at date of typing this) let us use them to capacity.

EGGS BENEDICT A LA LAURA.

Laura replaces the toast of regular "Benedict" eggs with Hashed Brown Potatoes — the result is worthy of Oscar of the Waldorf:

Hashed Brown Potatoes — Chop finely enough raw potatoes to make 4 cups. Melt 6 tablespoons fat (not butter), add potatoes and 2 tablespoons grated onion to fat in pan, and 2 teaspoons salt, and good shake of black pepper and cook stirring frequently and lifting from bottom of pan to prevent sticking, for about 20 minutes—if necessary adding a little more fat. When potatoes are tender, cook without stirring to brown the under side—about 6 minutes. Cut this into six blocks (to serve 6 people) and place one square on each hot plate. Have ready six slices of smoked back bacon (or fried ham cut in pieces for serving) and place one slice on each square of hashed brown potatoes. On this place a perfectly poached egg, and over all pour Hollandaise—which I will repeat just to get you into the habit of making it without misgivings:

Hollandaise Sauce—½ cup butter, 2 egg yolks, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of cayenne, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, ½ cup boiling water. Cream the butter and put 1-3 of it with the yolks, salt, cayenne and lemon juice in a double boiler. Cook slowly until mixture begins to thicken. Add second third of butter and as it thickens the remainder of the butter. Cook very slowly until the mixture will coat a spoon. Add hot water, cook 1 minute, remove from heat immediately, and serve at once.

Jelly Roll or Jelly Cake

Two-third cup sifted cake or all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 eggs, separated, ¾ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cold water, 1 teaspoon finely grated lemond rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 cup red currant jelly. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored; gradually beat in sugar, then water, then lemon juice, then rind. Fold in ½ of the stiffly beaten whites, then gradually fold in the flour mixture, sifting about 3 tablespoons of it at a time over the surface; fold in remaining egg whites last. Turn in greased paper-lined pan 9 x 13 x 1 inches, and bake at exactly 350 deg. Fahr. for about 20 or 25 minutes. Immediately turn onto paper sprinkled with powdered sugar, cutting crisp edges off quickly and remove paper; spread with red currant jelly, beaten enough to spread, roll up quickly wrap in paper or towel and cool. Other jellies or jams may be used, pineapple jam being my second choice.

Buttered Eggs

These are really scrambled or creamy eggs, but one good cook I know adds extra butter, and they are delicious. Melt 4 tablespoons butter in top of double boiler over boiling water and drop in 4 or 6 eggs, add 4 to 6 tablespoons milk and immediately begin to beat with rotary beater, and beat until eggs are softly set, removing from heat as soon as they are cooked enough to serve—salt and pepper may be added during cooking and of course a sprinkling of paprika improves the appearance and flavor when served.

To make a success of a vegetable plate you must have one item at least that has the savory appeal of meat. I tried popovers with canned gravy, and French toast done crisp and brown, with this in mind and think they are both good items for attractive vegetable plates.

Popovers

(With canned brown gravy)

One cup sifted flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, beaten, 1 cup (scant) milk, 1 tablespoon melted shortening. Mix and sift flour and salt. Combine eggs, milk and shortening; gradually add to flour mixture, beating with rotary beater about 1 minute, or until batter is smooth. Fill greased sizzling hot heavy iron muffin tins 1-3 full and bake at 500 deg. Fahr. (very hot) for about 20 minutes; reducing heat then to 350 for about 15 or 20 minutes longer. These may be baked in greased custard cups when they will have shiny crust. These may be used as you would use Yorkshire Pudding with roast beef. Provide plenty of gravy.

French Toast

Most of you know how to make this, but this is a "refresher" recipe.

Two eggs slightly beaten, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1½ teaspoons sugar, 1 cup milk, 6 slices bread, ¾-inch thick, cut in halves, 2 to 6 tablespoons fat. Mix together eggs and salt and sugar and beat well then add milk and mix well. Dip bread into mixture, let soak for 1 minute, then saute in fat over hot fire watching constantly as it will brown quickly with the sugar in it. Bacon drippings make good frying fat for French toast. Train chefs fry French toast in deep fat, and sometimes make it into jelly sandwiches just before serving. The jelly version is a grand "brunch" dish—the plain version makes a nice vegetable plate attraction.

Because of the rice shortage in Japan, beggars in Kumatori receive a ration card instead of the usual rice from the villagers.

NEW COSTUME JEWELRY

By ALICE ALDEN

WE CAN remember way back when the costume jewelry counter was a little space tucked away somewhere in a corner of the store. Now every store has a whole section devoted to costume jewelry, and there are shops that deal entirely in these delightful accessories. American costume jewelry was already on the way up before the present war, thanks to such designers as Clifford Furst of Castlecliff. With a bow to our colorful cousins south of the border, Castlecliff has fashioned El Ranchero a cow-girl necklace composed of strands on strands of tiny beads ending in saddle color leather thongs. It is perfect for filling in a neckline or to liven up a dark frock. The hoop earrings are beautifully fashioned of two-tone gold metal.

Love Can Be Made Into a Permanent Blessing. It Can Be Lasting in Married Life if the Husband and Wife Know When to Overlook Shortcomings in the Other.

A man writes: "In a realistic world, why do people still insist that there is such a thing as permanent love between one man and one woman? It is a beautiful sentiment, originated by the poets, but is has no basis of truth to rest on. Every time we fall in love we imagine that it is real love and that it will last forever. Those are the twin characteristics of the love insanity. But in a year or two we recover from it and note with surprise and consternation that we are legally married. Nature has played her trick of making us believe that a temporary emotion was an eternal passion and the law has sealed it, so there we are. And we might get along fairly well except that presently another charmer comes along and we fall for him or her. As far as I can see, the old notion about there being anything wrong in husbands and wives philandering was cut from the same piece of cloth that long skirts were made of."

To which I might add that, after all, there is something to be said for long skirts, physically and morally. True, they cramp the style of those who long to be free and untrammeled in their movements, but they were warmer and made of better material and lasted longer than the half yard of chiffon out of which modern knee-length skirts are made.

But one can be too cynical as well as too trusting. It is just as foolish to have no faith in the higher nature of our fellow creatures as it is to be a Pollyanna going around proclaiming that every one is an angel in an angelic world. So when you say that there can be no permanent love between a man and a woman you are just as far from the truth as you would be if you contended that every case of calf love is the grand passion.

Love Not Always Fleeting

In the face of divorce statistics one cannot deny that many people who think they are in love diagnose their symptoms incorrectly and mistake a slight rise in temperature as an indication that they have chronic inflammation of the heart.

But that isn't love, it is merely sex attraction, and when that is over they wake up from their little dream of romance and wonder whatever made them think they cared for each other.

Perhaps these little passing loves, this flashy of tinsel in a tin pan that flares up for a minute and then dies down into a pinch of ashes, is all of which the great majority of people are capable. Not every one is endowed by nature with a gift for loving any more than he or she is with a talent for writing, or painting, or singing.

The Cords That Bind

But for all of that, there are great lovers, men and women whose hearts cling to each other and whose affection is as enduring as the eternal rocks. I know many couples like this who have been married 30, 40, 50 years and who are far more devoted to each other, far more necessary to each other's happiness today than they were on their wedding day.

And why shouldn't this be the case? The cord that binds a man and woman together is woven of many strands. Through it must run the red thread of passion, but if that is the only thing that holds them together it will break.

The tie that binds them so closely together that they are literally one is made up of memories that they have shared together, of the battles they have fought out shoulder to shoulder, of the cradles they have bent over and the coffins they have wept over together.

Where Contentment Rules

The passing loves may have their own kick and thrill, but they do not bring the happiness that permanent love does. Look about among your acquaintances. Who are the contented ones, those who got married and stayed married, or those who are always figuring in the divorce courts?

Look at the ravaged face of the woman who has had many lovers and has nothing left after she has gotten too old to attract men. Then look at the serene countenance of the woman whose heart has never wavered away from the husband of her youth.

Whom do you envy: Lothario, who isn't so gay when he is 70, sitting lonely in his room trying to recall the names of the many women he has loved, or Darby with his faithful old Joan at his side?

Oh, yes, there is such a thing as lasting love between men and women. There is a love that can make a perfect companionship between a husband and wife so that they never weary of each other's society, or take note of time or the fading of youth and beauty.

Let us thank God for married love and wish there were more of it.

Montreal Singer 'Jute Box' King

NEW YORK, March 28—(CP) — "The King of the Juke Boxes" is ta", carrot-topped, muscular and appears to be fresh from the farm. But his appearance is deceiving. He's a city boy—born and raised in Montreal.

Dick Todd, young Canadian baritone, is tied with Bing Crosby as the most popular vocalist on nickel-in-the-slot automatic phonographs in a United States poll conducted by Billboard, amusement trade paper.

Todd, who has made more than 200 recordings, began his musical career as a student at McGill University. He formed a small band in which he played trumpet.

When the group left McGill it toured the West Indies and South America for eight months and then spent a year in the Canadian provinces after which it broke up. Todd got a job as vocalist with Larry Clinton's orchestra. A representative of a phonograph company heard him and since then he has specialized in recordings.

He came to the United States in 1939 to work for the phonograph company and his recordings have nearly all been best sellers.

Preparing For "Visitors" In Bonnie Scotland

Up in the north of Scotland where there are vast stretches of moor that might be ideal for the landing of an invading army, borne by air, the home guard is shown preparing for such a contingency. The majority of these home guardsmen are gamekeepers and stalkers who know the countryside as they know the inside of their pockets. This group is springing a trap on an armored car during a manoeuvre.

Lad, 18, Veteran Of Many Battles on World Seas

AN EAST COAST CANADIAN PORT, March 28—The Seven Seas have been his playground. From Zanzibar to 'Rio—from 'Frisco to Liverpool, he has sailed in grimy freighters and stately trim-lined passenger ships.

Into his short life of 18 years have been packed adventure and thrills that rival the fiction creations of a London or a Conrad. His name is Ivor Jackson, British-born son of a seafaring father.

Typical of Britain's merchant seamen is the lanky blue-eyed youngster from across the seas. Soft-spoken, sturdy and poised, young Jackson dismisses any suggestions of heroics with the quiet: "We're only doing our job."

Twice his ship has been machine-gunned and bombed by Axis air raiders. Twice the craft ran the gauntlet of enemy submarines to escape unscathed.

He was an eyewitness to the epic battle of the gallant Jervis Bay who went to her doom running "interference" for a thirty-eight-ship convoy.

Jackson's ship was struck by one shell from the Nazi pocket battleship that sent the Jervis Bay to the bottom. It, however, managed to get out of danger while the armed merchantman steamed toward the foe.

From the deck of his ship he could see the grim outline of the enemy surface raider. He could see flashes from her guns. He and his mates ducked for cover when a shell whistled through the ship's funnel and exploded in the sea yards to starboard.

Wounded at Valencia

War is not new to young Jackson. He received his baptism of fire in civil strife in Spain. His ship was lying at anchor in Valencia when Loyalists planes swooped down to machine-gun ships in the harbor.

"He raked us from bow to stern—our funnel was riddled and bullets gouged holes in the deck," he said. "I was peeling potatoes outside the galley. Before I could rush for cover I was plugged in the left leg. The blighter in the plane riddled my potato pail and spoiled half the spuds.

"Once in the Mediterranean, shortly after war came, three Jerries went after us with machine-guns. Thy didn't do much damage and we were able to bring one down—it was our first bag and the boys sure did celebrate it when we got ashore."

Young Jackson sailed aboard the steamer Patchio as deck boy. That was a few months before his fourteenth birthday and a few weeks after his mother died.

Since then he has circled the world twice. Has worked on six ships of different nationalities and can speak four languages.

Knifed in Port Said

Once he missed ship in an African port. For three months he labored in a gold field before returning to sea.

His visits to far away ports of call in the East brought strange and weird adventures.

Well does he recall a night in a waterfront hostel at Port Said. A half-caste Spaniard slashed at him with a knife. "I would have gotten it for sure that time but for an American sailor who busted the foreigned one on the nose and, I guess, saved my life."

Again in Madagascar did young Jackson brush death when a guardsman fired at him in mistake. "The shot was so close it actually singed the back of my neck."

While ashore in wartime England he had served on night patrol during air raids. "I had a home in Liverpool—my father lived there. One night it was bombed. I guess dad made out all right, but I haven't heard for sure—it has been three months since I've been home."

His sea adventures have not been confined entirely to warfare. Many times has his ship ridden out typhoons in tropic seas. Once it nearly foundered in a terrific North Atlantic gale.

Sailed Around the Horn

One he sailed around the Horn. "I heard stories about that place, and, believe me, I can believe every one of them.

"You know, there are some old fellows going to sea who still believe in the 'Flying Dutchman.' I remember the night we were fighting our way around the Horn when the boys were swapping yarns up fo'ard.

"One old fellow—he was an Irishman, and had been sailing for about fifty years—claimed had had once seen the Dutch ghost ship."

In his sea chest are relics of his wanderings. There are weird shaped pipes from native bazaars in Burma; grotesque heathen idols picked up in Singapore and Pago Pago.

His talisman is a bit of teakwood carved in the shape of a Chinese junk. "An old fellow—he was a Chinese monk or something—gave me that one night in Hong Kong. Did him a bit of a favor and he handed me this, mumbling something in pidgin English about keeping evil spirits away."

While his sea chest is crammed with tangible mementoes, his memory has a store of rich experiences—stories of brave ships and braver men of the British merchant marine!

Stands to Deliver

His views on the war are simple: "Mr. Churchill wants the tools—we can't make them—but we can deliver them.

"Hitler can rant about submarine blockades and air terrorism, but with the British Navy on the job we don't let those things get us down.

"The sea has been my life—my father and his father and grandfather before him have been seafarers—it is my job and I'm only trying, like my shipmates, to do that job.

"Everything I have isn't much, but I like our way of living. I mean to fight for those things, and no German dictator is going to take them away from me."

Pair Of Canadian Tank Men At Camp Borden

The pair of sturdy soldiers shown in the turret of this tank are typical of the men who wrestle the metal monsters over the snows of Camp Borden. "Hell for leather" fighting men from all over Canada and the United States, they eagerly await the day when they will ride for Canada in the "big push."

Police, Picket Blood Runs In Richmond Strike Scrap

RICHMOND, Ind., March 28.—(AP)—Blood ran freely as city police battled about 100 pickets attempting to prevent workmen from entering the Richmond plant of the International Harvester Company this morning. Several policemen and pickets were taken to hospitals with head injuries.

The police, using their night clubs, opened a path for a large number of workers who were invited back to work today by the plant management. The works had been idle since Feb. 17, when the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee (Congress of Industrial Organizations) called a strike.

The pickets, shouting "we will not be moved" and wielding ash clubs, blocked the entrance to the plant as the vanguard of a long line of workers formed four blocks away reached the factory.

The police started to shove them aside and a general free-for-all began. Furious fighting lasted for 10 10 minutes with about six police men holding half of the pickets to one side while the other officers battled back and forth with the remainder. Clubs flew through the air and numerous heads were gashed.

The workers took no part in the melee and steadily pressed into the plant. Police Chief E. H. Duckett estimated about 600 workers got inside and promptly at 9 o'clock (EDT) the whistle blew and the gates were closed.

Buchan's Hero Was Ironside

TORONTO, March 27.—(CP). — The exploits of Richard Hannay, hero of John Buchan's Greenmantle series and "The 39 Steps," were based on the career of Field Marshal Lord Ironside, former chief of the Imperial General Staff, it is revealed in Howard Swiggett's introduction to the last novel by the former governor-general of Canada, "Sick Heart River," published by Musson.

In his introduction Swiggett says that Harold Nicholson, British M.P., wrote in Foreign Affairs last July that the second Lord Tweedsmuir was presented to Lord (then Sir Edmund) Ironside during a review of the 1st Canadian Division at Aldershot. Lord Tweedsmuir at that time told Lord Ironside that Hannay's exploits had been based on the field marshal's career.

A Berlin Claim

BERLIN, Mar. 28—(CP).—Nazi spokesmen claimed to-day that long range bombers sank a 10,000-ton British merchant ship to-day out of a convoy protected by five destroyers, two cruisers, and six patrol boats in the North Atlantic.

They also claimed a British freighter, attacked from the air, was left sinking 250 miles west of the Hebrides, Scotland.

(No confirmation is available from British sources.)

STUCK HIS NECK OUT

ROSE HILL, N.C.—(CP).—Catching a full grown fox attacking her hens an elderly Negro woman dragged the "varmint" to a wood-chopping block and cut of his head with the axe.

Friends drop in? Out comes the card deck and you plunge merrily into the exciting game "Remember."

Each player is given one card and the remainder are spread face down on a table. The object of the game is to get as many pairs as you can, drawing one card at a time.

But here's the trick you need to win! When a player draws a card which won't make a pair he must return it to the table—first showing everybody what it is. And you must REMEMBER where he put the card so you can grab it when you need it to make a pair. A trick that keeps everybody hopping!

Fun, too, for at home" evenings are stunts like "Rising Wrists." Perform a little voodoo on a guest and against his will his wrists start rising, like slowly flapping wings.

Know the stunts and games that make you a popular hostess. Our brand-new 32-page booklet is chockful of good card games, puzzlers, nonsense, games of action and skill, games on paper, for two or more people.

Send [illegible] stamps or coins for your copy of GAMES AND STUNTS FOR TWO OR MORE to the Examiner, Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

BIDDING GUIDES PLAY

YOU WILL play for your contract one way if the opponents have done no bidding at all. If they have done a small amount of bidding, you may alter the normal plan slightly. But if one of them has shown extreme length in some suit or suits, thereby betokening extreme shortness in others, you may adopt a method of play which is almost the reverse of the otherwise normal.

Bidding about like that occurred at still another table of the duplicate game where these cards were dealt. Other tables produced contracts of 4-Hearts by West, who made the grade in each case by about similar methods, but there was a wide divergence in play of the two contracts of 5-Spades by South.

In each case West led the diamond A, ruffed by the spade 2. Also in each case South then led to the club K. Then one declarer went awry. He led the spade Q and sent it through to the singleton K. West returned his diamond 6 to the K, South discarding a heart. Having impoverished the dummy of entries, this South later lost tricks to the spade J and the club Q, so was down two.

The other 5-Spades declarer, after going to dummy with the club 9 to the K on the second trick, led the club 8 and played the 4 on it. West ruffing with his singleton spade K. He returned the diamond 6, the K being ruffed with the spade 5. The heart 3 then was ruffed by the spade 6 and the club 10 finessed. The club A then dropped the Q, and South led his last club, the J, discarding a diamond from North. East could get nothing now except one trick, even ruffing this, so the contract was made.

With South playing the hand at 6-No Trumps, why should East cover the lead of the diamond J with his K midway during the play?

IN MEMORIAM

DECK.—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Robert J. Deck.

I cannot say—and I will not say
That she is dead. She is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land.
And left us dreaming; how very fair
It needs must be, since she lingers there.
And you, oh you, who the wildest yearn,
For the old time step and the glad return.
Think of her faring on, as dear
In the love of There, as the love of Here;
Think of her as the same; I say
She is not dead—she is just away.

—Always fondly remembered by her Husband and loving Family.

MAXWELL.—In loving memory of my dear mother, Eliza A. Maxwell, who passed away one year ago today, March 28, 1940.

One year ago today my dear mother passed away.
I was sad and broken-hearted
As they laid her in her grave;
Her troubles now are over; no pain or sickness there;
She's gone to a better world on high
And left this world of care.

—Ever remembered by her daughter, Elizabeth Montgomery.

that she is the daughter of the governor. He has a genuine fondness for her when she was the brunt of the jibes of Mrs. Smith-Porter, but as the daughter of a celebrity he seems not so sure: In the summing up, however, aPtricia's guile and coyness is altogether too much for a mere man's heart, and it understood that Patricia is successful in her designs, matrimonially, on the youth. Angelina finally falls victim to Bud's undoubted charms, in spite of Minnie Knoop and her intereference.

The performance on Thursday night will be repeated on Friday, and it is expected that those seeking to see it will be many more numerous than was at first anticipated. One of the truly amusing comedies appears on the stage, yet it is one in which the cast is given amply opportunity to demonstrate amazing dramatic ability. Rehearsals must have been regarded with more conscience than is usual, for the quality, from start to finish, is top notch.

happened to Cincinnati's great pitching staff or how the dangerous St. Louis Cardinals were beaten off.

One possible clue to what happened to the Cincinnati pitchers lies in the very fact that the Reds won a record total of 43 games by a single run last season. That means that Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer, and the others were under a terrific strain in nearly every game they pitched.

Such a strain, if continued indefinitely, is bound to take its toll. And there is no reason to believe that the champions will have any more punch this season than they did last.

Brooklyn, on the other hand, is ready to go, stronger at several spots than it was a year ago and brimming with confidence.

Anyhow, a man can dream, can't he?

Dollars To Doughnuts

never thought what marriage meant. Its permanence — the solemnity which Clarence was bringing to it— its nearness. Next week. Only a few days away.

She was frightened. "I can't marry Clarence next week."

The sense of awareness—the feeling of a door having opened for her, this afternoon when she heard that man's voice— and let her look on things that were the same and yet somehow different, came back to her. "Marrying Clarence isn't the answer. I was frightened. He thought, because he does love me, that getting married right away would help. But it won't. This is something else."

Unaccountably, she was trembling again. "I think a girl like that should be quietly and competently chloroformed," that unknown voice had said. Her lips twisted. He could be whimsical about it. "More in sadness than in anger."

She stared out of the window as the car turned into Fifth Avenue. People thronged the sidewalks. Men and women, living lives far different from her own. Men and women who shouldn't be chloroformed. They were useful. She noticed that they bucked a strong wind she could not feel, sheltered here behind the glass of the limousine's windows. It was the sum of the difference between her and them.

She saw a man with a tired, grey face. Engrossed, with a concentration she seldom gave to anything, she tried to read in that lined, anonymous face the riddle of his tiredness. What were his troubles, and what struggles did this man endure? The car moved past him.

Now she saw a woman with hennaed hair and too red lips, in a purple suit. The woman was haggard. Then a girl, smiling to herself. Then a heavy middle-aged woman carrying a Peke. Now a man who walked swiftly, hatless, his lips moving. Talking to himself.

In another moment, her car would be going past Huntington's. The store she knew so little of; and yet the store that made all the difference between herself and these people. She leaned forward. "Turn down to Sixth Avenue, Jenkins."

The sidewalks of Sixth Avenue were thronged, too. Watching with her newly sharp eyes, with the clamoring questions in her mind she had never asked before, Beatrice saw that there was a difference between these people and those on Fifth. These were even more tired. Their faces, unguarded, betrayed more. Their clothes were shabbier. Even her car was out of place on Sixth Avenue, where it had been familiar and unnoticed on Fifth.

At Forty-second street, a policeman held up traffic though the light was green. Beatrice saw a broad wave of people—10 or 12 abreast—in surging ranks that went far up the block—pushing their way from one side of the street to the other. She remembered, then, the subway station at Times Square. That's where they were going. To the subway.

All at once, Beatrice opened the car door. "I'll get out and walk, Jenkins. This is too slow." A curious, baffled restlessness possessed her. "You take the car to the garage. And I won't need you tonight, Jenkins."

The chauffeur turned, surprised in his usually expressionless eyes. "But it's so crowded, Miss Davenport. And it's a long walk east to Park and then over . . ."

"I'm not going directly home, Jenkins."

DO YOU TAKE SALTS?

Here's a pinch that is as good as a pound

Kruschen Salts consist of several important mineral salts blended carefully in exactly the right proportions. These salts are highly refined and their quality is the highest obtainable anywhere in the world. Maybe we sacrifice something by giving you the pure mineral salts without adding any flavouring ingredients, but we believe you prefer to have your medicine concentrated in small, compact and easily absorbed doses. That's why you only need take enough Kruschen to cover a dime. It's the economical way of taking salts, too.

Another thing to remember about Kruschen—it doesn't achieve its result by irritating or inflaming the colon. It attracts to the colon the moisture which is absolutely essential if you wish to avoid constipation and achieve easy evacuation. You can get Kruschen from all druggists, 75c and 25c.

C.I.O. Stage Protest March In Chicago

With police standing on guard, the C.I.O. stages a protest march at the huge plant of the McCormick International Harvester Co. in Chicago, Ill., after more than 3,000 men, most of whom, it was said, are members of a newly-formed American Federation of Labor union went back to work. The Harvester plant, which has orders for equipment for the national defence program, had been idle since the C.I.O. Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing committee called a strike on February 28.

Stand Of Eire Under Fire At The Seymour West Women's Institute Meeting

CAMPBELLFORD, March 28.—(ENS)—A donation of $15 to the British War Victims' Fund was announced at this month's meeting of the Seymour West Women's Institute which was held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Dunham. The meeting was featured by an address by Mrs. Douglas Rutherford on Ireland and the Present World Crisis. Several thank you letters were read by the secretary and a vote of thanks was extended to ladies who had donated lining batts and tops for quilts. Among those whose names were read were: Mrs. Thomas Dunham, Mrs. George Longmuir, Mrs. Roy McCulloch, Mrs. C. Morrow, Mrs. Reginald McCulloch, Mrs. Robert McCulloch, Mrs. Douglas Rutherford, Mrs. Fred McCulloch, Mrs. Fred Rutherford, Mrs. James Clark, Mrs. A. Green, Mrs. P. Wood, Mrs. M. Blakely, Mrs. G. V. Orser, Mrs. George Nelson, Mrs. G. Curle, Mrs. James Waters, Mrs. E. Stillman, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. D. Lynch, Mrs. George Brown, Mrs. J. Brown.

Another interesting feature of the meeting was a keenly contested debate "Resolved that a man would rather have a tidy ill-natured wife than an untidy, good-natured one." The affirmative side which was awarded the decision was upheld by Mrs. Reg. McCulloch and Mrs. Gordon McCulolch and the negative by Mrs. Cecil McCulloch and Mrs. Fred McCulloch.

A report of recent contributions to the Campbellford branch of the Red Cross disclosed nine quilts, two turtle neck sweaters and thirteen pairs of sox had been handed in. In addition to this one quilt was given to the Salvation Army.

To Elect Officers

At their next meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Howard Clark, the Institute will have their annual election of officers and outline their program for the year which is already being prepared by the committee in charge.

In her remarks on Ireland and the present world crisis Mrs. Rutherford condemned the neutral course taken by that country declaring she had chosen her path at a vital time in the world's history.

She began by stating there were three or four different things particularly associated with the Emerald Isle—the harp and its beautiful music—the beautiful lakes of Killarney—the River Shannon and the age old legend of St. Patrick.

"In recent years Ireland has been a place of discontent, of continual wrangling with the Mother Country over home rule. At last in 1922 after almost a year of civil war Ireland was made a dominion similar to the government of Canada, South Africa and Australia. But this did not satisfy the Irish and in recent years they have broken completely away from the Empire, they have dropped the name of Irish Free State for the new name of Eire, and the less Eire has to do with the British Government, it seems, the better the people of Eire are pleased.

"Ireland could not actually have picked a worse time in the world's history to break away from the Empire. With the Empire fighting a life and death struggle with Hitler all the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations are rallying to the suport of the Mother Country.

But not so Eire! Eire so far in the war has stuck to a strictly neutral course. As if any country can ever hope to be neutral in a war being waged by a blood-thirsty, utterly merciless enemy like Nazi Germany.

Needs Irish Ports

Now the trouble facing Britain at the present time is a problem of distance. She had the use of French and Irish ports during the Great War, now she can use neither. Her destroyers must operate from the home ports of England, Scotland and Wales. If Eire would only allow the British navy to use the ports along her coasts the British would be in a much better position to fight this menace from the sea.

"Let us hope that President De Valera will soon see his way clear to allow the Royal Navy to use the Irish ports in their fight against this enemy who has no pity on any foe either large or small. The Irish have the chance of their lifetime to help in stamping out the worst threat to civilization since the days of Napoleon. The Irish can be a big help to the democracies but so far all they have done toward this end is nothing. Will the Irish change their minds in time? Time alone will answer this question."

Farmers Warned Western Grain Is Not For Seed

Farmers are advised not to use for seed this season the feed grain recently brought from the west under the freight-far subsidy jointly by the federal and provincial governments.

Frank C. Paterson, agricultural representative, had already mentioned this recommendation to an Examiner reporter this morning when Pat O'Keefe of the seeds branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture arrived in the office from sealing Harry Blewett's Cartier oats which are being sold out of the district.

"I don't think there is much likelihood of farmers using the western oats and barley for seed purposes," Mr. Paterson had said, "but there might be some who would be inclined to take a chance. We have a lot of first class seed in our own district, still in the hands of the producers who grew it. And our dealers are also well stocked and prices are favorable to the buyer.

Our Crop Improvement Association has been doing a great deal of seed testing during the last five or six years. They have made certain observations and know whereof they speak. Erban oats have been found especially suitable to this area. They are notably leaf rust resistant. There are also Cartier and Vanguard to mention two others, and in barley there has been a great deal of satisfaction with O.A.C. 21 and Nobarb."

Mr. Paterson said he had heard of one lot of western oats, the Victory variety, which had been brought into Peterborough definitely for seed purposes, and regarded it in a different category.

"The point I would like to make is that we have probably all the seed we need, and it should be a good idea to get it moving right away. There is a supply list in our own office."

Mr. O'Keefe referred to some returns in Darlington township and near Picton last year that ran to one hundred bushels to the acre as compared with others of fifty bushels.

"Our farmers should be aiming to get the maximum production per acre this season," he added. "That calls for good cultivation and sowing seed that has proved to be a high yielder in this district. Make sure you get true varieties. There seems to be more leaf rust in this section, and the Erban appears to be the oat that is most resistant to the leaf disease."

Examiner Taken By 32 Of 39 Homes In Trent

TRENT RIVER, March 28.—(ENS).—During the winter and spring months there are practically 39 homes occupied in the immediate vicinity of Trent River, Ont. Of that number there are 32 Examiner subscribers, the greatest number there has ever been for this hamlet, while along the Havelock Road, the Examiner goes into nearly every home. "Billie" Pollock, the Examiner carrier, proves faithful with his task and makes the delivery as promptly as possible. All through the severe winter weather "Billie" failed to make his rounds but once and then not through any fault of his as the papers failed to arrive.

Busy Knitters.

Members of the war service workers who can well be termed the "faithful few" have proved their metal during the winter months, working weekly at their rooms, generously given over to by Mrs. Nellie Ward for this worthy cause.

Ways and means of raising money to carry on had to be planned, progressive euchres, were held weekly, which proved successful projects. A fee of 15c (including lunch) was charged with the result of from $6 up to $8 being collected each week. The bingo held this Tuesday night was a new venture and the 'try out' proved most satisfactory. Members of the war service workers are grateful to those who have not joined with them for weekly work but have contributed their efforts to knitting at home.

There has been no expense in connection with the heating of the work rooms as donations of wood have been generously contributed by Messrs. Carl Nixon and Joseph McNeely.

Mrs. Walter Berg, formerly Fern Longmuir, returns to Detroit this week after spending a few weeks at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Longmuir.

Mrs. Sherman Whitney of Caddock, Sask., who has been a visitor in this vicinity with friends, is now with her sister, Mrs. Bert Weese of Dummer.

Game Warden Minaker, for Northumberland, of Colborne, was a visitor here Wednesday, and gave notification that the trapping season for this vicinity opens Saturday, March 29.

The highway from Campbellford to Havelock is bare and in good condition for traffic.

Miss B. G. French visited the Red Cross rooms at Campbellford Tuesday, the day of the Red Cross weekly meeting and was advised by those in charge that the most necessary articles wanted at present are turtle neck, long sleeve sweaters, helmets of navy bue, mitts and seaman's socks, the two latter to be knitted much looser and larger than formerly, as for the mitts with 48 stitches (16 on each needle as given in leaflet of directions) have proven too small. When wet they shrink and are useless.

Better Food Habits

CHICAGO, March 28—(AP).—A national nutrition congress is being planned to improve American food habits for the sake of national defence. The assembly will consist of invited representatives of professional and technical groups, it is announced in "War Medicine," published by the American Medical Association. It will mark the beginning of a campaign to build up men by educating the public to select the best foods.

Signing Aid Bill

Vice-President Henry A. Wallace places his signature on the $7,000,000,000 British-aid bill, that passed in the U.S. Senate by an approval of 67-to-9 vote. The bill will be flown to President Roosevelt, now in southern waters, for his signature.
